Belvedere Drug Sweep Nets Two

A large old house on Belvedere's luxurious Corinthian Island was raided yesterday, two men arrested and drugs, including a large amount of suspected hashish oil seized, according to police.

State and federal narcotics agents and Belvedere and Tiburon police — armed with a search warrant — went to the residence at 71 Bellevue Avenue at about 4:30 p.m.

There they arrested William Reid Lane, 28, who said he lived there. Later, agents arrested another man, Robert Lee Burton, 27, of 137 Aspen Avenue, Bolinas, who reportedly had left the house, as he was driving on Tiburon Boulevard near Highway 101.

A third person, Stephen Mallon Royce, 36, of 569 Marin Avenue, Tamalpais Valley, arrested later in the evening, was reportedly linked to the same case.

Police said that the raid followed about four days' of surveillance of the Belvedere house in connection with drug sales in the Tiburon area.

In the house, along with the suspected hashish oil, were small amounts of suspected cocaine and marijuana, according to officers.

Lane was booked into Marin County Jail on suspicion of possessing narcotics and marijuana for sale, selling cocaine and possessing a silencer for a gun.

Burton was booked for investigation of selling cocaine.

Both posted $10,000 bail and are to appear in municipal court Wednesday.

Royce, also booked on suspicion of cocaine sales, posted $3,000 bail, to appear in court the same day.

Details of the events that led to the booking charges were not available today from state agents, who reportedly led the raid.

County Hit By Second Rabies Suit

A second $1 million claim has been filed against Marin County for failing to diagnose rabies in a prized Arabian stallion at the Mar-Ghi Ranch in Nicasio.

The action was filed yesterday by Mario and Eva Ghilotti, owners of the ranch, who — along with several others — were exposed to the dread disease before the animal was destroyed in May.

The document contends that the county "negligently failed to conduct the necessary and proper tests" when it tested the horse's brain with negative results.

As a result, the Ghilottis claim they did not receive timely treatment for their exposure to the disease.

A nearly identical claim was filed against the state, according to their attorney, James F. Boccardo of San Jose.

It was the second lawsuit filed this week arising out of the Nicasio rabies case. On Thursday, Madeleine and Norman Kreuter of Forest Knolls filed a similar claim.

As previously reported, the Ghilotti's prized stallion, Co-Pilot, was destroyed May 20 after it had bitten Mrs. Ghilotti. Its brain was sent to the state pathology laboratory in Petaluma for dissection.

A portion of the brain was sent to the Marin County Health Lab, where it was tested for rabies.

The county lab reported its test indicated the horse was not rabid and those who had been in contact with the sick stallion decided to forego antirabies treatment.

Six weeks later, a second Ghilotti horse became ill in Willits and this time rabies was confirmed. A retest of the stallion's brain by the state virus lab in Berkeley proved positive.

The Ghilotti claim asks $500,000 apiece in general damages and leaves open an additional amount for medical care.

Their attorney said he will start legal action if the claims are not honored by the state and county. Such claims usually are rejected routinely.

Ervin Committee Seeking 'Perfect' Case For Tapes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Watergate committee is consulting with two of the nation's top constitutional lawyers in an effort to write a "perfect" case against President Nixon's refusal to turn over Watergate related tapes of his White House conversations.

The committee will move in U.S. District Court next week in a historic constitutional challenge to compel the White House to give up the tapes, picked up by electronic surveillance equipment Nixon had installed in his offices and on his telephones.

Special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox has already filed a similar court action before Chief Judge John J. Sirica. White House lawyers must show cause in court Aug. 7 why the tapes should not be turned over.

Chief committee counsel Samuel L. Dash, and Chairman Sam Ervin Jr., met Friday night with Prof. Alexander M. Bickel, 48, of Yale, who argued the Pentagon Papers case in the Supreme Court, and Philip B. Kurland, 51, of the University of Chicago, who argued the Richmond school desegregation case.

Ervin, a former North Carolina Supreme Court Judge, and Dash, a Georgetown University law professor, are themselves considered good constitutional lawyers.

Dash would not comment on the subject of the conference. Earlier he had said the committee wanted to draft a "perfect" legal case that could not be challenged on technical grounds.

The case will probably ultimately be settled in the Supreme Court, which has never directly ruled on such a specific challenge to the doctrine of separation of powers.

Nixon argues that this doctrine—that the executive, legislative and judicial branches of government each have their own historic powers—prevents him from turning over the tapes of his conversations. Ervin has said that the right of the executive branch to secrecy —so-called "executive privilege" —does not apply to political campaigns or the possible commission of criminal acts, and therefore the material must be produced.

Cox told a news conference he was confident Nixon would surrender the tapes if he is ordered to do so by the Supreme Court. The prosecutor added that he could not envision any circumstances in which the high court would not make a definitive judgment in the case, if called on to do so.

Cox said he was acting as "an arm of the grand jury" in the court action, and not as a part of the executive branch of government.

"I intend to push forward in the courts rigorously," Cox said. The tapes are "highly relevant" he said for determining not only whether the President was involved personally in the Watergate planning and cover-up, but also to what extent his aides were involved.

In addition Cox said he wants to hear the tapes to determine if White House aides committed perjury in previous testimony before the grand jury.

Astronauts Pursue Skylab Rendezvous

Successful Launching Begins 59-Day Flight

HOUSTON (UPI) — The second Skylab crew rocketed from earth this morning and chased America's big orbiting lab around the globe in the first stage of man's longest space adventure.

Navy Capt. Alan L. Bean fired the Apollo ferry ship's engines several times to get in the same orbit with Skylab 270 miles above earth. Bean and his crew were set to board Skylab for 59 days to study the sun, stars, earth and man himself.

With Bean, fourth man to walk the moon, were rookies Owen K. Garriott, a civilian scientist-astronaut, and Marine Maj. Jack R. Lousma. Their blastoff from Cape Kennedy at 7:11 a.m. EDT atop a 22-story tall Saturn 1B rocket was flawless.

Their Apollo, crammed with repair gear and a menagerie of spiders, mice, minnows and gnats, zipped through space at more than 17,000 miles an hour in an eight-hour flight to the space lab.

As they pursued Skylab, the pilots encountered trouble with a propellant leak from one of the four control rocket units on the side of Apollo. But ground controllers gave them a "go" for the rendezvous with the orbiting space station.

"It looks like you're driving through a snowstorm real fast," Lousma said, referring to a stream of particles from the control rocket system.

The astronauts turned the leaking unit off and the particles stopped. Ground controllers studied the problem and decided against trying to correct it during the rendezvous sequence to avoid triggering other problems that could interfere with the docking.

The space station has been vacant since June 22 when Skylab 1 astronauts Charles "Pete" Conrad, Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz left it after spending a record 28 days in orbit. They reported then they left the orbiting "penthouse" in good shape for Bean, Garriott and Lousma.

The Skylab 2 astronauts planned to spend much of tomorrow turning on Skylab's various systems and readying the lab for the two month visit.

Bean, Garriott and Lousma carried a record load of cargo up to the space station, including a sun awning they plan to raise during a spacewalk Tuesday, and six spare gyroscopes for use as possible replacements for Skylab's ailing position control system.

The "We-Fix-Anything" Skylab 1 pilots corrected Skylab's early problems in late May and early June by raising a parasol over the lab and walking in space to free a jammed solar power generating wing.

The Apollo, weighing 13,410 pounds with its heavy cargo, blasted away from Cape Kennedy after the smoothest countdown ever. The bright orange plume of flame spread across the launch pad as the craft, only 90 pounds under the safety limit, streaked across the Atlantic Ocean and into an orbit more than 100 miles below Skylab.

The Skylab 2 crewmen began their long series of maneuvers leading to the rendezvous with the 86-ton space station by firing Apollo's main rocket engine at 9:26 a.m. EDT.

"That thing gives you a nice kick," Bean said after the engine was fired a second time two hours later.

The three astronauts had the most varied reseach plan ever assigned to spacemen. Their primary objective is to see how well the human body can withstand long exposure to weightlessness and how space research can help man on earth.

Senate Imposes Donations Limit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate today voted to impose a limit of $25,000 on the amount an individual can contribute to political campaigns in any one year.

Cracking down even harder on "fat cat" contributors, the Senate, by voice vote, adopted the amendment setting a $25,000 ceiling to round out a comprehensive package of restrictions on presidential and congressional campaign contributions.

The amendment offered by Sens. Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill., and Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., was attached to a campaign reform measure which provided an overall ceiling on donations of $100,000 by a family —husband, wife, and minor children.

Under the Mathias-Stevenson substitute a husband, wife, and each child could give $25,000 a year but a father could not make a contribution on behalf of a minor child.

The Senate yesterday rejected, 55-33, an amendment by Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., which would have limited contributions to $1,000 to a candidate with an overall ceiling of $15,000.

The bill, expected to pass late today or early next week, also includes ceilings on spending by candidates at the rate of 20 cents per eligible voter in the general election and 15 cents in the primaries.

It would also create a seven-member independent Federal Election Commission, with the Comptroller General as a member, to oversee the reforms.

The Senate yesterday adopted by voice vote a $50 limit on contributions in cash and heavy criminal penalties for illegal diversion of campaign funds.

The penalty provision, offered by Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., would impose a maximum of 10 years in jail and a $25,000 fine for any candidate or aide to embezzle campaign funds, convert them to his own use, pay them to defendants in criminal cases, or hide them.

Bomb Halt Injunction Is Delayed

NEW YORK (UPI) — A three-judge federal appeals panel yesterday, five hours before the U.S. government was under a lower court order to stop bombing of Cambodia, granted a stay of the order.

The appeals court set a hearing on the case for Aug. 13, two days before bombing in the Southeast Asian nation is supposed to stop under an agreement between the administration and Congress.

Burt Neuborne, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer representing five plaintiffs who brought suit against the government, said he would immediately ask the U.S. Supreme Court to vacate the stay.

Appeals Court Judge Wilfred Feinberg, speaking for the panel which heard an hour of arguments, said the government "met the traditional test for granting a stay."

On Wednesday, Judge Orrin Judd of Brooklyn federal court ruled that U.S. military operations in Cambodia were unconstitutional and unlawful. He issued an injunction against the Defense Department and the Air Force barring the activities, but stayed the injunction until Friday to give the government time to appeal.

James D. Porter Jr., chief of the civil division in the Federal Court Eastern Division, said Judd's decision was erroneous because money to "fund the bombing has continued to flow from Congress."

Coast Guard Man Killed In Car Crash

A 20-year-old Coast Guardsman was killed last night in an accident near Petaluma when his car ran off the road on a curve and he was thrown from the auto.

The dead youth was identified as Charles N. Porter, who was stationed at the Two Rock Coast Guard Training Center near Petaluma.

California Highway Patrol officers, said Porter's car was southbound at a high rate of speed on Manor Lane near Adobe Road at about 8 p.m. They said Porter missed a curve and his car skidded, taking out 50 feet of barbed wire and 10 steel posts as it left the roadway.

Belvedere Drug Sweep Nets Two

A large old house on Belvedere's luxurious Corinthian Island was raided yesterday, two men arrested and drugs, including a large amount of suspected hashish oil seized, according to police.

State and federal narcotics agents and Belvedere and Tiburon police — armed with a search warrant — went to the residence at 71 Bellevue Avenue at about 4:30 p.m.

There they arrested William Reid Lane, 28, who said he lived there. Later, agents arrested another man, Robert Lee Burton, 27, of 137 Aspen Avenue, Bolinas, who reportedly had left the house, as he was driving on Tiburon Boulevard near Highway 101.

A third person, Stephen Mallon Royce, 36, of 569 Marin Avenue, Tamalpais Valley, arrested later in the evening, was reportedly linked to the same case.

Police said that the raid followed about four days' of surveillance of the Belvedere house in connection with drug sales in the Tiburon area.

In the house, along with the suspected hashish oil, were small amounts of suspected cocaine and marijuana, according to officers.

Lane was booked into Marin County Jail on suspicion of possessing narcotics and marijuana for sale, selling cocaine and possessing a silencer for a gun.

Burton was booked for investigation of selling cocaine.

Both posted $10,000 bail and are to appear in municipal court Wednesday.

Royce, also booked on suspicion of cocaine sales, posted $3,000 bail, to appear in court the same day.

Details of the events that led to the booking charges were not available today from state agents, who reportedly led the raid.

County Hit By Second Rabies Suit

A second $1 million claim has been filed against Marin County for failing to diagnose rabies in a prized Arabian stallion at the Mar-Ghi Ranch in Nicasio.

The action was filed yesterday by Mario and Eva Ghilotti, owners of the ranch, who — along with several others — were exposed to the dread disease before the animal was destroyed in May.

A nearly identical claim was filed against the state, according to their attorney, James F. Boccardo of San Jose.

It was the second lawsuit filed this week arising out of the Nicasio rabies case. On Thursday, Madeleine and Norman Kreuter of Forest Knolls filed a similar claim.

As previously reported, the Ghilotti's prized stallion, Co-Pilot, was destroyed May 20 after it had bitten Mrs. Ghilotti. Its brain was sent to the state pathology laboratory in Petaluma for dissection.

A portion of the brain was sent to the Marin County Health Lab, where it was tested for rabies.

Their attorney said he will start legal action if the claims are not honored by the state and county. Such claims usually are rejected routinely.

Ervin Committee Seeking 'Perfect' Case For Tapes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Watergate committee is consulting with two of the nation's top constitutional lawyers in an effort to write a "perfect" case against President Nixon's refusal to turn over Watergate related tapes of his White House conversations.

The committee will move in U.S. District Court next week in a historic constitutional challenge to compel the White House to give up the tapes, picked up by electronic surveillance equipment Nixon had installed in his offices and on his telephones.

Special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox has already filed a similar court action before Chief Judge John J. Sirica. White House lawyers must show cause in court Aug. 7 why the tapes should not be turned over.

Chief committee counsel Samuel L. Dash, and Chairman Sam Ervin Jr., met Friday night with Prof. Alexander M. Bickel, 48, of Yale, who argued the Pentagon Papers case in the Supreme Court, and Philip B. Kurland, 51, of the University of Chicago, who argued the Richmond school desegregation case.

Ervin, a former North Carolina Supreme Court Judge, and Dash, a Georgetown University law professor, are themselves considered good constitutional lawyers.

Dash would not comment on the subject of the conference. Earlier he had said the committee wanted to draft a "perfect" legal case that could not be challenged on technical grounds.

The case will probably ultimately be settled in the Supreme Court, which has never directly ruled on such a specific challenge to the doctrine of separation of powers.

Nixon argues that this doctrine—that the executive, legislative and judicial branches of government each have their own historic powers—prevents him from turning over the tapes of his conversations. Ervin has said that the right of the executive branch to secrecy —so-called "executive privilege" —does not apply to political campaigns or the possible commission of criminal acts, and therefore the material must be produced.

Cox told a news conference he was confident Nixon would surrender the tapes if he is ordered to do so by the Supreme Court. The prosecutor added that he could not envision any circumstances in which the high court would not make a definitive judgment in the case, if called on to do so.

Cox said he was acting as "an arm of the grand jury" in the court action, and not as a part of the executive branch of government.

"I intend to push forward in the courts rigorously," Cox said. The tapes are "highly relevant" he said for determining not only whether the President was involved personally in the Watergate planning and cover-up, but also to what extent his aides were involved.

In addition Cox said he wants to hear the tapes to determine if White House aides committed perjury in previous testimony before the grand jury.

Police said no arrests had been made.

Marcos Winning

MANILA (UPI) — A two-day Philippines national referendum ended today with all signs pointing toward a landslide vote in favor of indefinite rule by the martial law regime of President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

About 84 per cent of the votes counted said yes to the question of whether the 55-year-old Marcos should continue in office past the December, 1973, expiration date of his regular presidential term.

India Talks

ISLAMABAD, Pkistan (UPI) — Indian and Pakistani negotiators held a fourth round of talks today on problems on the subcontinent that included prisoners captured during the 1971 war.

Leaders of both sides smiled as they left the conference room at the Foreign Office, indicating the negotiations, which began Tuesday, had gone well.

Booby Trap

BELFAST (UPI) — Four soldiers were injured today when a booby trap exploded in a house in the Roman Catholic Bogside district of Londonderry, the British army said.

None of the soldiers was seriously injured in the blast, which came as they carried out a routine search of houses in the former "no-go" area cleared by troops in a sweep a year ago.

Cypriot Kidnap

NICOSIA, Cyprus (UPI) — The Cypriot minister of justice was kidnapped today only hours after a series of bombings and explosions hit Nicosia and the southern city of Limassol, the government said.

A government statement said Justice Minister Christakis Vakis was kidnapped in the early morning hours but gave no other details.

Police reported 34 explosions and bombings throughout the night in Nicosia and Limassol, about 30 miles south of the Cypriot capital almost on the coast of this Mediterranean Sea island.

Troop Cut Vote

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Armed Services Committee has voted to cut U.S. troop strength at home and abroad by 7 per cent, for a saving estimated by acting chairman Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., at $1.6 billion in the next budget.

The committee voted 11-0 yesterday to set a ceiling of 2,076,800 on active duty U.S. forces June 30, 1974. The Pentagon wanted 2,232,900. The House Armed Services Committee has recommended a smaller cutback — to 2,219,895.

Prisoners Riot

ROME (UPI) — Inmates demanding penal code reforms today held two guards hostage and set fires throughout Rome's Queen of Heaven prison.

The inmates, who spent the night on a rampaging battle with police, held signs from the roof saying: "Clowns, give us the codes," and made a racket by pounding on plates.

The prisoners refused to talk or negotiate with prison officials and demanded to see Justice Minister Mario Zagari, who was out of town.

Traffic Snarl

ROME (UPI) — Drivers were angry, policemen went through a slow burn, but the pedestrians were highly pleased.

These were some of the reactions today when the first phase of a seven-stage plan to shut off most of ancient downtown Rome to traffic went into effect.

Roadblocks were erected at some of the city's most traveled streets by midday, causing bedlam and confusion among motorists.

Dozens of drivers who found themselves at dead end streets which until today had been main arteries through the area caused big jams as they had to turn around or back out.

CHARITABLE STRANGER WAS HONEST

SOUTH SHIELDS, England (UPI) — A man gave away 10 and five pound notes ($25 and $12.50) to strangers in the street, and so surpsied five lucky people that they went to the police.

Police suspected the man might be the thief who stole $7,500 in 10 pound and five pound notes from a house in the town.

But the man showed up at the police station to explain his good deed.

"Their benefactor, who wants to stay anonymous, said he had a good win on the horses and wanted people to share his good fortune," a police spokesman said yesterday.

France Readies New Bomb Test

PAPEETE, Tahiti (UPI) — Scientists today readied a yellow balloon, reportedly carrying a hydrogen bomb, for the second blast in France's controversial 1973 nuclear test program in the Pacific.

The Paris newspaper L'Humanite said today the balloon was launched over the French nuclear testing site Friday on Mururoa Atoll, 720 miles southeast of Tahiti.

But the L'Humanite report conflicted with word from the New Zealand defense ministry, which said the scientists had only inflated the balloon—not launched it.

Paris news reports said the explosion would be much larger than the first one, set off last Saturday. New Zealand observers put that one in the five-kiloton category and said it probably involved only a fission trigger to detonate the H-bomb.

The next test, they said, would be in the one-megaton range—equivalent to one million tons of TNT and 50 times more powerful than the bomb the United States dropped on Hiroshima at the close of World War II.

The New Zealand defense ministry announcement that the baloon had not been launched quoted radio reports from the New Zealand navy protest ship Canterbury. The Canterbury has been patroling the waters off Mururoa for several days since taking over the government's protest action from the frigate Otago, which was sailing off the test site when the first blast was set off.

New Zealand, several other nations and independent groups —including the crew of the Sausalito, Calif., yacht Fri— have been protesting the French tests because of the danger of nuclear fallout. American David Moodie, 28, skipper of the Fri, his wife, Emma Young, and the vessel's other three crew members—a New Zealander, his pregnant wife and a Frenchman—were towed away from Mururoa by French naval authorities shortly before the first explosion. They are in Papeete, where they refused Friday to sign deportation documents, claiming they were forcibly removed from the danger zone.

"A large yellow balloon used for nuclear testing was raised yesterday (Friday) over Mururoa Atoll," L'Humanite said. "The second test in the present series will probably be held Saturday. Weather conditions (Friday) were not favorable and wind in the area has been blowing strongly."

Communists Inching Close To Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — U.S. warplanes blasted Phnom Penh's threatened defense perimeter today and fierce fighting broke out less than five miles from the heart of the capital, surrounded by an estimated 20,000 rebel troops. As the Communists inched closer to the city, the government stepped up emergency recruiting efforts it began Friday. Sound trucks cruised the streets broadcasting appeals for volunteers to defend the capital and the army chief of staff predicted rebel shellings and infiltration of Phnom Penh by insurgent commando teams.

Elsewhere, field reports said two battalions of government troops evacuated the strategic town of Saang 15 miles southeast of Phnom Penh Friday night. American warplanes, including B52s, flew intensive air strikes just to the west of Saang early today.

The rumble of American bombing echoed throughout Phnom Penh as B52 bombers, F111 and F4 Phantom jet fighter-bombers struck on all sides of the besieged city. Heavy B52 raids hit along the southern defense perimeter, where government troops have been fighting off a rebel advance for days.

Military sources said a captured Communist field commander told his interrogators about 2,000 more rebel troops were moving toward the city to reinforce those already on its outskirts. The prisoner said the reinforcements included 200 North Vietnamese troops and 400 Viet Cong from South Vietnam.

More Asian Spy Deaths Reported

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A search of records on U.S. operations in Cambodia and Laos has turned up 22 more deaths of military spies than were reported earlier in the week, the Pentagon said Friday.

Their deaths in Cambodia and Laos from 1965 through the end of U.S. ground operations in Indochina last fall, raised to 103 the total number of spies killed in the two countries.

Most of the agents, on missions so secret that the Pentagon lied to their families about where the men died, were Army Green Berets, although some were from other services, said Deputy Defense Secretary William P. Clements.

Phony records about the unacknowledged bombing of Cambodia for 14 months beginning in March of 1969 and about the spying were submitted to the Senate Armed Services committee, which is now investigating the cover-up.

When the Pentagon first admitted the spying operations Tuesday, officials said only 81 men were killed. But Clements said Friday one name was inadvertantly left off the list and 21 were discovered during a more thorough search of the records.

He said the men's families had been told the deaths were in South Vietnam.

Clements said 26 agents were killed in Laos and 27 in Cambodia.

The families are being told of the true circumstances, officials said, but the names won't be released to the public until the records are searched completely.

Bank Moves To Shore Up Weak Pound

LONDON (UPI) — The Bank of England raised its minimum lending rate to the highest level in history yesterday and intervened in the market to bolster the weakened British pound. The dollar, meanwhile, gained across Europe.

The financial moves by the Bank of England included a 2.5 per cent boost in the minimum lending rate, the new form of the bank rate. It raised the lending rate to an all-time record level of 11.5 per cent in a bid to check inflation at home. Inflation tends to weaken a currency.

The previous record Bank of England rate was 10 per cent, reached briefly in 1914 at the outbreak of World War I. In the past two weeks the lending rate has gone up by 4 per cent.

The bank also reinforced the lending rate increase by heavily buying pounds in the market. After drifting down to $2.4725, its lowest level since May, the pound sterling moved up to close at $2.5085, compared with the close Thursday of $2.4845.

Gold suffered reverses on European bullion markets.

The West German Central Bank stepped into the money market again Friday to buy dollars. It bought $14 million in a support move for the American currency.

In what dealers described as "almost non-existent dealings" typical of a Friday, the dollar closed at 2.3030 marks, almost unchanged from its 2.3032 close the day before.

The dollar climbed in Paris to 4.105 francs for the financial dollar tourists use, compared with Thursday's close of 4.05 francs. In Zurich, the American currency rose to 2.8050 Swiss francs, up from 2.7895 Thursday.

The dollar also rose in the three Scandinavian markets, in Brussels and in Amsterdam.

Vietnam Fighting Is Fiercest Ever

SAIGON (UPI) — Exactly six months since a cease-fire officially ended the Vietnam war, the Saigon command today reported the bitterest fighting since the truce began.

Both the South Vietnamese government and the Communists marked the anniversary of the truce by trading angry charges of continued violations of both the letter and spirit of the four-nation cease-fire agreement.

The North Vietnamese, meanwhile, accused the United States of violating the ceasefire because it had not removed mines from the Gulf of Tonkin. A spokesman said however that all mines had been removed from shipping corridors into North Vietnamese ports.

North and South Vietnamese regulars battled about 30 miles northeast of Saigon near Phu Giao. The Saigon command reported 216 Communists and 15 government troopers killed and 45 government soldiers wounded in three consecutive days of bloody fighting.

Sr. Col. Vo Dong Giang, deputy chief of the Viet Cong delegation to the Joint Military Commission, charged that in the fighting southwest of Phu Giao the government troops were attempting to take over Interprovincial Highway 14 "for their exclusive use."

Military sources said at least a regiment of the government's 18th Infantry Division was battling an equivalent force of North Vietnamese near Phu Giao.

Viet reported 106 truce violations in the 24 hours ending at noon today, 25 fewer than in the previous 24 hours, but the second highest total since June 17.

Since the Jan. 28 cease-fire, the government charged the Communists with 20,056 violations of the truce. The Communists charged today the government has violated the truce at least 144,000 times since Jan. 28.

Searcher Thinks Some GIs Are Still Prisoners

BANGKOK (UPI) — The leader of a U.S. delegation searching for American servicemen missing in Indochina said today she is convinced by talks with Communist officials that some GIs could still be in captivity in South Vietnam.

Mrs. Gloria Coppin of Los Angeles, national chairman of Voices in Vital America (VIVA), said Viet Cong officials she spoke to in Saigon outlined conditions to her group that made it possible U.S. prisoners were still being held.

"I think there is a possibility some men are alive—not many, probably—but some," Mrs. Coppin said.

At the same time, however, Mrs. Coppin told UPI that meetings with North Vietnamese officials in Saigon had prompted her group to abandon plans to seek entry to North Vietnam.

She said the North Vietnamese were adamant in their denial that they held any more American prisoners. "I think there is a hard line there that is not going to be broken....I don't see any point in going to Hanoi. I don't think we'd even be let in."

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Assassins Sought

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — A special team of military and police intelligence experts formed by President Salvador Allende today began investigating the terrorist assassination of his naval attache, Capt. Arturo Araya.

Police said no arrests had been made.

Marcos Winning

MANILA (UPI) — A two-day Philippines national referendum ended today with all signs pointing toward a landslide vote in favor of indefinite rule by the martial law regime of President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

About 84 per cent of the votes counted said yes to the question of whether the 55-year-old Marcos should continue in office past the December, 1973, expiration date of his regular presidential term.

India Talks

ISLAMABAD, Pkistan (UPI) — Indian and Pakistani negotiators held a fourth round of talks today on problems on the subcontinent that included prisoners captured during the 1971 war.

Leaders of both sides smiled as they left the conference room at the Foreign Office, indicating the negotiations, which began Tuesday, had gone well.

BURNING PRISON — Smoke and flames poured into the air yesterday as parts of the Oklahoma State Prison at McAlester burned after being set afire by rioting prisoners. (UPI Telephoto)

Oklahoma Prison Riot Continues

McALESTER, Okla. (UPI) — National Guard troops fired tear gas today into rioting convicts at the Oklahoma State Prison. About 200 inmates surrendered but hundreds more held out with 11 hostages.

"It's not under control—far from it," said Capt. David Boren, head of the National Guard troops and also a state legislator.

The inmates who surrendered released their hostages and were herded away, their hands clasped behind their heads. They were taken to cells in the east block and were given food.

"We feel like when they return to their cell blocks that is a very good sign," said Joe Carter, Gov. David Hall's executive assistant. "A majority of the people (inmates) were not actually involved in this. They were caught up in it. We are feeding everybody who is calm."

The convicts who continued the rebellion that started at 2:30 p.m. CDT Friday held 11 hostages, all prison officials. Two hostages were released Friday night and eight more today.

When the convicts started surrendering there were reports that the revolt had ended and that all hostages were being released. It quickly became evident that many inmates were refusing to give up.

Irvine Ungerman, chairman of the Oklahoma Corrections Department, shouted through a bullhorn to the holdout convicts, urging them to surrender.

They left the two-block-long prison a smoking shell that Oklahoma officials said would cost $10 million to replace.

The first surrender came at 8:19 a.m. CDT—17 hours and 49 minutes after the revolt started —with an agreement reached during a negotiating session in the prison dining hall. Details were not immediately released.

The inmates released their hostages and walked briskly out of the east gate with their hands clasped behind their heads. Guards yelled and fired occasional gunshots into the air to keep the inmates moving.

Divers Seeking Andrea Doria's Treasure Run Into Difficulties

FAIRHAVEN, Mass. (UPI) — Two divers on a $2 million treasure hunt were temporarily thwarted today as another in a series of problems plagued the pair in their underwater living chamber attached to the sunken luxury liner Andrea Doria.

Donald Rodocker, 27, and Christopher DeLucchi, 22, of San Diego, both former Navy frogmen, were forced to use emergency battery power when they ran into electrical difficulties 240-feet deep in the Atlantic 45 miles south of Nantucket Island.

Rick Whitney, a spokesman for the divers, said the two were unable to begin their planned entry into the ship because of a lack of lights due to the power failure. Mechanical problems Friday also forced a delay. Whitney said it was not immediately known what caused the electrical failure.

Rodocker and DeLucchi, intending to spend up to two weeks searching the ship, planned to use blowtorches to cut their way into the first class section of the 700-foot vessel where they hope to salvage $2 million in cash, art works and jewelry.

They intend to cut off the passenger loading doors leading to the foyer deck which in turn leads to the bank and purser's office.

The Andrea Doria sank in July, 1956, after colliding with the Swedish ship Stockholm off the New England coast. Fifty-one persons died in the accident.

In addition to the cash, the first class area also contains a chapel where a $250,000 silver religious plaque is believed located.

City Attorney Interviews Set

The Petaluma City Council will meet in closed session Monday at 7:30 p.m. to interview an applicant for the city attorney's job.

The council voted in November to make the position full-time and has been interviewing candidates for several weeks.

Officials Find Many Bugs In Emergency Smog Plan

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — "We're going to have to get the bugs out next time."

That was the rueful post mortem by a federal official on the first use of the Environmental Protection Agency's new powers and plans to combat smog in Southern California.

The initial flexing of the federal muscles had little effect on the smog — which nature took care of anyway — but plunged federal officials and workers into a murky haze of confusion.

After two days of heavy smog, the EPA put into effect Thursday the first stage of its shutdown plan. The first stage is a call on all other federal agencies in a five-county zone to voluntarily close their offices for the day, Succeeding stages can lead, through state or federal law, to an order shutting down all industrial and retail businesses and cutting back motor vehicle use.

The idea was that the other agencies would go along with the request, the 118,000 federal workers in the area would not add the exhaust pollution of their autos to the air by driving to work, official vehicles would stand idle, and citizens who had business with the federal government would also not have to drive anywhere.

If city, county and state governments followed suit, there might be less traffic, and thus less smog.

Item: Most federal agencies — including the biggest one with the most vehicles, the Post Office — operated normally. The FBI didn't want to stop hunting felons for the day, the U.S. Marshal and his men went right on with their duties, and federal judges took the bench as usual.

Result: Only 25,000 of the 118,000 federal workers took the day off. Sixty per cent of the employes reported for work at the downtown federal building, 80 per cent at the federal office building on the west side, and 90 per cent at the Los Angeles Airport office.

Item: Local federal agencies chiefs were reported perplexed, annoyed or furious at receiving a request from another agency to abandon work for a day. Some decided they had no authority to do that.

Item: At the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Assistant Director Jack Mauterer said he wanted to remain open. He was told the shutdown was mandatory, he said. By the time he found out it was voluntary, it was too late. He had shut down.

Item: The Small Business Administration told 40 per cent of its employes to stay home, figuring to get through the day with the others. "Everyone might as well have stayed home," said Ed Jenks. "The place was like a margue and nobody came in for service because the publicity was so good everybody thought were closed."

Item: The Social Security Administration gave the day off to 900 workers, but told 300 to come in to man the phones. They didn't do much of that because someone had switched the phone lines to a recording, which informed callers the office was closed and they should call back tomorrow.

A sampling of federal workers who had the day off showed that most conscientiously stayed home.

But others admitted that since they weren't using their cars to go to and from work, they used them to run errands and accomplish personal tasks — defeating the main purpose of the shutdown order.

Police said there was no noticeable reduction in traffic at all during the "shutdown."

New Tenant Unit Formed

A new organization, the Marin City Tenants Association, has been formed to represent public housing tenants in Marin City, according to Warren Alexander, the group's temporary chairman.

Alexander said the association is a separate organization from the old Marin City Tenants Union which has been inactive for sometime.

The group has already brought a class action suit against the authority, charging it with illegal eviction procedures, according to Alexander. The suit has resulted in an injunction preventing the housing authority from evicting tenants until the legal questions are resolved.

The association is governed by an 11-member board and is in the process of obtaining its charter.

Announcements are sent to all tenants before meetings, which are to be held at least twice a month, Alexander said.

Eleven Face Charges Of Open Nudity

A group of West Marin skinnydippers will enter pleas to charges of being nude in public when they appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Eleven persons — five arrested at Bolinas Beach Tuesday and six at Muir Beach Sunday — appeared yesterday before Judge Gary W. Thomas and were given until Monday to hire attorneys.

After their court appearance the nude bathers vowed to fight the anti-nudity ordinance as being an unconstitutional limit on their freedom of expression.

Rounded up at Muir Beach were Susan Mehrings White, 23, Catherine Cecelia Reed, 18, Donna Laree Maddox, 18, Stephen Francis White, 22, Ronald Edward Maddox, 23, and Marc James Cousineau, 18, all of Oakland.

Arrested at Bolinas Beach were Theodore Harvey Sadalin, 36, Roland Jacopetti, 37, Elizabeth Kreusler Ehmann, 39, and Nancy Joan Denmark, 26, all of Bolinas, and Peter Holmes Davidson, 30, of Colorado.

Theft Case Suspect Is Arraigned

A man who Corte Madera police said stole just for the sake of stealing was arraigned yesterday on one count of concealing stolen property.

Bail for Marc Allan Litchfield was maintained at $10,000 by Municipal Judge Gary W. Thomas and Litchfield was ordered to return to court Monday with an attorney to enter a plea to the charge.

The district attorney's office said it filed only the one charge because it has yet to inventory everything recovered in a raid on Litchfield's San Rafael apartment Wednesday.

Police reportedly seized a vast assortment of loot in the apartment, including cases of food, computers, a typewriter, clothing, camping equipment, cameras and other items. Officers said Litchfield headed a burglary ring that had stolen many thousands of dollars worth of goods.

More charges will soon be filed, the district attorney's office said in opposing a request by Litchfield that bail be lowered.

Man Said Sane; Hearing Set

A South Lake Tahoe man has been declared sane after a psychiatric hearing in Marin Superior Court and will return to municipal court to be arraigned on a charge of stealing a tour bus.

Donn Michael Gilbert, 33, Thursday was ordered to appear in court Monday by Municipal Judge David Menary Jr.

Gilbert reportedly was caught with a tour bus he had stolen from a Sausalito parking lot June 26.

New Price Support Plan Agreed Upon For Farmers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House and Senate negotiators, working on a four-year farm bill, have reached tentative agreement to allow price supports to escalate as farm costs rise.

The legislation is built around a new support system in which farmers would get crop subsidies on grains and cotton only if market prices fall below proposed new "target" levels.

The administration had threatened to veto the escalation provision. But a Republican member of the House-Senate conference told newsmen Friday he had heard the administration now regards the revised measure as acceptable. Agriculture secretary Earl L. Butz, approached for his reaction Friday night, had no comment.

Under the legislation, 1974 support targets would be set at $2.05 per bushel for wheat, $1.38 a bushel for corn and 38 cents a pound for cotton. In 1975, 1976 and 1977 the targets would be raised under a formula which would push prices up with any gains in farm costs.

The conferees also handed cotton growers a major victory by accepting the Senate's version of a provision reducing the ceiling on subsidies for big grain and cotton farmers from the present $55,000 per crop to $20,000 per farmer. This killed a house version which would have prevented big cotton farmers from side-stepping the full impact of the ceiling by leasing or selling their cotton allotments.

Retention of this cotton "loophole" drew sharp criticism from Rep. Wiley Mayne, R-Iowa. He charged House Democrats had "caved in to big cotton pressure" despite a heavy House vote in favor of the ban.

In an effort to tailor the farm bill as close to administration demands as possible without giving way on the key four-year escalator issue, the conferees tentatively adopted House terms on support target prices and escalation which were substantially below those set by the Senate.

Then, they went a step further and cut in half the increases the House had approved in minimum support loan rates for wheat and feed grains.

Conference committee members indicated they hoped to finish work on the bill today by reaching agreement on three remaining disputes over food stamp provisions. These included a controversial House-approved ban on food stamps for most strikers.

Administration experts earlier had estimated that the House support terms would cost taxpayers about $1.8 billion in 1974 with the cost rising to about $2.6 billion by 1977—still below the 1973 grain-cotton subsidy estimate of $2.8 billion. However, because market price forecasts have strengthened recently, administration technicians said they now thought the House plan would cost only about $800 million in 1974.

San Quentin Six Hit Vague Indictments

Motions attacking alleged vagueness of an indictment charging six San Quentin inmates with murder were argued yesterday in superior court before Judge Henry J. Broderick.

The San Quentin Six, as they are called by supporters, have disrupted proceedings at past court appearances, but sat quietly yesterday as their attorneys argued the indictment isn't specific enough to respond to.

Broderick took the arguments under submission and said he will rule by Aug. 20 on whether the indictment is acceptable or if the Marin District Attorney's office must amend it.

The six convicts — Louis N. Talamantez, Willie Tate, John Larry Spain, Fleeta Drumgo and Hugo A. Pinnell — are charged with murder and conspiracy stemming from an alleged escape attempt at the prison in August 1971 in which three guards and three convicts died.

Five of the accused men sat quietly yesterday while Spain, who had asked not to be present, was confined to a holding cell. Broderick noted he was there at his own request but didn't say why.

No trial date has been set yet, and the six are due to enter pleas Sept. 7.

Defense attorneys said yesterday the grand jury indictment accuses each of the six of murder and conspiracy but does not say who murdered whom, when the conspiracy was formed and who took part in it.

The attorneys have promised to file motions to dismiss the charges on the grounds that insufficient evidence was presented to the grand jury.

Six-Cent Price Boost For Milk Is Approved

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — State Food and Agriculture Director C. B. Christensen yesterday approved a six cent per gallon milk price hike sought by California's dairy industry.

The increase, effective Aug. 9, will mean the following increases by half gallon in the following cities: Riverside, 57 to 60; San Diego, 57 to 60 cents; Los Angeles 56 to 59 cents; Fresno 56 to 59 cents; San Francisco 58 to 61 cents; Sacramento 55 to 58 cents and Eureka 60 ½ to 63 ½ cents.

Christensen said the price increase was granted because of hikes in feed prices to dairymen. But, he warned, the boost was not likely to satisfy producers.

"The milk industry will be back demanding more of an increase," he said.

The last jump in state controlled milk prices was Feb. 1 when it went up four cents a gallon.

At a hearing on the increase in Sacramento earlier this month, Robert Abbott, senior economist with the department, presented a series of charts and statistical information which he said showed the cost of producing milk has risen "fantastically" while the retail prices have remained fixed.

Pleasure Faire Site Subject Of Joint Meet

The controversial site of the Renaissance Pleasure Faire will be discussed at a joint session of the Marin and Sonoma boards of supervisors Monday at 4:30 p.m. in Santa Rosa.

The two boards have been at odds since promoters sought permission to locate a permanent fair site near Highway 101 at the county line.

Sonoma supervisors have complained that the location will cause serious traffic problems in the area south of Petaluma and have started legal action against the Marin board for approving the site. Sonoma officials are expected to appeal the issuance of a use permit for the fair at the Aug. 7 Marin supervisors meeting.

The supervisors will also discuss the need for flood plain zoning along the Petaluma River.

Fiance Makes Mark At Palace

LONDON (UPI) — Capt. Mark Phillips made his first official mark at Buckingham Palace yesterday with a mention on a court circular.

A Buckingham Palace list showed that Phillips will accompany his fiance, Princess Anne, to a charity premiere of the film, "Jesus Christ Superstar" Aug. 23, and attend a reception of the Great Britain-USSR Association the next day.

Letter Seeking Brown Firing To Be Studied

A letter from a community group asking for the dismissal of City Mgr. Charles A. Brown will be considered by the Novato City Council at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Novato Community House.

The organization, Novato Citizens for Change, had a similar request turned down by the council on July 3.

In the most recent letter, the group has asked the council to explain why three department heads are leaving the city. The organization also charged that the city is paying former Police Chief Allen V. Klemme his full salary when he is no longer chief and that employees are using city cars for personal activities.

Bean, 41, Garriott, 42, and Lousma, 37, are scheduled to walk in space at least three times during the 59-day mission. Beside erecting a sunshade Tuesday, they will install film in the solar observatory's cameras. The next two spacewalks will be used to change film and retrieve the cassettes for return to earth.

The pilots are scheduled to return in the Apollo on Sept. 25. A third crew will be launched, probably in mid-November, to spend at least eight more weeks aboard Skylab.

A Rabid Skunk Killed In Marin

A rabid baby skunk was killed earlier this week at Mount Tamalpais Cemetery, county health officials reported yesterday.

Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, public health officer, said the skunk was killed Wednesday by the humane society after it was observed staggering and falling down.

She said rabies was confirmed yesterday by the state virus laboratory in Berkeley, bringing to 18 the number of rabid animals reported in Marin so far this year.

Wallet Case To Superior Court

Two men accused of stealing a wallet from a car at Point Reyes National Seashore have been bound over to Marin Superior Court following a preliminary hearing in Municipal court.

Michael Earl Watson, 21, of no fixed address, and Charles Alfred Wilson, 23, of Fairfax, will appear for trial in the higher court Aug. 6 since Municipal Judge David R. Baty on Thursday ruled there is sufficient evidence to try them.

The pair is said to have stolen a wallet belonging to Mrs. C.R. Mocine of Berkeley on July 14 from a car at Kehoe Beach.

Fire Directors Adopt Budget Of $237,100

A final $237,100 budget for 1973-74, $7,100 higher than last year's, was adopted last night by the Alto-Richardson Bay Fire District board.

Chief Carl O. Heynen Jr. said the spending plan will require the district to dip into its reserves since the $185,000 in revenue from the current tax rate of 73.5 cents per $100 of assessed valuation will not be enough to meet expenditures.

(Senate Bill 90, the state tax shift measure, requires taxing agencies to keep tax rates at or below this or last year's level — whichever is higher — or go to the voters for an increase.)

District directors raised the budget by $7,100 over the preliminary budget by adding capital improvements to convert the district's radios to match other county frequencies. They also added several hydrants and paving of parking area at the district fire station in Strawberry to the spending plan.

The budget includes $199,000 for salaries, $31,100 for maintenance and $7,100 for capital improvements.

Stabbing Case Trial Ordered

A San Anselmo man was bound over to Marin Superior Court yesterday to stand trial on a charge that he stabbed another man in a dispute over clothing.

Christopher Allen Meadows, 20, will appear Aug. 31 in superior court, Judge Gary W. Thomas of municipal court ordered after deciding that enough evidence exists to bring Meadows to trial.

Meadows is accused of assault with a deadly weapon, a charge arising from a July 17 incident in which he allegedly stabbed Jerry L. Silvey of San Rafael during a dispute over clothing Meadows had stored at Silvey's home.

San Rafael Man Denies Guilt In Check Theft

A San Rafael man yesterday denied involvement in the July 7 burglary of a San Rafael residence in which 100 checks were reportedly stolen.

Detels is charged with two counts of burglary stemming from the theft of the checks, plus $100 worth of personal possessions and cash from the Peter R. Mack home at 19 Scenic Avenue.

Police also said Detels signed and cashed some of the checks but he was not charged with forgery by the Marin District Attorney's office.

Girls Are Freed Of Drug Counts

Two Philadelphia girls won't be charged with drug offenses arising from a raid on a Ross home but three others arrested at the same time will be, the Marin District Attorney's office decided yesterday.

Released were Kathleen Rosemary Schmidt, 18, and Eileen Shaw, 19. The others — Virginia MacGregor, 19, of Sausalito, Raymond Anthony Hossbach, 25, of Mill Valley, and William Richard Paris, 29, of Ross — will have a preliminary hearing in Marin Municipal Court Thursday.

Stabbing Case Trial Ordered

A San Anselmo man was bound over to Marin Superior Court yesterday to stand trial on a charge that he stabbed another man in a dispute over clothing.

Christopher Allen Meadows, 20, will appear Aug. 31 in superior court, Judge Gary W. Thomas of municipal court ordered after deciding that enough evidence exists to bring Meadows to trial.

Meadows is accused of assault with a deadly weapon, a charge arising from a July 17 incident in which he allegedly stabbed Jerry L. Silvey of San Rafael during a dispute over clothing Meadows had stored at Silvey's home.

San Rafael Man Denies Guilt In Check Theft

A San Rafael man yesterday denied involvement in the July 7 burglary of a San Rafael residence in which 100 checks were reportedly stolen.

Detels is charged with two counts of burglary stemming from the theft of the checks, plus $100 worth of personal possessions and cash from the Peter R. Mack home at 19 Scenic Avenue.

Police also said Detels signed and cashed some of the checks but he was not charged with forgery by the Marin District Attorney's office.

Girls Are Freed Of Drug Counts

Two Philadelphia girls won't be charged with drug offenses arising from a raid on a Ross home but three others arrested at the same time will be, the Marin District Attorney's office decided yesterday.

Released were Kathleen Rosemary Schmidt, 18, and Eileen Shaw, 19. The others — Virginia MacGregor, 19, of Sausalito, Raymond Anthony Hossbach, 25, of Mill Valley, and William Richard Paris, 29, of Ross — will have a preliminary hearing in Marin Municipal Court Thursday.

400,000 Young People Jam Rock Festival Site

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (UPI) — About 400,000 young people squeezed onto the grounds of a race course for a rock festival today, and more streamed through this village at dawn carrying tents, bedrolls and coolers of beer.

"There are 95 acres of wall to wall people in there," said Lt. Richard C. Tonzi, commanding the state police checkpost during the night. "I don't know where we're going to fit them but we can't stop them coming if they want to come."

Tonzi based his estimate of the number packed onto the grounds of Watkins Glen grand prix auto racing course to the "Summer Jam" festival on the crowds of between 100,000 and 125,000 that attended auto races in the past. "There's got to be in excess of 400,000 people here," he said.

If that estimate is accurate, it would bring the crowd at the festival to about the same size as that which massed at the Woodstock festival on a dairy farm 120 miles west of here in 1969. Woodstock was the hallmark of the youth movement of the 1960s.

One of those walking through the town, Brian Marchand, a sophomore at Rhode Island College, said, ""I missed Woodstock and I'm not going to miss this."

Four persons were killed in traffic accidents on the way to the festival yesterday. The four hospitals in the area said 108 people had been treated and released, and 27 admitted. Most of the hospital cases were for cuts, scrapes and drug abuse.

"Apparently people are getting stoned on drugs or wine then falling down or riding on roofs or hoods of cars and then falling and getting injured," said the administrator of Schuyler Hospital.

About 40 persons were in the Watkins Glen jail, all charged with minor infractions such as disorderly conduct, said Schuyler County Undersheriff Michael Maloney.

In an attempt to turn back the human tide, state police set up checkpoints two miles north and seven miles south of town, telling those driving in that there was no place to park and they would have to walk. Cars were parked for miles along the roadsides, and the young people, picking up tents, bed rolls, laundry bags and beer coolers, trooped in a steady stream all night to the grounds.

Service stations reported they were running short of gas because of the consumption by autos idling for hours in the crush.

The state police traffic checkpoint at Middletown, 150 miles away, said 100 cars were passing each minute at 3 a.m.— far more than the normal flow.

At the Horseheads state police post 25 miles south of Watkins Glen, trooper John Halstead, who was acting as a dispatcher, said, "The road (Route 17) is blocked right now. Cars can't get through. Some people are walking 30 miles to get there."

The main street of Watkins Glen was so tightly packed with cars at midnight that it took four hours for an ambulance to weave through the traffic to get a girl with a compound fracture of the leg to a hospital, said Tonzi.

He said between 300 and 400 police already were at the scene, and he was requesting an additional 300 state policemen.

Originally, the festival sponsors, Cornucopia Corp. of New York, expected 125,000 people to attend the show, starring three rock bands—The Allman Brothers, The Grateful Dead and The Band.

Auto Talks Provide Very Few Surprises

DETROIT (UPI) — Few surprises have emerged in two weeks of contract bargaining between the United Auto Workers and the automotive "Big Three." But several ideological differences could stand in the way of a strike-advertising settlement by Sept. 14.

The only harsh words from either side came when topics like voluntary overtime, contract reopener clauses, cures for absenteeism and no-strike provisions were mentioned. Otherwise, negotiators have repeated glowing statements that nothing stands in the way of agreement on contracts for more than 700,000 U.S. and Canadian auto workers.

Negotiations began July 16 under federal controls for the first time since the Korean War and the size of the wage and fringe benefit package is pretty well decided. All that remains is to split up the pie and make it come out so it doesn't exceed a 7 per cent raise in the first year.

Until Chrysler became the first of automakers to make its own set of demands Wednesday, words like "insane" and "oppressive" hadn't been heard. Then Chrysler outlined a short set of demands that UAW Vice President Douglas A. Fraser labeled "an extensive attack on the rights and benefits of workers."

At the center of his anger was Chrysler's plan to curb absenteeism which runs above 6 per cent a day—or about 9,000 workers out of a U.S. work force of 146,000.

Chrysler proposed that workers must show up on the day before and the day after a holiday to receive holiday pay; reductions in vacation pay for workers with "excessive" absenteeism; and lower overtime pay for an employe with "excessive" absenteeism.

What galled Fraser was not the attack on the problem so much as Chrysler's decision to penalize a blue collar worker with a bad attendance record while excusing the same performance among salaried workers. This, said Fraser, would make the men in the plants second-class citizens.

UAW Vice President Irving Bluestone Thursday labeled as "totally unrealistic" a GM proposal that the UAW give up its longtime right to pull men out of the auto plants when they feel they are victims of a speedup. He said the union "will never give up the right to determine how hard a man has to work to earn his wages."

General Motors Profit Most For Any Company

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. made more money during the first six months of 1973 than any other corporation has made for a similar period.

GM announced yesterday its profits for the second quarter were $1.6 billion or $5.62 a share, up 18 per cent from last year's $1.37 billion or $4.78 a share. In the first half GM sales totaled $19.2 billion compared with $16.2 billion last year.

However, GM's top officials, Chairman Richard C. Gerstenberg and President Edward N. Cole, said that net income for the second quarter was $797 million or "$20 million below the first quarter of 1972."

They also insisted their firm had no price increase on North American built vehicles this calendar year, and their profit margin declined to 8.3 per cent in the last three months from 8.5 per cent the first quarter.

UAW Vice President Irvin Bluestone, in the midst of negotiating a new contract with GM, said yesterday "this corporation is stuffed to the gills with million-dollar bills."

Bluestone called GM's profit "astronomical" and said they give renewed emphasis to the union's economic proposals.

Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. earlier this week reported alltime record profits for six months.

No Prosecution In Shoplifting Arrest Planned

Three suspected shoplifters arrested by San Rafael police after a high-speed chase across the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge will not be charged, the Marin District Attorney's office said yesterday.

There isn't enough evidence to hold Linda Diane Hebrard, 20, and Sammy Mack Jr., 30, both of Richmond, and Edwin Shafter Hebrard, 27, of Berkeley, the attorney's office said.

San Rafael police first stopped the wrong car on the bridge Thursday but then chased and stopped a car with the three inside. Officers said they found three stolen coats inside.

BART Negotiators In Marathon Talks

BERKELEY (UPI) — Shirtsleeved negotiators continued their talks today in an effort to settle the strike against the Bay Area Rapid Transit system, its sleek trains idled since a walkout by 1,100 workers 27 days ago.

The representatives began the talks at 10 a.m. yesterday and took only brief breaks.

The talks at the Claremont Hotel were the first on key economic issues since BART presented a "final offer" July 18.

State conciliator Edward Allen sat in at the start of the talks that brought BART's top management directly into negotiations for the first time.

"Both sides have agreed to stay here until we get it settled," said Paul Varacalli, executive secretary of United Public Employes Local 390.

Management's July 18th offer, rejected by union membership a week ago, was for a 9 per cent wage hike and a 3 per cent increase in fringe benefits for each of two years of a contract.

The unions want a work pact covering all employes, the first union contract for the $1.4 billion system.

They also want equal pay for workers doing the same job, bringing an end to the practice of paying as much as $2 an hour more to employes hired from local transit districts.

BART General Manager B. R. Stokes, who joined the negotiating team, said even if there is a settlement it would still be five days before the trains could carry passengers over the 58-mile system in Alameda and Contra Costa Counties.

Empty Butcher's Shelves Are Seen

Grocers, meat industry spokesmen and Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz agreed Friday that many stores will probably run out of beef at some date before Sept. 12, when the price freeze is lifted.

At Jack's Meat Market in New York City, owner David Kalter said, "There's just no beef at all. It's ridiculous. I can't afford beef anymore and I will not pay over the ceiling prices just to keep it in stock. And on top of that, chicken went up another 7 cents today."

The Department of Agriculture Friday said its checks at Chicago and Omaha, Neb., showed no sales at all of "carlots" of steers or heifers.

The Agriculture Department reported that meat production figures in June, when red meats were covered by price ceilings, were 9 per cent below a year earlier.

A Cincinnati meat retailer who normally sells 25 sides of beef a week said he has back orders for 250 sides. "Customers are no longer worried about the price," said Ray Reuss of Greenhills Storage Locker. "They just want a side of beef for their freezer. They're running scared."

Ed Killar, manager of a Thorofare supermarket in Pittsburgh, said people were buying meat "like crazy" and the demand was up more than 50 per cent.

Butz acknowledged that some areas may be without beef next week, and warned that cattlemen and suppliers may be making a mistake by withholding animals from sale, especially if there turns out to be a glut of meat on the market after Sept. 12.

Overall prices may rise too, Butz said, "a bit more" in the months ahead, but "I think farmers will respond and turn on the production. We're urging our farmers to full speed. I want them to produce. I'm urging them to plow up the fence rows. We're going to have the food next year."

David H. Stroud, president of the National Livestock and Meat Board, said meat prices may rise as high as 20 per cent when the freeze is lifted. He predicted beef shortages in the next week and suggested that the reason the beef industry was singled out for a continued price freeze was political.

California Egg Prices Up Sharply

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California egg prices have jumped sharply — up to 15 cents more a dozen — in the first full week since President Nixon lifted the price freeze from the food industry.

The Federal-State Market News Service Friday reported that large AA eggs currently are ranging in store prices from 72 to 80 cents a dozen, 11 to 15 cents higher than last week when the freeze was terminated.

Frank Bennett, manager of the California Egg Program which administers a marketing order for the state's egg industry, said the price increase reflects a shortage in egg supply.

"The present pricing is, in my opinion, out of line," he said. "But the people seem willing to pay these higher rates."

General Motors Profit Most For Any Company

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. made more money during the first six months of 1973 than any other corporation has made for a similar period.

GM announced yesterday its profits for the second quarter were $1.6 billion or $5.62 a share, up 18 per cent from last year's $1.37 billion or $4.78 a share. In the first half GM sales totaled $19.2 billion compared with $16.2 billion last year.

However, GM's top officials, Chairman Richard C. Gerstenberg and President Edward N. Cole, said that net income for the second quarter was $797 million or "$20 million below the first quarter of 1972."

No Prosecution In Shoplifting Arrest Planned

Three suspected shoplifters arrested by San Rafael police after a high-speed chase across the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge will not be charged, the Marin District Attorney's office said yesterday.

There isn't enough evidence to hold Linda Diane Hebrard, 20, and Sammy Mack Jr., 30, both of Richmond, and Edwin Shafter Hebrard, 27, of Berkeley, the attorney's office said.

San Rafael police first stopped the wrong car on the bridge Thursday but then chased and stopped a car with the three inside. Officers said they found three stolen coats inside.

Newsprint Pinch Poses Hard Choices

HOW SHALL the I-J meet the impending paper shortage?

That is the question uppermost in mind these days because newspapers as well as government offices are beginning to feel the paper pinch.

It is said that every machine capable of manufacturing newsprint paper in all of Canada and the U.S.A. is operating at full capacity, three shifts a day, seven days a week.

But circulations have grown, as has the number of pages per issue. The I-J is no exception. Each year the size of our paper grows. Each year we add new subscribers. Each year our need for newsprint increases.

Like gas stations on "allocations" from refineries, newspapers now are allocated for this year only the amount of paper used the preceeding year.

For most, including the I-J, that isn't enough.

WHY DON'T manufacturers install additional machinery and increase production to meet demand?

The explanation seems to lie in two areas: economics and raw material supplies.

Newsprint manufacturing machinery requires very heavy capital investment. Manufactuers say, in effect, that the prospects for profits are not great enough to motivate corporations to make the necessary huge investments.

The principal raw material of paper is logs. The biggest, most substantial manufacturers depend on "perpetual yield" forest lands which they own or otherwise control. They will not be so short-sighted as to use timber until it reaches optimum size. Their long-range view of maintaining the forest as a tree farm discourages them from cutting down trees faster than they replace themselves.

U.S. NEWSPAPERS have from time to time over the years used large quantities of imported paper. But the newsprint shortage now is worldwide.

Paper prices in most of the world are even higher than in North America.

This adds to the problem two ways:

First, foreign buyers outbid U.S. users in foreign markets.

Second, Canadian and U.S. paper mills can get higher prices selling abroad. The paper they sell abroad leaves the "home" supply even shorter.

Strikes and disastrous mill fires have added to the pinch.

European newspapers have faced what seem to us excessively high paper prices for many years. As a result, they have very few pages per issue and advertising rates are, by our standards, exceedingly high.

No newspaper in Europe has the space, for instance, to provide the extensive and intensive coverage of local community news which is to be found in the I-J. Women's pages there are rare. Sports coverage consists mostly of scores, with only a story or two on the biggest national event. Such syndicated features as comic strips are few and far between.

THERE IS TALK of "rationing" advertising. Like gas station allocations, this would mean a business could buy newspaper advertising only in an amount approximately equal to what it purchased in a like period a year earlier.

If U.S. newspapers adopted the European formula of drastically increasing advertising rates, the results might not be beneficial to the community as a whole. Only the largest, wealthiest businesses could afford to advertise. Smaller, independent concerns would find it difficult if not impossible to advertise enough to become successful.

From a newspaper's point of view, the idea of raising rates so high that only a few advertisers can afford to buy space isn't all bad. Income remains about the same while the amount of paper used drops significantly.

But that would be contrary to the concept which made America a land of plenty.

That concept was simply that the more you could produce, the cheaper would be the cost of whatever is being produced. Henry Ford demonstrated this to the manufacturing world more than half a century ago.

Advertising plays an important part in this sequence. You have to advertise to build sales as to be able to produce in volume great enough to assure low prices.

If local business advertising were to be severely restricted in community newspapers throughout America, the results most certainly would be detrimental to the general welfare.

Searching for a way out of the paper shortage, we find ourselves recalling the words uttered by Winston Churchill when he faced an all-but-incomprehensible situation:

The Miracle Of Feathers

Bird feathers are a miracle. Weight for weight they are stronger than any man-made thing. A hummingbird, weighing less than half an ounce, is clad in roughly a thousand feathers. On the other extreme, the feathers of a bald eagle weigh twice as much as its skeleton. Feathers are believed to have developed from reptilian scales eons ago. Next time you have a chance, examine a feather closely. Even a chicken feather is a work of art.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

San Rafael Becoming Tacky And Rundown

If I was a past or present community leader or a resident of any length of time I would hang my head in shame at how tacky and run down this city has become in many areas, especially the immediate downtown area.

San Rafael must have been a colorful town full of historical and future nostalgia promise that should of been preserved at any cost so today's residents and future ones would have a link to the past. Once that link is broken there is no looking back and there aren't too many links left!

My wife and I are newcomers here but have lived in the Bay Area for some time and we really love this city and it has much to offer but we look at it like an old friend who needs a helping hand. We are shocked the way it's falling apart in many areas.

The freeway through the heart of town must be the ugliest anywhere. No one it seems has pushed the idea to landscape it with heavy trees and shrubs to cut down the noise and pollution and add beauty for all to share.

Most all of your beautiful old homes have been bulldozed away or are falling into decay to make room for so-called progress.

Every street is choked with traffic yet more buildings and parking are built and you must agree this city has a monopoly on gas stations.

The city has allowed a senior citizens home to be built right on busy Lincoln Avenue. What a pleasure it will be for these elderly folks to be in all that din and pollution on such a squeezed in area of small rooms and apartments!

Fourth Street should be made into one long shopping mall with mini-trams to carry the public to and fro. Landscaped parking could be located within this area with easy access for the public. The end results would be a place to shop, work and just stroll. Why spend millions for a shopping center miles away when San Rafael has one right at its fingertips?. . .

One doesn't have to hang his head in shame forever. A strong community action protest is the first step to start the ball rolling to preserve what San Rafael has left of its historical charm. . .

One good thing about Watergate is the way it has revived interest in daytime television.

Watergate hearings, like soap operas, give the viewer a chance to enjoy the other fellow's troubles instead of brooding about his own.

Ask not about a senator's statesmanship. The big question: "Is he photogenic?"

Televised investigations have supplanted the million-dollar appropriation as the lawmakers' cure-all for every problem.

Watergate Hearings Provide Bonanza For Errant Husbands

WASHINGTON — Long after Watergate is over, certain phrases repeated during the hearings will remain with us.

Already they are being used by Middle America to cover various situations.

THE OTHER DAY at exactly 2:30 a.m., Mintonburger staggered into the hallway of his house. His tie was askew, there was lipstick on his collar and there was a strong odor of alcohol on his breath.

Mrs. Mintonburger in her dressing gown was waiting for him. "Do you swear to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?"

"Yessir."

"Where the hell have you been?"

"I'm sorry. I didn't hear the question."

"I said where the hell have you been?"

"To the best of my recollection I was at Reilly's Bar and Grill."

"Whom were you there with?"

"I don't have all my records with me, but I believe I was there with Sam Carlsberg, Ed Tuborg and Charlie Schlitz."

"WHAT WAS DISCUSSED at the bar until 2:30 in the morning?"

"What meeting are we talking about now?"

"The one you just came from."

"Well, let's see. As far as I recall, we discussed the trade of running-back Duane Thomas to the Washington Redskins."

"Is that all you talked about?"

"To the best of my knowledge I believe that is all we talked about. You must remember, Senator. . .I mean, Dear. . .that we're talking about something that happened several hours ago, and although I'm trying to be as candid as possible, it is very difficult for me to remember everything that took place last night."

"ALL RIGHT," Mrs. Mintonburger said, going over some notes she was holding in her hand, "let's go on to another subject. What's that lipstick doing on your collar?"

"I never heard of any lipstick on my collar."

"It's right there."

"I believe we have to put this in the proper context. I recall during the evening brushing past a lady who had been pushed into me by a man. Her lips hit me right on the collar."

"And that is your story?"

"As far as that particular incident is concerned, I would say it is an accurate description of it at that point in time."

"WOULD IT SURPRISE you, Mr. Mintonburger, that I called Reilly's Bar at midnight and spoke to Reilly, and he said you hadn't been in all evening?"

"What night are we talking about now?"

"Tonight."

"I believe Reilly is mistaken. I specifically remember being there."

"Then you would say that Reilly is not telling the truth?"

"On this particular point, I would say he is not."

"WHY WOULD REILLY lie about your not being in his bar?"

"To protect himself. Reilly has perjured himself on many occasions, and he is constantly seeking ways of getting immunity."

"Well, let me ask you this. Do you think you have a right coming in drunk at 2:30 in the morning with lipstick on your collar?"

"In hindsight it was probably a bad idea. But at that point in time when I did those things, I was only following the orders of my superiors, Sam Carlsberg, Ed Tuborg and Charlie Schlitz. As I look back on it now, I should have inquired as to why they were asking me to do certain things, which may under the present atmosphere appear to some to be evidence of wrongdoing."

"ONE FINAL question, Mr. Mintonburger. What is your advice to other husbands who might find themselves in the same position?"

"Well, sir, I would say that I am not proud of what I did, and I guess I am lacking in moral fiber which caused me to go along with what everybody else was doing."

"Mr. Mintonburger, thank you for your candid and forthright testimony. You have been a very co-operative witness. One more thing, will you be available for further questioning tomorrow morning if it is needed?"

"That's why I'm here."

Many Turn To Common Cause In Hope Of Government Reform

WASHINGTON — An increasing number of Americans are beginning to ask what they can do about the mess in Washington, as it was called in another political era. Between cynicism at the daily harvest of revelations — "all politicians are a bunch of crooks and chiselers" — and boredom or amusement at the showing of the Washington scandals of 1973 are those looking for a way to restore decent government.

One avenue they are turning to is Common Cause. In June the organization picked up nearly 12,000 new members who paid $15 each to be part of the citizens' lobby.

LETTERS FROM ALL across the country sent to John Gardner, the founder and director of Common Cause, express hope tempered in many instances with doubts about what anyone can do. Ranging from handwritten scrawls to typewritten letters on engraved stationery, they express the earnest conviction that something must soon be done to stop the rot in the American system.

"We would hope," says one thoughtful writer from Beverly Hills, "that the whole outmoded 18th century idea of electing a President and keeping him in office through four years, no matter what, could possibly be changed. Our system, while still keeping our primary Constitution, can be altered to have a government fall and a new President elected if anything like Watergate ever happens again."

"Every time I've started to write this check," says a writer from Scarborough, N.Y., "it has seemed so insignificant compared to the millions poured into the Nixon administration's attempt to destroy our fair republic that I've just put it aside and written another ineffectual letter to my congressman. . . Now we seem to have a reprieve, perhaps only momentary, in which we may be able to help our beautiful land renew itself."

"Many of us have felt utterly frustrated over our inability to influence the course of political events in our beloved country," says an American writing from South America. "The Watergate spectacle is appalling and yet may prove to be the catalyst for sweeping reforms. . . Those of us who live abroad in our various assignments are perhaps particularly sensitive to deterioration in the moral tone of our national government . . ."

MANY WHO WRITE cite with approval the suit filed by Common Cause last September charging a violation of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act by the Finance Committee to Re-elect the President and Treasurer Maurice Stans. The chief objective is to force the committee to file the secret report of the list of donors who, prior to April 7 of last year, insisted on anonymity.

On that list are some of America's biggest corporations. Gardner charges that it is the supreme illustration of the corruption of money in politics today. The Republican defendants are moving to delay trial of the suit, and in the meantime the list is sealed with a strict injunction that its disclosure would be in contempt of court.

JOHN GARDNER is a singularly American phenomenon. As president of the Carnegie Foundation, following a career in business, he was a registered Republican when President Lyndon Johnson made him secretary of health, education and welfare. Disillusioned with the Johnson policies, he resigned to become head of the Urban Coalition and later to found Common Cause.

His critics dismiss him as a do-gooder, with the Republicans accusing him of being a covert ally of the Democratic Party. But do-gooders, whether that is used as a term of opprobrium or merely descriptive, have helped to make American history since the beginning of the republic. In his academic excellence Gardner eloquently sets the hallmarks for wise and enlightened conduct in public and private life.

Soft-spoken, with none of the outward aggressiveness of the crusader, Gardner in a half-dozen fields is proof that good guys can win. He sometimes appears like Charlie Brown in "Peanuts," bearing the woes of the world or at least the woes of his ball team on his shoulders. But in his own quiet way he is a tough, unrelenting fighter for what he believes to be the right.

A fair criticism of Common Cause is that it is largely confined to the middle and upper middle, with no roots in the mass of the voters. The total membership is just under 225,000. This means the influence it can exert is limited. Yet the members are highly articulate men and women who believe they can promote the good not just of themselves but the common cause of all Americans.

Ziegler's Fate 'Litmus Test' In Nixon Vs. Party Showdown

Keep an eye on what happens to White House news spokesman Ron Ziegler. It is a litmus test of what is really going on behind the scenes between the senior leaders of the Republican Party and President Nixon.

Twice now people called in to the White House to reorganize it in a manner acceptable to the party leadership have told the President that Mr. Ziegler must go. The first was John Connally of Texas who "gave it to the President with the bark off" — and shortly thereafter moved into the political wings. The second was Melvin Laird, who was reluctantly induced to go to the White House by the party leadership in Congress. He is still there — but for how long?

The reason why both Connally and Laird want Mr. Ziegler out is that he has become what they regard as an unnecessary liability to the party. The party itself is in trouble. One measure of that trouble is a drying up of contributions to the Republican National Committee. That in turn has a bearing on survival prospects for every Republican up for reelection next year. Party leaders want to jettison all liabilities.

MR. ZIEGLER IS NOT of major importance himself. He is an affable young man who has given total loyalty to Mr. Nixon. But in the process he has laid down White House assertions which proved later to be unfounded. He has had to retract, or declare "inoperative," just about everything he said about Watergate prior to Mr. Nixon's April 30 statement which reversed the White House position.

His loyalty to Mr. Nixon is beyond question. But no one in the White House Press Corps would any longer take anything he says at face value. White House news is still the better part of all news coming out of Washington. It affects the political future. That file is being written by men who distrust the White House spokesman. This condition is not helping the Republican Party.

THE REAL QUESTION behind all this is whether Mr. Nixon will allow Mr. Laird to put through the kind of thorough reorganization of the White House which would trim away all those persons and policies which have become liabilities to the party. Much more than Mr. Ziegler is at stake. Scores of other people are involved. So are policies, and the whole method of running the White House.

If Mr. Laird and his backers on Capitol Hill had their way, the policy-making process would be decentralized and handed back to the regular departments of government. For example, Henry Kissinger's foreign policy staff would disappear. Its people and its work would go back to State, Defense, and Treasury whence most of them came. Mr. Kissinger himself would either leave government or become secretary of state. Policy-making, in all areas, would be back in the departments where Congress and public could watch the process — as in pre-Johnson-Nixon days.

Such changes were intended by Senate and House Republic leaders when Mr. Connally arrived from Texas. They were decisively intended when Mr. Laird was sent in. Unless implemented, the party leaders on the Hill will, at some point on the near political horizon, break openly with Mr. Nixon. But if they are implemented Mr. Nixon will no longer be able to run the White House his own way, or have his loyal favorites around him.

THIS BACKGROUND struggle between Mr. Nixon's way of running the White House and the needs of the Republican Party is as crucial to Mr. Nixon's tenure in the White House as the news which flows down daily from the Senate hearings. It is at the heart of Mr. Nixon's seventh crisis.

Mr. Ziegler is the visible symbol of the issue. So long as he remains, Mr. Nixon is holding out for running the presidency his way. If Mr. Ziegler goes, you will know that the party has triumphed over the man.

Newsprint Pinch Poses Hard Choices

HOW SHALL the I-J meet the impending paper shortage?

That is the question uppermost in mind these days because newspapers as well as government offices are beginning to feel the paper pinch.

It is said that every machine capable of manufacturing newsprint paper in all of Canada and the U.S.A. is operating at full capacity, three shifts a day, seven days a week.

But circulations have grown, as has the number of pages per issue. The I-J is no exception. Each year the size of our paper grows. Each year we add new subscribers. Each year our need for newsprint increases.

Like gas stations on "allocations" from refineries, newspapers now are allocated for this year only the amount of paper used the preceeding year.

For most, including the I-J, that isn't enough.

WHY DON'T manufacturers install additional machinery and increase production to meet demand?

The explanation seems to lie in two areas: economics and raw material supplies.

Newsprint manufacturing machinery requires very heavy capital investment. Manufactuers say, in effect, that the prospects for profits are not great enough to motivate corporations to make the necessary huge investments.

The principal raw material of paper is logs. The biggest, most substantial manufacturers depend on "perpetual yield" forest lands which they own or otherwise control. U.S. NEWSPAPERS have from time to time over the years used large quantities of imported paper. But the newsprint shortage now is worldwide.

Paper prices in most of the world are even higher than in North America.

This adds to the problem two ways:

First, foreign buyers outbid U.S. users in foreign markets.

Second, Canadian and U.S. paper mills can get higher prices selling abroad. The paper they sell abroad leaves the "home" supply even shorter.

Strikes and disastrous mill fires have added to the pinch.

European newspapers have faced what seem to us excessively high paper prices for many years. As a result, they have very few pages per issue and advertising rates are, by our standards, exceedingly high.

If U.S. newspapers adopted the European formula of drastically increasing advertising rates, the results might not be beneficial to the community as a whole. Only the largest, wealthiest businesses could afford to advertise. Smaller, independent concerns would find it difficult if not impossible to advertise enough to become successful.

From a newspaper's point of view, the idea of raising rates so high that only a few advertisers can afford to buy space isn't all bad. Income remains about the same while the amount of paper used drops significantly.

But that would be contrary to the concept which made America a land of plenty.

That concept was simply that the more you could produce, the cheaper would be the cost of whatever is being produced. Henry Ford demonstrated this to the manufacturing world more than half a century ago.

Advertising plays an important part in this sequence. You have to advertise to build sales as to be able to produce in volume great enough to assure low prices.

If local business advertising were to be severely restricted in community newspapers throughout America, the results most certainly would be detrimental to the general welfare.

One avenue they are turning to is Common Cause. In June the organization picked up nearly 12,000 new members who paid $15 each to be part of the citizens' lobby.

LETTERS FROM ALL across the country sent to John Gardner, the founder and director of Common Cause, express hope tempered in many instances with doubts about what anyone can do. Ranging from handwritten scrawls to typewritten letters on engraved stationery, they express the earnest conviction that something must soon be done to stop the rot in the American system.

"We would hope," says one thoughtful writer from Beverly Hills, "that the whole outmoded 18th century idea of electing a President and keeping him in office through four years, no matter what, could possibly be changed. Our system, while still keeping our primary Constitution, can be altered to have a government fall and a new President elected if anything like Watergate ever happens again."

"Every time I've started to write this check," says a writer from Scarborough, N.Y., "it has seemed so insignificant compared to the millions poured into the Nixon administration's attempt to destroy our fair republic that I've just put it aside and written another ineffectual letter to my congressman. . . Now we seem to have a reprieve, perhaps only momentary, in which we may be able to help our beautiful land renew itself."

"Many of us have felt utterly frustrated over our inability to influence the course of political events in our beloved country," says an American writing from South America. "The Watergate spectacle is appalling and yet may prove to be the catalyst for sweeping reforms. . . Those of us who live abroad in our various assignments are perhaps particularly sensitive to deterioration in the moral tone of our national government . . ."

MANY WHO WRITE cite with approval the suit filed by Common Cause last September charging a violation of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act by the Finance Committee to Re-elect the President and Treasurer Maurice Stans. The chief objective is to force the committee to file the secret report of the list of donors who, prior to April 7 of last year, insisted on anonymity.

On that list are some of America's biggest corporations. Gardner charges that it is the supreme illustration of the corruption of money in politics today. The Republican defendants are moving to delay trial of the suit, and in the meantime the list is sealed with a strict injunction that its disclosure would be in contempt of court.

JOHN GARDNER is a singularly American phenomenon. As president of the Carnegie Foundation, following a career in business, he was a registered Republican when President Lyndon Johnson made him secretary of health, education and welfare. Disillusioned with the Johnson policies, he resigned to become head of the Urban Coalition and later to found Common Cause.

His critics dismiss him as a do-gooder, with the Republicans accusing him of being a covert ally of the Democratic Party. But do-gooders, whether that is used as a term of opprobrium or merely descriptive, have helped to make American history since the beginning of the republic. In his academic excellence Gardner eloquently sets the hallmarks for wise and enlightened conduct in public and private life.

Soft-spoken, with none of the outward aggressiveness of the crusader, Gardner in a half-dozen fields is proof that good guys can win. He sometimes appears like Charlie Brown in "Peanuts," bearing the woes of the world or at least the woes of his ball team on his shoulders. But in his own quiet way he is a tough, unrelenting fighter for what he believes to be the right.

A fair criticism of Common Cause is that it is largely confined to the middle and upper middle, with no roots in the mass of the voters. The total membership is just under 225,000. This means the influence it can exert is limited. Yet the members are highly articulate men and women who believe they can promote the good not just of themselves but the common cause of all Americans.

Ziegler's Fate 'Litmus Test' In Nixon Vs. Party Showdown

Keep an eye on what happens to White House news spokesman Ron Ziegler. It is a litmus test of what is really going on behind the scenes between the senior leaders of the Republican Party and President Nixon.

Twice now people called in to the White House to reorganize it in a manner acceptable to the party leadership have told the President that Mr. Ziegler must go. The first was John Connally of Texas who "gave it to the President with the bark off" — and shortly thereafter moved into the political wings. The second was Melvin Laird, who was reluctantly induced to go to the White House by the party leadership in Congress. He is still there — but for how long?

The reason why both Connally and Laird want Mr. Ziegler out is that he has become what they regard as an unnecessary liability to the party. The party itself is in trouble. One measure of that trouble is a drying up of contributions to the Republican National Committee. That in turn has a bearing on survival prospects for every Republican up for reelection next year. Party leaders want to jettison all liabilities.

MR. ZIEGLER IS NOT of major importance himself. He is an affable young man who has given total loyalty to Mr. Nixon. But in the process he has laid down White House assertions which proved later to be unfounded. He has had to retract, or declare "inoperative," just about everything he said about Watergate prior to Mr. Nixon's April 30 statement which reversed the White House position.

His loyalty to Mr. Nixon is beyond question. But no one in the White House Press Corps would any longer take anything he says at face value. White House news is still the better part of all news coming out of Washington. It affects the political future. That file is being written by men who distrust the White House spokesman. This condition is not helping the Republican Party.

THE REAL QUESTION behind all this is whether Mr. Nixon will allow Mr. Laird to put through the kind of thorough reorganization of the White House which would trim away all those persons and policies which have become liabilities to the party. Much more than Mr. Ziegler is at stake. Scores of other people are involved. So are policies, and the whole method of running the White House.

If Mr. Laird and his backers on Capitol Hill had their way, the policy-making process would be decentralized and handed back to the regular departments of government. For example, Henry Kissinger's foreign policy staff would disappear. Its people and its work would go back to State, Defense, and Treasury whence most of them came. Mr. Kissinger himself would either leave government or become secretary of state. Policy-making, in all areas, would be back in the departments where Congress and public could watch the process — as in pre-Johnson-Nixon days.

Such changes were intended by Senate and House Republic leaders when Mr. Connally arrived from Texas. They were decisively intended when Mr. Laird was sent in. Unless implemented, the party leaders on the Hill will, at some point on the near political horizon, break openly with Mr. Nixon. But if they are implemented Mr. Nixon will no longer be able to run the White House his own way, or have his loyal favorites around him.

THIS BACKGROUND struggle between Mr. Nixon's way of running the White House and the needs of the Republican Party is as crucial to Mr. Nixon's tenure in the White House as the news which flows down daily from the Senate hearings. It is at the heart of Mr. Nixon's seventh crisis.

Mr. Ziegler is the visible symbol of the issue. So long as he remains, Mr. Nixon is holding out for running the presidency his way. If Mr. Ziegler goes, you will know that the party has triumphed over the man.

Small Car Demand Outstrips Supply

By PETER TONGE
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

BOSTON, Mass. — All of a sudden the small car in the United States is at a premium. It cannot be bought readily anywhere, old or new.

Buyers want to economize at a time of inflation — and they are uncertain over gasoline supplies.

Examples abound. A Boston woman seeking something small found her options strictly limited.

She had considered an American Motors Gremlin, but those dealers she visited had none. Eventually she settled for a Chevy Vega — one of just two remaining on the showroom floor. Moreover, while she was completing the purchase another buyer came in and "snapped up the other."

In contrast, she could have picked up any number of larger models, at a solidly discounted price.

Nationwide, dealers complain of too-large an inventory of big cars, and frequently of no inventory at all of the smaller models.

Comments a would-be small-car owner: "The dealer said he would phone me just as soon as he got one in. That was weeks ago. I'm still waiting."

The situation is the same among used cars. One businessman seeking a small second car for his wife has searched used-car lots for weeks without success.

"You came six months too late," one dealer told him. "Early this year I could have sold you any number of Toyotas, Datsuns, Pintos, you name it, and given you a good price, too." Now the dealer says he can't get any.

Classified ads are proving of little help. Fewer cars are listed these days, "and if you don't phone up the moment the papers hit the streets you're out of luck," a frustrated buyer comments.

Increasingly, it seems, people are taking a pencil and paper and doing some simple calculations. The savings of owning a four-cylinder subcompact, they discover, can be impressive.

Detroit is reported to be privately concerned at the swing away from profitable larger cars, although Mac W. Warden, General Motors vice president in charge of marketing, suggests the current situation gives an exaggerated idea of the swing to smaller cars. Sales for the current year of all types of vehicles, he points out, have risen 14.7 per cent. Luxury and regular cars, he says, have been holding their own, while "the smaller car accounts for the increase in the market."

Department of Transportation figures for 1972 put the per-mile cost of operating a standard car at 13.6 cents. This includes depreciation, maintenance, gasoline, insurance, etc. By comparison, a compact costs 10.8 cents and a subcompact 9.4 cents. Doing, say 15,000 miles a year, a small-car owner makes an annual saving of $630 using these figures over his neighbor with the standard model.

Then there is gasoline. Take the same two cars for comparison. A recent Environmental Protection Agency test saw a 4,000-pound Torino, loaded with optionals, get only 8.5 miles to the gallon. Minus air conditioning and "sensibly driven," a service-department official of a local Ford dealership insists, "you'll get 15 miles to the gallon."

In the EPA test Japan's 2,000-pound Datsun proved the most economical. It got better than 28 miles to the gallon. The record of the bigger Detroit models was generally classified as "dismal" by most commentators.

Also pushing small-car purchases is the fear of a gas-short future and increased fuel prices. At least three years of restricted supplies, perhaps more, is the general feeling in the industry. Costs, too, will rise to 50 cents, maybe even 60 cents a gallon, it is suggested.

Says a VW owner of the present situation. "I don't like it, but I'm not all that worried, either. I drive into a gas station and pull up under a sign which says 'Maximum purchase 10 gallons.' Then even if I'm empty and I fill up the tank right to the cap, the pump gauge still reads no more than nine gallons."

Among small-car manufacturers, Volkswagen has begun to stress gas shortages in its advertising. A TV commercial now shows a family leaving on vacation in their large family car, then turning back and taking their VW bug so that they can be sure to reach their destination.

"No doubt about it," says Robert Whitham, vice president of Volkswagen Brookline near here, "the gas shortage has been good to us."

Despite currency revaluations which have cut some competitive edge from imports, VW sales are on the upswing. Their miles-to-the-gallon capability remains impressively high despite emission-control systems, "and that's what counts with today's buyer," says Whitham.

Behind The News

Home Buyers Facing Mortgage Rate Woes

By MARTIN SKALA
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Higher mortgage rates may crimp the home-buying plans of many American families this fall.

Sharply rising interest rates and a tightening of lending terms by thrift institutions are going to push home-owning costs up more rapidly in the months ahead, home builders predict.

A tighter monetary policy on the part of the Federal Reserve, as well as reduced deposit flows into savings institutions, are forcing lenders to trim the availability of mortgage funds.

"Savings and loans will have to cut back their new mortgage commitments and raise rates sharply," says John Stafford, research director of the United States Savings and Loan League.

Moreover, the recent boost in interest rates paid to savers is forcing S&Ls and other banks to seek higher returns on mortgages. "If the S&Ls are going to have to pay 7 per cent for longer-term savings certificates, there's no way they can make 8 per cent mortgages at a profit," says Stafford.

Traditionally, the S&L industry has maintained a spread of 1½ percentage points between the cost of savings and average portfolio loan yields.

Since the beginning of the year, mortgage rates on home loans have advanced by about half a percentage point.

Although rates vary from region to region and are influenced by such factors as the borrower's income level and the amount of down payment, they now range between 8 and 8¼ per cent in many parts of the nation.

Some lenders predict that 9 per cent mortgages will not be uncommon before the end of the year.

On a $20,000 mortgage, each half a percent rise in interest costs the borrower close to $100 a year in additional payments.

In several states, including New York, New Jersey, and Minnesota, usury laws have placed a lid on residential mortgage rates. However, pressure to lift the usury-law ceilings is growing stronger. If they aren't changed, bankers say, funds for home mortgages will dry up as lenders move into more lucrative money-market instruments.

High-ratio conventional mortgages, which have had wide appeal among younger home buyers, are growing more costly, too. MGIC Investment Corporation, a leading insurer of 95 per cent mortgage loans, says that rates on low-down-payment loans are climbing into the 8¾ to 9 per cent range.

So far, MGIC vice president David Engelman sees "no evidence" that lenders are withdrawing from high-ratio mortgage financing.

By boosting interest rates paid to savers, S&Ls hope to avert "disintermediation" — a massive shift of funds away from savings institutions into higher-yielding money-market instruments.

Although disintermediation has not occurred yet, the threat that it might happen again is still very real, savings officials say.

Meanwhile, home builders are concerned that a rise in mortgage lending rates will produce a sharp downturn in housing starts. "The outlook is now very cloudy," says N. Rogg, executive director of the National Association of Home Builders.

The trade association has estimated that housing starts, which began slowing earlier this year, would total 2.1 million for 1973. The 1974 preliminary forecast, which is not yet official, suggests that starts could drop below 1.8 million if there is a long bout of tight money.

Food Costs A Growing Problem

By LUCIA MOUAT
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "I haven't got the money to stock up on food — if prices go any higher, I'm afraid we'll starve," says a Los Angeles working mother who supports three young children.

"The freeze did no good; some people just eat more macaroni," remarks a Chicago suburbanite standing in line for a 99-cents-a-pound Lake Superior whitefish sale in a downtown market.

"I'm lucky there are only two of us to feed," sighs an elderly Arlington, Va., shopper as she fingers a $2.09-a-pound package of cube steak and decides to leave it lying on the meat counter. "We used to buy Delmonicos . . ." she adds wistfully.

While the Watergate hearings droned on, many Americans still found that personally the state of the nation most directly affecting them was the high cost of eating which hits them square in the billfold three times a day.

Most are aware that in general food prices can be expected to shoot even higher than they are now.

It is a sobering thought for those who laughed at the imposition of a ceiling on meat prices March 29 and the June 13 freeze on processed food on grounds that prices already were out of sight.

Although both the shortage and the price factor logically could spur hoarding, by week's end there was little systematic indication.

Shoppers interviewed had a variety of explanations ranging from lack of money to lack of storage space.

"For my money there isn't anything worth hoarding anyway," commented Herta Kugler of Chicago, seizing the opportunity to complain about the deteriorating quality of food available. "Red-meat animals and poultry are force-fed, and fruits and vegetables are picked green for marketing convenience."

Virtually everyone questioned by Monitor reporters in Los Angeles, Chicago, and Washington confessed to having changed their eating and food-planning habits.

Some eat smaller portions of the same kinds of meats they bought before, while others keep a closer eye out for meat sales or find substitutes altogether. Many, of course, have their own gardens.

"Only the dog eats meat anymore," says one Los Angeles working mother who supports one son.

"I bought hot dogs the other night for the first time in eight years of married life," said one Fairfax County, Va., housewife.

One young Washington miss who formerly bought "anything I really wanted" now carries a little red dollars-and-cents counter so she can tote up her expenses before she arrives at the checkout counter. What "woke" her up, she says, was the shift she noticed in the same store of romaine lettuce from 39 cents to 79 cents a pound.

The food-price problem is universal if nothing else. While some ghetto dwellers in Chicago found the better quality and prices in central and suburban markets still worth the bus fare, most shoppers queried said the expense in gas and time and the small differences in food prices had virtually wiped out comparison shipping for them.

One housewife in rural Missouri reported that the price on lettuce there was the standard 79 cents a head and a pound of chicken was going for the usual high of 59 to 69 cents.

Will housewives every boycott again?

"I don't anticipate an August boycott of any kind, but I won't answer for fall," says Sandy DeMent of the National Consumers Congress (NCC) which grew out of the original meat boycott earlier this year.

Few shoppers have missed the poignant pictures of baby chicks being drowned because farmers cannot afford to pay the high cost of feed to raise them. They are similarly aware of the hard facts of price stories being told about the slaughter of dairy cows and of female hogs, which would ordinarily be saved for breeding. They have heard all the tales of packinghouse close-downs.

Still, as Mrs. Erma Angevine, executive director of the Consumer Federation of America, puts it, "Many of us aren't sure in our own minds whether these shortages are real or being made visible to make us accept the higher prices. No one is really sure . . . the Agriculture Department has no credibility with consumers."

The food industry, of course, insists that the shortage reports are all very real — a direct result of the freeze — and likely to become more so.

Just this past week, for the first time, food-chain stores were put on a quota system whereby they will receive only about 60 per cent of the orders they place for pork and chicken.

The American Meat Institute estimates that beef production may drop 2 per cent this year.

However, amid the grim news on the food-price front this past week, there was at least one hopeful sign. The Department of Agriculture has predicted strong increases (as much as 6 per cent over 1972) in soybean, wheat, and feed-grain crops in spite of this year's shortages in fuel and fertilizer. Predictions are that more broiler chickens will be coming by August or September, eggs by fall, and pork by 1974.

Much still depends, however, on such variables as weather, transportation, and Phase 4. In general, the food industry is adamant on the subject of administration controls.

"In attempting to hold down prices by the freeze, they've discouraged production," says Tom Wheeler of the Grocery Manufacturers of America.

The fact uppermost in many shoppers' thoughts is that they are paying considerably more for food than they were, and that is ample cause for their concern.

Some shoppers were not complaining, however, and had little patience with those who were.

"I think we live better and eat better now than they did years ago," says Mrs. Anna Dabasinskas, a Chicagoan of Lithuanian background on social security. "I used to eat chicken necks years ago when food was cheap, but wages were so terribly low then. Now many working people don't care how much a TV (set) costs or dinner out, but they holler up a storm when meat goes up 10 cents a pound."

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The executive and legislative branches of government were locked at week's end in a rare confrontation over White House papers and tape recordings that could resolve questions raised during the Senate Watergate hearings.

It appeared to be up to the government's third branch — the judiciary — to act as referee in the standoff.

President Nixon's argument in withholding the papers and tape recordings of White House staff meetings and phone conversations is based on the Constitution's "separation of powers" doctrine. He said his office does not have to comply with the court subpoenas asking for the material.

Cox told Chief U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica that the tapes were "highly material to the grand jury investigation" because they involved individuals who allegedly took part in the Watergate coverup or committed perjury. At Cox's request, Sirica signed an order giving the White House until 10 a.m. EDT Aug. 7 to show cause why it should not be ordered to turn over the tapes.

Nixon did offer to give the Senate Watergate Committee some documents "that can properly be made public" if the committee would ask for them specifically, but Chairman Sam Ervin, D-N.C., said that was impossible.

"We are not clairvoyants, since we have never seen the documents," Ervin said. The tapes sought by the committee concern conversations Nixon had with his former counsel, John Dean, from Sept. 15, 1972, through March 21, 1973.

Dean alone has testified that the President indicated he knew of cover-up efforts following the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic headquarters. Nixon has said he knew nothing of the coverup until March 21.

No one doubted that the issue would have to be settled ultimately by the Supreme Court, which is in recess until Oct. 1. Some legal experts predicted the case could reach the court within 60 to 90 days, and that Chief Justice Warren E. Burger might call a special session if necessary.

Nixon thus became the first President since Thomas Jefferson in 1807 to be subpoenaed— and the first ever to defy a subpoena.

The constitutional battle over the White House tapes raged while former White House aide John D. Ehrlichman, the highest ranking Nixon administration official to testify before the Watergate Committee so far, endured four days of tough questioning. He steadfastly refused to implicate either himself or the President in the break-in or the cover-up.

In fact, during Ehrlichman's third day of denials, some on the committee told him they just could not believe him.

Ehrlichman insisted that it "didn't dawn on me" that a Watergate cover-up was under way in the White House.

"You mean to tell me," asked an exasperated Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., before a national televison audience, "that you, as one of the highest officials in the land, sat there in the White House after authorizing the sum of $350,000 to pay for lawyers fees, bail bond and everything else on this cover-up, supremely ignorant that you were obstructing justice?"

"I didn't feel any kind of a cover-up was going on at that time. It just didn't dawn on me," Ehrlichman told the committee.

"I bought hot dogs the other night for the first time in eight years of married life," said one Fairfax County, Va., housewife.

One young Washington miss who formerly bought "anything I really wanted" now carries a little red dollars-and-cents counter so she can tote up her expenses before she arrives at the checkout counter. What "woke" her up, she says, was the shift she noticed in the same store of romaine lettuce from 39 cents to 79 cents a pound.

The food-price problem is universal if nothing else. While some ghetto dwellers in Chicago found the better quality and prices in central and suburban markets still worth the bus fare, most shoppers queried said the expense in gas and time and the small differences in food prices had virtually wiped out comparison shipping for them.

One housewife in rural Missouri reported that the price on lettuce there was the standard 79 cents a head and a pound of chicken was going for the usual high of 59 to 69 cents.

Will housewives every boycott again?

"I don't anticipate an August boycott of any kind, but I won't answer for fall," says Sandy DeMent of the National Consumers Congress (NCC) which grew out of the original meat boycott earlier this year.

Few shoppers have missed the poignant pictures of baby chicks being drowned because farmers cannot afford to pay the high cost of feed to raise them. They are similarly aware of the hard facts of price stories being told about the slaughter of dairy cows and of female hogs, which would ordinarily be saved for breeding. They have heard all the tales of packinghouse close-downs.

Still, as Mrs. Erma Angevine, executive director of the Consumer Federation of America, puts it, "Many of us aren't sure in our own minds whether these shortages are real or being made visible to make us accept the higher prices. No one is really sure . . . the Agriculture Department has no credibility with consumers."

The food industry, of course, insists that the shortage reports are all very real — a direct result of the freeze — and likely to become more so.

Just this past week, for the first time, food-chain stores were put on a quota system whereby they will receive only about 60 per cent of the orders they place for pork and chicken.

The American Meat Institute estimates that beef production may drop 2 per cent this year.

However, amid the grim news on the food-price front this past week, there was at least one hopeful sign. The Department of Agriculture has predicted strong increases (as much as 6 per cent over 1972) in soybean, wheat, and feed-grain crops in spite of this year's shortages in fuel and fertilizer. Predictions are that more broiler chickens will be coming by August or September, eggs by fall, and pork by 1974.

Much still depends, however, on such variables as weather, transportation, and Phase 4. In general, the food industry is adamant on the subject of administration controls.

"In attempting to hold down prices by the freeze, they've discouraged production," says Tom Wheeler of the Grocery Manufacturers of America.

The fact uppermost in many shoppers' thoughts is that they are paying considerably more for food than they were, and that is ample cause for their concern.

Some shoppers were not complaining, however, and had little patience with those who were.

"I think we live better and eat better now than they did years ago," says Mrs. Anna Dabasinskas, a Chicagoan of Lithuanian background on social security. "I used to eat chicken necks years ago when food was cheap, but wages were so terribly low then. Now many working people don't care how much a TV (set) costs or dinner out, but they holler up a storm when meat goes up 10 cents a pound."

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The executive and legislative branches of government were locked at week's end in a rare confrontation over White House papers and tape recordings that could resolve questions raised during the Senate Watergate hearings.

It appeared to be up to the government's third branch — the judiciary — to act as referee in the standoff.

President Nixon's argument in withholding the papers and tape recordings of White House staff meetings and phone conversations is based on the Constitution's "separation of powers" doctrine. He said his office does not have to comply with the court subpoenas asking for the material.

Cox told Chief U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica that the tapes were "highly material to the grand jury investigation" because they involved individuals who allegedly took part in the Watergate coverup or committed perjury. At Cox's request, Sirica signed an order giving the White House until 10 a.m. EDT Aug. 7 to show cause why it should not be ordered to turn over the tapes.

Nixon did offer to give the Senate Watergate Committee some documents "that can properly be made public" if the committee would ask for them specifically, but Chairman Sam Ervin, D-N.C., said that was impossible.

"We are not clairvoyants, since we have never seen the documents," Ervin said. The tapes sought by the committee concern conversations Nixon had with his former counsel, John Dean, from Sept. 15, 1972, through March 21, 1973.

Dean alone has testified that the President indicated he knew of cover-up efforts following the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic headquarters. Nixon has said he knew nothing of the coverup until March 21.

No one doubted that the issue would have to be settled ultimately by the Supreme Court, which is in recess until Oct. 1. Some legal experts predicted the case could reach the court within 60 to 90 days, and that Chief Justice Warren E. Burger might call a special session if necessary.

Nixon thus became the first President since Thomas Jefferson in 1807 to be subpoenaed— and the first ever to defy a subpoena.

The constitutional battle over the White House tapes raged while former White House aide John D. Ehrlichman, the highest ranking Nixon administration official to testify before the Watergate Committee so far, endured four days of tough questioning. He steadfastly refused to implicate either himself or the President in the break-in or the cover-up.

In fact, during Ehrlichman's third day of denials, some on the committee told him they just could not believe him.

Ehrlichman insisted that it "didn't dawn on me" that a Watergate cover-up was under way in the White House.

"You mean to tell me," asked an exasperated Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., before a national televison audience, "that you, as one of the highest officials in the land, sat there in the White House after authorizing the sum of $350,000 to pay for lawyers fees, bail bond and everything else on this cover-up, supremely ignorant that you were obstructing justice?"

"I didn't feel any kind of a cover-up was going on at that time. It just didn't dawn on me," Ehrlichman told the committee.

Behind The News

Home Buyers Facing Mortgage Rate Woes

By MARTIN SKALA
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Higher mortgage rates may crimp the home-buying plans of many American families this fall.

Sharply rising interest rates and a tightening of lending terms by thrift institutions are going to push home-owning costs up more rapidly in the months ahead, home builders predict.

A tighter monetary policy on the part of the Federal Reserve, as well as reduced deposit flows into savings institutions, are forcing lenders to trim the availability of mortgage funds.

"Savings and loans will have to cut back their new mortgage commitments and raise rates sharply," says John Stafford, research director of the United States Savings and Loan League.

Moreover, the recent boost in interest rates paid to savers is forcing S&Ls and other banks to seek higher returns on mortgages. "If the S&Ls are going to have to pay 7 per cent for longer-term savings certificates, there's no way they can make 8 per cent mortgages at a profit," says Stafford.

Traditionally, the S&L industry has maintained a spread of 1½ percentage points between the cost of savings and average portfolio loan yields.

Since the beginning of the year, mortgage rates on home loans have advanced by about half a percentage point.

Although rates vary from region to region and are influenced by such factors as the borrower's income level and the amount of down payment, they now range between 8 and 8¼ per cent in many parts of the nation.

Some lenders predict that 9 per cent mortgages will not be uncommon before the end of the year.

On a $20,000 mortgage, each half a percent rise in interest costs the borrower close to $100 a year in additional payments.

In several states, including New York, New Jersey, and Minnesota, usury laws have placed a lid on residential mortgage rates. However, pressure to lift the usury-law ceilings is growing stronger. If they aren't changed, bankers say, funds for home mortgages will dry up as lenders move into more lucrative money-market instruments.

High-ratio conventional mortgages, which have had wide appeal among younger home buyers, are growing more costly, too. MGIC Investment Corporation, a leading insurer of 95 per cent mortgage loans, says that rates on low-down-payment loans are climbing into the 8¾ to 9 per cent range.

So far, MGIC vice president David Engelman sees "no evidence" that lenders are withdrawing from high-ratio mortgage financing.

By boosting interest rates paid to savers, S&Ls hope to avert "disintermediation" — a massive shift of funds away from savings institutions into higher-yielding money-market instruments.

Although disintermediation has not occurred yet, the threat that it might happen again is still very real, savings officials say.

Meanwhile, home builders are concerned that a rise in mortgage lending rates will produce a sharp downturn in housing starts. "The outlook is now very cloudy," says N. Rogg, executive director of the National Association of Home Builders.

The trade association has estimated that housing starts, which began slowing earlier this year, would total 2.1 million for 1973. The 1974 preliminary forecast, which is not yet official, suggests that starts could drop below 1.8 million if there is a long bout of tight money.

THE LAST WORD

Change Of Direction Is Urged In Volunteer Work By Women

By BARBARA HOSMER

Volunteer work has been such a normal part of women's lives in Marin that you wouldn't think it could become controversial. But it is.

A June editorial in the Civic Center's unofficial newsletter by Maurine Ballard brings the issue home to roost. She quotes a resolution the National Organization for Women passed at its 1971 national conference which, in sum, calls for distinguishing between "voluntary activities which serve to maintain women's dependent status," on one hand, from "change-directed activities which lead to ore active participation in the decision-making process" by women on the other.

The resolution called for raising awareness of women who volunteer so that "they may use their volunteer power to change policies detrimental to the interests of women" and for NOW itself to continue discussion to develop its views on volunteerism by women.

NOW views the "service-volunteering" system as a reinforcement of women's traditional secondary and dependent status, saying it "extends women's traditional nurturing, supporting, healing role in the home to encompass all community ills, it is an extension of unpaid household work and reinforces economic dependence of women by preventing them from earning money through paid work." The resolution reasoning further states, "humanitarianism for some on the backs of others ends by being exploitation," meaning that women have traditionally helped others while they themselves have remained subordinate in opportunity and status.

Maurine Ballard's editorial is titled, "Volunteers can heed NOW's call to arms and still serve Marin's Probation Department." She states that Probation Department volunteers work closely with paid staff "to supplement rehabilitative efforts" and are given "a minimum of pencil-sharpening assignments."

The Ballard editorial continues, "If NOW really believes that women should only volunteer in action programs to change the position of women, this in itself seems somewhat limited and discriminatory. Surely there are other programs in our society that need volunteer action for changes too. Can't probation volunteers be alerted to assist for 'change' in the lives of those under probation supervision?"

NOW's task force on volunteerism's case:

As a group, women have been expected to serve others while their own status has remained secondary, limited in work opportunity and community policy decision-making. This tradition of non-paid service has been a substitute for opportunity in the working world and has helped keep women economically dependent. If the work women perform as volunteers is truly valuable to society why cannot it be paid for? If not, it may be "busy work."

Further, NOW has pointed out, volunteers increasingly are being used in the very job areas —mainly teaching and social services — in which women traditionally have made the greatest gains in paid work, and by far the most volunteers are women.

Thus, as a group, women are "paying" for the cutbacks in social service and education by state and federal governments budgets by taking up the slack for free, and may be removing from the job market jobs in the very areas that would most likely employ large numbers of women. It is as if governments and private agencies want to continue and to expand their services but are unwilling to find ways to pay the cost. Through nationwide recruitment stemming from the National Center for Voluntary Action, women, and to a lesser extent, men are sought to volunteer to teach and perform social services at the same time that the nation has a surplus of unemployed trained social workers and teachers, and at federal impetus filtering down to programs here.

The distinction between volunteering to serve others and volunteering to create real changes NOW summarizes as one woman who volunteers as a part of "woman's place" while another volunteers to change "woman's place."

While we called this a "controversy," it is not one in the traditional sense. It is not a quarrel with volunteers themselves. Women are discussing with a growing awareness the volunteer system's effects upon themselves and others. Recognizing that it is a tough subject to clarify, NOW's Marin chapter has remained low-keyed on this issue while opening an informal dialogue with other Marin women and the Volunteer Bureau on the ramifications of volunteerism as a system. And Maurine Ballard's editorial, in the same spirit, ends with a squib seeking other women's views relating to the Probation Department's volunteer program.

The conversation has been opened in Marin but the last word on it is a long way off.

Ships, Seas Are Subjects Of Larkspur Woman Artist

By BETTY FROST

The sea and historic ships that once sailed on it are the subjects for oil paintings executed by Jeanne Lopache of Larkspur.

The romantic clipper ships of the past sail through deep and foamy waters in a dozen handsome paintings in Mrs. Lopache's studio. The first step in achieving the true-to-life ship portraits is solid scholarship.

The artist, who has a large personal library on old ships, does painstaking research on the ship she has selected to paint. She studies the log of the ship when it is available, and has consulted with such marine historians as Charles Bateson of Australia, who is the author of university texts on the subject, and the late Edgar L. Bloomster of San Francisco, author of the encyclopedia of ships, "Sailing and Small Craft Down the Ages."

Much research has been accomplished under the direction of Austin Keegan at the Main Library in San Francisco. Librarian Keegan is a descendant of sea captains and has a lifelong interest in old ships, the artist explained. She is also frequently in correspondence with the Peabody Museum in Massachusetts.

In the completed work, the ship is authentic down to the last detail. The standing rigging, running rigging, ratlines, and complicated sail plan of the original ship are faithfully reproduced. Mr. Mrs. research condensing the history of the ship is organized into a booklet, which accompanies the painting.

THE PAINTED ships ply an unusual painted ocean. When Jeanne Lopache was a student of Laurence V. Burton of Scarsdale, N.Y., the artist, teacher and art critic made her observe the ocean day after day.

"I looked at the stupid water until I was sick of it," she recalled," but I learned how the sea's opaqueness reflects the colors of the sun, how the organisms in the water and the sand boiling up in the waves change it, and the color indicates the ocean's depth.

She has developed a near-third dimensional quality to the water in her paintings, and the waves and froth change when lighted from different angles. "I want it to look like water. I want the viewer to reach out to touch it and get his finger wet," she said earnestly.

For a number of years the artist specialized in seascapes. One day a family friend, Capt. Ray Morrow of Eureka, whose ancestors had been shipbuilders, said, "Jeanne, your seas are magnificent, but to me the most beautiful thing in the world is a mighty Clipper Ship with full canvas plying the sea." This remark launched the Larkspur woman into her present specialty.

She signs her work "Lopache," with a French accent on the "E," and the name is pronounced "Low-pah-shay." "Many people think that Lopache must be a man," she said, "because it is unusual for a woman to be so interested in old ships.

The artist is a native of California, and grew up in Huntington Beach, where her father was city attorney. Her maiden name was Parrish, and she is a distant relative of the famous artist, Maxfield Parrish. She is a graduate of the University of Southern California and is married to George Lopache, who is the buyer of sporting goods for a firm in San Francisco.

THE COUPLE has lived in Larkspur for six years and in the Bay Area for over 20 years. Mrs. Lopache was employed as a corporation secretary for an insurance brokerage firm, Everett W. Stark and Company, in San Francisco. Since moving to Marin, she assists with secretarial work at the Golden Gate Insurance Center, Inc. in Corte Madera and her work is with the marine division.

The Lopaches like to travel, but prefer to fly. Despite all of her sea expertise, Mrs. Lopache fears that she might get seasick on a long voyage.

One of Mrs. Lopache's hobbies is interior decorating, and she sometimes advises friends who ask her help. She also enjoys the swimming pool at her home.

"Sometimes I use the pool to make waves," the artist said. "When I am painting and I want to get the right treatment for the water, I just splash until I've worked it out."

Sharing the family home is a friendly Sheltie dog, Laddie.

An exhibit of a dozen of the artist's paintings will be held in the Atrium Gallery of the Ross Valley Medical Clinic in Greenbrae from Aug. 3 to Sept. 7. Ship models done by Dr. Robert Alderson of Greenbrae, will also be displayed. The gallery is open from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturdays.

Mrs. Lopache is a member of the Society of Western Artists, the San Francisco Museum of Art, and the Marin Society of Artists.

Lydia Romero Marries Richard Jon Tiedman

St. Gregory's Catholic Church in San Mateo was the setting for the wedding of Lydia Kay Romero of San Rafael to Richard Jon Tiedman, also of San Rafael.

Mrs. Sandi Gum of Davis was matron of honor for the July 21 ceremony, and the bridesmaids were Deanna Faezi of San Francisco and Karen Fisher of Daly City, sister of the bridegroom.

Robert Orlandi Jr. of San Rafael served as best man, and Roland le Vacque of Novato was the usher.

The couple will live in San Rafael after their wedding trip to the Sierra.

Lydia is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gregorio Romero of San Mateo, and her husband's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Fisher of Daly City.

The bride is a graduate of Immaculate Conception Academy in San Francisco and the University of California at Davis. She is self employed as a graphic arts designer at Tectonics II in San Rafael.

She is the sister of Lucien Romero of Pacifica.

Richard is a graduate of Petaluma High School and he served with the Marine Corps. He is employed by Close-Orlandi Body and Fender Co. in San Rafael.

Marin Yachters Met In Hawaii

By MOLLY MARIN

Wives and children of Marin yachtsmen flew to Honolulu last week to welcome their sailors as they finished the Trans-Pac Race at the Alawai Yacht Club.

The mainlanders were shown island hospitality by the boats' Hawaiian volunteer sponsors, according to Mrs. Leonard Delmas of San Rafael, who was there with her four daughters to welcome her husband.

When Delmas and another San Rafael resident, Ted Schoonmaker, arrived aboard Lightning the ship's sponsor "brought the party on board" with drinks in coconut shells and lots of leis for the weary crew.

An hour later the yacht owned and skippered by William L. Stewart III of San Rafael docked and the party moved over there.

Mrs. Henry Grandin Jr. of Ross was waiting when her husband berthed their Tinsley Light with their children, Steve, Michael and Laurel aboard.

Mrs. Mervin Shenson of Loch Lomond awaited Dr. Shenson and their son, Hal, on the Panacea.

Dr. Maurice Smith, Dr. David Jesberg and David Allen, all of Belvedere; and Rolfe Croker, Everett Witzel, and Frank Abbott, all of Tiburon, were greeted by their wives.

The Victor Breeden family from Belvedere Lagoon were vacationing in Hawaii and greeted the boats as they arrived. Victor Breeden Jr. with a crew had sailed the family yacht to Honolulu.

Later each sponsor gave a party at his home for "his" boat's crew and their families. Many parties were held that week, and many owners took their sponsors out for a restful day of cruising.

Vicarious (rigged with a temporary mast), owned by Dr. David Jesberg of Belvedere, barely arrived in time for her crew to attend the trophy dinner at the Ilikai Hotel on July 20.

The following Sunday all the competitors and their families were invited to a gala all-day party at the Kaneohe Yacht Club which included swimming, Hawaiian entertainment, small boat racing and dinner dancing.

MR. AND Mrs. Curt Schaible of Novato are entertaining family friends from Europe, Mr. and Mrs. Josef Altherr of Backnang, Germany. While the Altherrs are here for three weeks they will accompany the Schaibles to their vacation home at Lake Tahoe and to Disneyland. They will also go to the California State Aquanauts competition in Ukiah, where the Schaibles' sons, Curt Jr., 12, and Craig, 9, will be competing on Aug. 4 and 5 as two of the representatives of the Novato Aquanauts team.

HOUSE GUESTS of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Shiro in Mill Valley are Mr. and Mrs. Michael Vanattenhoven of Ziechem, Belgium. The Shiros' daughter, Evelyn, stayed with the Vanattenhovens during the 1970-71 school year, when she was the American Field Service exchange student from Tamalpais High School. The visitors will make their headquarters with the Mill Valley family and take side trips to points of interest in California. Evelyn is now a student at the University of California at Santa Cruz.

A YEAR in Grenoble, France, is the happy prospect for Cheryl McCarthy of Mill Valley, who will stay with the family of M. and Mme. Adrien Gay in Grenoble, while attending the lycee' in the French town. Cheryl, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis McCarthy of Mill Valley, is a June graduate of Tamalpais High School and will be the Tamalpais Chapter of the American Field Service's student abroad. She will leave for New York on Aug. 20, where she will have a brief orientation session at the AFS headquarters. She will leave for France on a chartered plane with other American students bound for France. All will go to an orientation camp at Saint Maurice for a week of instruction in language and customs. Then she will join the Gays, who have a home in the town of Grenoble and a country home in Crest, some 50 miles away. Cheryl, who will have her 17th birthday while at Saint Maurice, loves to swim, ski and ride horseback. All of these activities are available at Grenoble, and are also favorite activities of the host family. Grenoble was the site of the Winter Olympics in 1968.

The artist, who has a large personal library on old ships, does painstaking research on the ship she has selected to paint. She studies the log of the ship when it is available, and has consulted with such marine historians as Charles Bateson of Australia, who is the author of university texts on the subject, and the late Edgar L. Bloomster of San Francisco, author of the encyclopedia of ships, "Sailing and Small Craft Down the Ages."

Much research has been accomplished under the direction of Austin Keegan at the Main Library in San Francisco. Librarian Keegan is a descendant of sea captains and has a lifelong interest in old ships, the artist explained. She is also frequently in correspondence with the Peabody Museum in Massachusetts.

In the completed work, the ship is authentic down to the last detail. The standing rigging, running rigging, ratlines, and complicated sail plan of the original ship are faithfully reproduced. Mr. Mrs. research condensing the history of the ship is organized into a booklet, which accompanies the painting.

THE PAINTED ships ply an unusual painted ocean. When Jeanne Lopache was a student of Laurence V. Burton of Scarsdale, N.Y., the artist, teacher and art critic made her observe the ocean day after day.

"I looked at the stupid water until I was sick of it," she recalled," but I learned how the sea's opaqueness reflects the colors of the sun, how the organisms in the water and the sand boiling up in the waves change it, and the color indicates the ocean's depth.

She has developed a near-third dimensional quality to the water in her paintings, and the waves and froth change when lighted from different angles. "I want it to look like water. I want the viewer to reach out to touch it and get his finger wet," she said earnestly.

For a number of years the artist specialized in seascapes. One day a family friend, Capt. Ray Morrow of Eureka, whose ancestors had been shipbuilders, said, "Jeanne, your seas are magnificent, but to me the most beautiful thing in the world is a mighty Clipper Ship with full canvas plying the sea." This remark launched the Larkspur woman into her present specialty.

She signs her work "Lopache," with a French accent on the "E," and the name is pronounced "Low-pah-shay." "Many people think that Lopache must be a man," she said, "because it is unusual for a woman to be so interested in old ships.

The artist is a native of California, and grew up in Huntington Beach, where her father was city attorney. Her maiden name was Parrish, and she is a distant relative of the famous artist, Maxfield Parrish. She is a graduate of the University of Southern California and is married to George Lopache, who is the buyer of sporting goods for a firm in San Francisco.

THE COUPLE has lived in Larkspur for six years and in the Bay Area for over 20 years. Mrs. Lopache was employed as a corporation secretary for an insurance brokerage firm, Everett W. Stark and Company, in San Francisco. Since moving to Marin, she assists with secretarial work at the Golden Gate Insurance Center, Inc. in Corte Madera and her work is with the marine division.

The Lopaches like to travel, but prefer to fly. Despite all of her sea expertise, Mrs. Lopache fears that she might get seasick on a long voyage.

One of Mrs. Lopache's hobbies is interior decorating, and she sometimes advises friends who ask her help. She also enjoys the swimming pool at her home.

"Sometimes I use the pool to make waves," the artist said. "When I am painting and I want to get the right treatment for the water, I just splash until I've worked it out."

An exhibit of a dozen of the artist's paintings will be held in the Atrium Gallery of the Ross Valley Medical Clinic in Greenbrae from Aug. 3 to Sept. 7. Ship models done by Dr. Robert Alderson of Greenbrae, will also be displayed. The gallery is open from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturdays.

Mrs. Lopache is a member of the Society of Western Artists, the San Francisco Museum of Art, and the Marin Society of Artists.

Lydia Romero Marries Richard Jon Tiedman

St. Gregory's Catholic Church in San Mateo was the setting for the wedding of Lydia Kay Romero of San Rafael to Richard Jon Tiedman, also of San Rafael.

Mrs. Sandi Gum of Davis was matron of honor for the July 21 ceremony, and the bridesmaids were Deanna Faezi of San Francisco and Karen Fisher of Daly City, sister of the bridegroom.

Robert Orlandi Jr. of San Rafael served as best man, and Roland le Vacque of Novato was the usher.

The couple will live in San Rafael after their wedding trip to the Sierra.

Lydia is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gregorio Romero of San Mateo, and her husband's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Fisher of Daly City.

The bride is a graduate of Immaculate Conception Academy in San Francisco and the University of California at Davis. She is self employed as a graphic arts designer at Tectonics II in San Rafael.

Richard is a graduate of Petaluma High School and he served with the Marine Corps. He is employed by Close-Orlandi Body and Fender Co. in San Rafael.

Marin Yachters Met In Hawaii

By MOLLY MARIN

Wives and children of Marin yachtsmen flew to Honolulu last week to welcome their sailors as they finished the Trans-Pac Race at the Alawai Yacht Club.

The mainlanders were shown island hospitality by the boats' Hawaiian volunteer sponsors, according to Mrs. Leonard Delmas of San Rafael, who was there with her four daughters to welcome her husband.

When Delmas and another San Rafael resident, Ted Schoonmaker, arrived aboard Lightning the ship's sponsor "brought the party on board" with drinks in coconut shells and lots of leis for the weary crew.

An hour later the yacht owned and skippered by William L. Stewart III of San Rafael docked and the party moved over there.

Mrs. Henry Grandin Jr. of Ross was waiting when her husband berthed their Tinsley Light with their children, Steve, Michael and Laurel aboard.

Mrs. Mervin Shenson of Loch Lomond awaited Dr. Shenson and their son, Hal, on the Panacea.

Dr. Maurice Smith, Dr. David Jesberg and David Allen, all of Belvedere; and Rolfe Croker, Everett Witzel, and Frank Abbott, all of Tiburon, were greeted by their wives.

The Victor Breeden family from Belvedere Lagoon were vacationing in Hawaii and greeted the boats as they arrived. Victor Breeden Jr. with a crew had sailed the family yacht to Honolulu.

Later each sponsor gave a party at his home for "his" boat's crew and their families. Many parties were held that week, and many owners took their sponsors out for a restful day of cruising.

Vicarious (rigged with a temporary mast), owned by Dr. David Jesberg of Belvedere, barely arrived in time for her crew to attend the trophy dinner at the Ilikai Hotel on July 20.

The following Sunday all the competitors and their families were invited to a gala all-day party at the Kaneohe Yacht Club which included swimming, Hawaiian entertainment, small boat racing and dinner dancing.

MR. AND Mrs. Curt Schaible of Novato are entertaining family friends from Europe, Mr. and Mrs. Josef Altherr of Backnang, Germany. While the Altherrs are here for three weeks they will accompany the Schaibles to their vacation home at Lake Tahoe and to Disneyland. They will also go to the California State Aquanauts competition in Ukiah, where the Schaibles' sons, Curt Jr., 12, and Craig, 9, will be competing on Aug. 4 and 5 as two of the representatives of the Novato Aquanauts team.

HOUSE GUESTS of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Shiro in Mill Valley are Mr. and Mrs. Michael Vanattenhoven of Ziechem, Belgium. The Shiros' daughter, Evelyn, stayed with the Vanattenhovens during the 1970-71 school year, when she was the American Field Service exchange student from Tamalpais High School. The visitors will make their headquarters with the Mill Valley family and take side trips to points of interest in California. Evelyn is now a student at the University of California at Santa Cruz.

A YEAR in Grenoble, France, is the happy prospect for Cheryl McCarthy of Mill Valley, who will stay with the family of M. and Mme. Adrien Gay in Grenoble, while attending the lycee' in the French town. Cheryl, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis McCarthy of Mill Valley, is a June graduate of Tamalpais High School and will be the Tamalpais Chapter of the American Field Service's student abroad. She will leave for New York on Aug. 20, where she will have a brief orientation session at the AFS headquarters. She will leave for France on a chartered plane with other American students bound for France. All will go to an orientation camp at Saint Maurice for a week of instruction in language and customs. Then she will join the Gays, who have a home in the town of Grenoble and a country home in Crest, some 50 miles away. Cheryl, who will have her 17th birthday while at Saint Maurice, loves to swim, ski and ride horseback. All of these activities are available at Grenoble, and are also favorite activities of the host family. Grenoble was the site of the Winter Olympics in 1968.

SAN JUAN Bautista was the first stop for Mr. and Mrs. Robert Churchill of Novato, who were among the guests of Income Equities Corp. executives Kevin Fitzgerald and Thaer Benjamin of San Francisco on July 14. They boarded

Volunteers For Oral History Project Needed

Volunteers to assist with interviewing long-time residents of Mill Valley are needed to help with the Mill Valley Oral History Project.

A meeting of the project committee is scheduled tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in the board room of the Mill Valley public library. Those interested in the work are invited to attend.

Mrs. Robert Andresen has been elected chairman, and Mrs. Leo Killion, secretary.

Long-term goal of the project is to make tapes and transcripts of pioneer residents available for historical research.

SEW SIMPLE

Altering Skirt Patterns Is Easy

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

I notice that most of the newer skirts are cut with more fullness than what I would call a straight skirt. I have been saving so many patterns that I love; the bodices are perfect. Is there any way I can change the skirts so that they still fit smooth at the waist, but flare out softly near the hem?

BETTY J.

DEAR BETTY,

There is a rather simple way to change the skirts you are referring to and it doesn't require a course in drafting, just a little courage. First, divide the skirt front and back into four equal parts, beginning with the straight center, front and center back seam and fold.

Second, slash the pattern on the lines you have drawn, cutting them to within ¼-inch of the outer edge of the pattern at the waistline. Place the center front or seamline for the center back on the straight grain of your fabric. Lastly, spread each of the strips you have slashed apart according to the width you desire for your new skirt. This may be from very little to a complete circle. (If you had a dart on the front or back section, or both, you will find that as you spread the pattern apart, it is possible to eliminate the dart by lapping the stitching lines of the darts over each other without distorting the pattern.)

If you feel insecure the first time you do any major changing of a pattern, try the skirt only on a very inexpensive piece of fabric or a piece of lining fabric. You will find that you can not only save money on the purchase price of the pattern, but once you have worked out a pattern experiment, you will have more courage to make these minor changes again.

The most frequently asked questions in past months have been concerning buttonholes, both machine-made and bound buttonholes. The problems seem to be caused because of working with knit fabrics. The stretch factor causes problems that didn't occur before. I shall try to answer your questions in this column. Please save it for future reference.

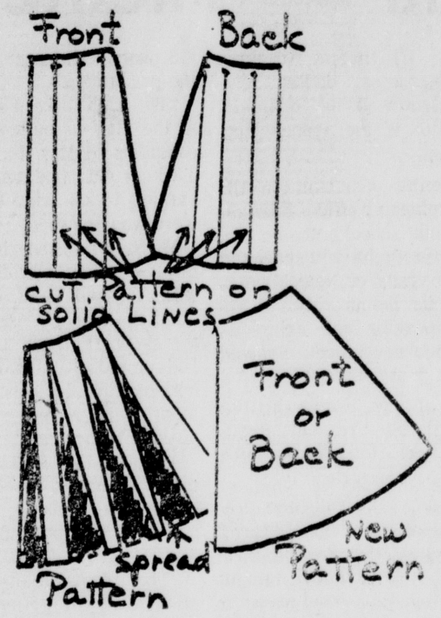
When making bound buttonholes (used in woven fabrics only, I wouldn't recommend making bound buttonholes in knit fabrics), you must never make the buttonholes through the interfacing. No matter how careful you are, when the buttonholes are completed, the interfacing will become shorter causing the front of your garment to look puckered.

I prefer placing a narrow strip of organdy or lightweight underlining fabric under the section for your buttonholes, after they have been completed on the right front of your garment (before applying the facing) cut the stabilizing fabric away from around each buttonhole, eliminating this pulled look. Press the buttonholes from the wrong side. Now you may apply your interfacing.

After it has been carefully basted in place, pin around each buttonhole and cut away a rectangle of the interfacing under each buttonhole large enough to allow you to pull the welts to the back of the interfacing. This will always eliminate the bulk of the buttonhole and you will never see an indentation of the welts when future pressing is done.

If you would like a copy of my step-by-step instructions for bound buttonholes send a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request for this free leaflet to Eunice Farmer in care of this newspaper.

Making buttonholes in knits is a whole new ballgame. They are usually done on the machine and once again, the buttonholes must be stabilized with a lightweight underlining fabric. Since machine buttonholes are made after the garment is completed and made through the facing all at one time, it is important that you cut a separate piece of interfacing that won't become too tight after buttonholes have been made. I have found that cutting the interfacing on the bias for this application has allowed more "give" to the area. You must be cautious when working with sweater knits that the knit doesn't pull out of shape while you are stitching your buttonholes.



If you are lucky, your sewing machine may allow you to use a "gimp" or heavy thread in the buttonhole as it stitches. After the buttonhole has been completed, you simply pull the thread slightly until the buttonhole is in perfect shape, tie the threads and it will never pull again. Since the knit era will probably never end, if you are in the market for a new sewing machine, you might want to check this very important feature out before making your purchase.

DEAR EUNICE,

I can't tell you how much fun I have had lately, making swim suits for my girls as well as myself. I don't have to tell you how much money I have saved.

My problem is the elastic. Sometimes it works perfectly and sometimes the stretch disappears and I have to replace it frequently. Is there special elastic for swimwear?

MRS. T.E.B.

DEAR MRS. T.E.B.

Yes, there is very definitely swim wear elastic just as you should use special chlorine treated fabrics for successful swim-suit making. Apparently you have lucked out on some of your purchases without knowing it.

In the future, look for elastic specifically marked "for swimwear," you will find greater elasticity and it will keep this elasticity when exposed to constant use in water.

DEAR EUNICE,

My wife doesn't sew, but I think she can manage this small problem if you will tell her how to go about it. Incidentally, she's the one who suggested I write to you. She bought me some of the new bow ties and even with the adjustment in the back, the ties are about 2-inches too short. Please help.

MR. C.E.F.

DEAR MR. C.E.F.:

If she can thread a needle, she can fix your ties in a minute. Purchase a small strip of grosgrain ribbon, one-inch wide. Cut the tie apart on the underfold of the tie, between the two adjustable clips. Sew each of the cut ends to a 2-inch strip of the grosgrain ribbon. It won't show, the adjustable clips will still work, and presto, your ties will be comfortable.

LIVING IN Mill Valley after a wedding trip to Mendocino are Mr. and Mrs. George William Gooding, who were married July 8 at St. Anselm's Church in San Anselmo.

The bride is the former Vicki Ann Lenzi, daughter of the Louis P. Lenzis of San Anselmo. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Gooding of San Francisco.

MRS. ROBERT Schultz of Mill Valley, general manager of the Marin Symphony Association, was elected a member of the board of directors of the Association of California Symphony Orchestras. Thelma Schultz received the office during the three day statewide conference of the association in San Diego, which was co-sponsored by the California Arts Commission. Mrs. Schultz said representatives of some 60 orchestras and allied arts from Canada and the United States attended the conference.

THIRTY JAPANESE students arrived in Southern Marin Wednesday and will be housed in private homes in Mill Valley, Belvedere and Tiburon for a month. The visitors are in this country on a program sponsored by the Swedish-based Interstudy organization. They will stay in American homes with the purpose of improving their conversational English. Lectures, parties and excursions are included in the plans for the students, with Michael Kaufman of Belvedere as Marin chairman.

MRS. WAYNE Richmond of Greenbrae and her 18-year-old son, David Delgado, spent six-weeks touring eastern European countries, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.

They traveled mostly by train and found the people friendly toward Americans, according to Mrs. Richmond, whose knowledge of French allowed communication. She said the train travel gave them insight into the people and their problems. On a train to Rumania they saw inspectors toss umbrellas out the window because they are considered contraband, she said.

The family will be moving soon to Foster City.

The bride is a graduate of Marin Catholic High School and College of Marin and was employed by the California State Automobile Association in Greenbrae.

Volunteers For Oral History Project Needed

Volunteers to assist with interviewing long-time residents of Mill Valley are needed to help with the Mill Valley Oral History Project.

A meeting of the project committee is scheduled tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in the board room of the Mill Valley public library. Those interested in the work are invited to attend.

Mrs. Robert Andresen has been elected chairman, and Mrs. Leo Killion, secretary.

Long-term goal of the project is to make tapes and transcripts of pioneer residents available for historical research.

SEW SIMPLE

Altering Skirt Patterns Is Easy

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

I notice that most of the newer skirts are cut with more fullness than what I would call a straight skirt. I have been saving so many patterns that I love; the bodices are perfect. Is there any way I can change the skirts so that they still fit smooth at the waist, but flare out softly near the hem?

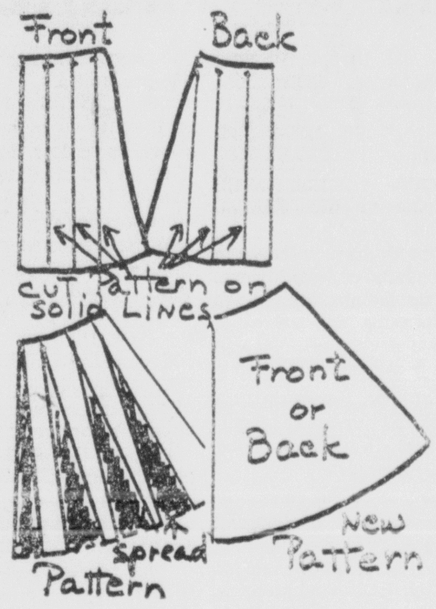
BETTY J.

DEAR BETTY,

There is a rather simple way to change the skirts you are referring to and it doesn't require a course in drafting, just a little courage. First, divide the skirt front and back into four equal parts, beginning with the straight center, front and center back seam and fold.

Second, slash the pattern on the lines you have drawn, cutting them to within ¼-inch of the outer edge of the pattern at the waistline. Place the center front or seamline for the center back on the straight grain of your fabric. Lastly, spread each of the strips you have slashed apart according to the width you desire for your new skirt. This may be from very little to a complete circle. (If you had a dart on the front or back section, or both, you will find that as you spread the pattern apart, it is possible to eliminate the dart by lapping the stitching lines of the darts over each other without distorting the pattern.)

If you feel insecure the first time you do any major changing of a pattern, try the skirt only on a very inexpensive piece of fabric or a piece of lining fabric. You will find that you can not only save money on the purchase price of the pattern, but once you have worked out a pattern experiment, you will have more courage to make these minor changes again.



The most frequently asked questions in past months have been concerning buttonholes, both machine-made and bound buttonholes. The problems seem to be caused because of working with knit fabrics. The stretch factor causes problems that didn't occur before. I shall try to answer your questions in this column. Please save it for future reference.

When making bound buttonholes (used in woven fabrics only, I wouldn't recommend making bound buttonholes in knit fabrics), you must never make the buttonholes through the interfacing. No matter how careful you are, when the buttonholes are completed, the interfacing will become shorter causing the front of your garment to look puckered.

I prefer placing a narrow strip of organdy or lightweight underlining fabric under the section for your buttonholes, after they have been completed on the right front of your garment (before applying the facing) cut the stabilizing fabric away from around each buttonhole, eliminating this pulled look. Press the buttonholes from the wrong side. Now you may apply your interfacing.

After it has been carefully basted in place, pin around each buttonhole and cut away a rectangle of the interfacing under each buttonhole large enough to allow you to pull the welts to the back of the interfacing. This will always eliminate the bulk of the buttonhole and you will never see an indentation of the welts when future pressing is done.

If you would like a copy of my step-by-step instructions for bound buttonholes send a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request for this free leaflet to Eunice Farmer in care of this newspaper.

Making buttonholes in knits is a whole new ballgame. They are usually done on the machine and once again, the buttonholes must be stabilized with a lightweight underlining fabric. Since machine buttonholes are made after the garment is completed and made through the facing all at one time, it is important that you cut a separate piece of interfacing that won't become too tight after buttonholes have been made. I have found that cutting the interfacing on the bias for this application has allowed more "give" to the area. You must be cautious when working with sweater knits that the knit doesn't pull out of shape while you are stitching your buttonholes.

If you are lucky, your sewing machine may allow you to use a "gimp" or heavy thread in the buttonhole as it stitches. After the buttonhole has been completed, you simply pull the thread slightly until the buttonhole is in perfect shape, tie the threads and it will never pull again. Since the knit era will probably never end, if you are in the market for a new sewing machine, you might want to check this very important feature out before making your purchase.

DEAR EUNICE,

I can't tell you how much fun I have had lately, making swim suits for my girls as well as myself. I don't have to tell you how much money I have saved. My problem is the elastic. Sometimes it works perfectly and sometimes the stretch disappears and I have to replace it frequently. Is there special elastic for swimwear?

MRS. T.E.B.

DEAR MRS. T.E.B.

Yes, there is very definitely swim wear elastic just as you should use special chlorine treated fabrics for successful swim-suit making. Apparently you have lucked out on some of your purchases without knowing it.

In the future, look for elastic specifically marked "for swimwear," you will find greater elasticity and it will keep this elasticity when exposed to constant use in water.

DEAR EUNICE,

My wife doesn't sew, but I think she can manage this small problem if you will tell her how to go about it. Incidentally, she's the one who suggested I write to you. She bought me some of the new bow ties and even with the adjustment in the back, the ties are about 2-inches too short. Please help.

MR. C.E.F.

DEAR MR. C.E.F.:

If she can thread a needle, she can fix your ties in a minute. Purchase a small strip of grosgrain ribbon, one-inch wide. Cut the tie apart on the underfold of the tie, between the two adjustable clips. Sew each of the cut ends to a 2-inch strip of the grosgrain ribbon. It won't show, the adjustable clips will still work, and presto, your ties will be comfortable.

LIVING IN Mill Valley after a wedding trip to Mendocino are Mr. and Mrs. George William Gooding, who were married July 8 at St. Anselm's Church in San Anselmo.

The bride is the former Vicki Ann Lenzi, daughter of the Louis P. Lenzis of San Anselmo. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Gooding of San Francisco.

MRS. ROBERT Schultz of Mill Valley, general manager of the Marin Symphony Association, was elected a member of the board of directors of the Association of California Symphony Orchestras. Thelma Schultz received the office during the three day statewide conference of the association in San Diego, which was co-sponsored by the California Arts Commission. Mrs. Schultz said representatives of some 60 orchestras and allied arts from Canada and the United States attended the conference.

THIRTY JAPANESE students arrived in Southern Marin Wednesday and will be housed in private homes in Mill Valley, Belvedere and Tiburon for a month. The visitors are in this country on a program sponsored by the Swedish-based Interstudy organization. They will stay in American homes with the purpose of improving their conversational English. Lectures, parties and excursions are included in the plans for the students, with Michael Kaufman of Belvedere as Marin chairman.

MRS. WAYNE Richmond of Greenbrae and her 18-year-old son, David Delgado, spent six-weeks touring eastern European countries, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.

They traveled mostly by train and found the people friendly toward Americans, according to Mrs. Richmond, whose knowledge of French allowed communication. She said the train travel gave them insight into the people and their problems. On a train to Rumania they saw inspectors toss umbrellas out the window because they are considered contraband, she said.

The family will be moving soon to Foster City.

Father Of Six Enters A New Field — Theater

By PATRICIA PERRY

David Faw had never considered acting.

The father of six children, he devoted what spare time he had to carpentry sculpture, and singing in his church choir and the Men of Marin chorus.

Then his oldest son Michael, a College of Marin drama student, persuaded his dad to audition for "Fiddler on the Roof," this winter because good singers were needed.

Faw, a burly, imposing man with a bass baritone voice and a splendid beard, was petrified with fright.

"I went down to the studio theater at the College of Marin and turned round and ran home — there were all these nice young people there, full of confidence and knowing the director and each other. . ."

But when he got home, the San Anselmo man said his whole family nagged him so much he went back the next night, and endured singing, dancing and reading auditions. He got a one-line part as a cobbler in the chorus of the musical, and in the process, got stagestruck too.

Now Faw, at 39, is playing a leading role in the current production of "Inherit the Wind" at the former Festival Theater (Theater III) in San Anselmo. He takes the part of Rev. Jeremiah Brown in the dramatic adaptation of the Scopes Monkey Trial.

A zoning assistant in the county planning office, Faw has also taught school and sold real estate. He majored in speech at the University of New Mexico, and while he has always enjoyed speaking and using his voice, had never been involved with stage productions.

Michael, 18, a full-time drama student at College of Marin, has always been keenly interested in the technical side of the theater. He is head property man and stage carpenter for the summer productions of "Inherit the Wind" and "The Fantastiks."

Nancy Faw, director of the All Faiths Nursery School in Corte Madera, got involved too. Mrs. Faw is an accomplished seamstress who makes clothes for herself and the three Faw daughters.

She volunteered to help with the costumes for the play, and when it opened she and Kathleen, 15; Diane, 13, and Sarah, 10, had helped design and create over 60 different outfits for the production.

"We tried to keep everything in the play as authentic as we could," said Mrs. Faw, "so we used an old Montgomery-Ward catalog to see what the people were wearing then."

Michael enlisted the help of his two younger brothers, Patrick, 16, and Beau, 8, to help build the elaborate sets used in the show. (Patrick, a long-time Independent-Journal carrier, last month's I-J carrier of the month, and a keen scout, was already rather busy.)

Although the show has meant many hours of work for the entire Faw family, they all agree it has been immensely rewarding.

"The play's really brought our family together," said Kathleen. "In a family that has the age differences ours has, it's hard to find anything even most of us are interested in. But this play has been just great."

Faw said every family member has retained individual interests too. He and his wife sing in the First Presbyterian Church choir in San Anselmo. He and Michael are members of the Men of Marin chorus.

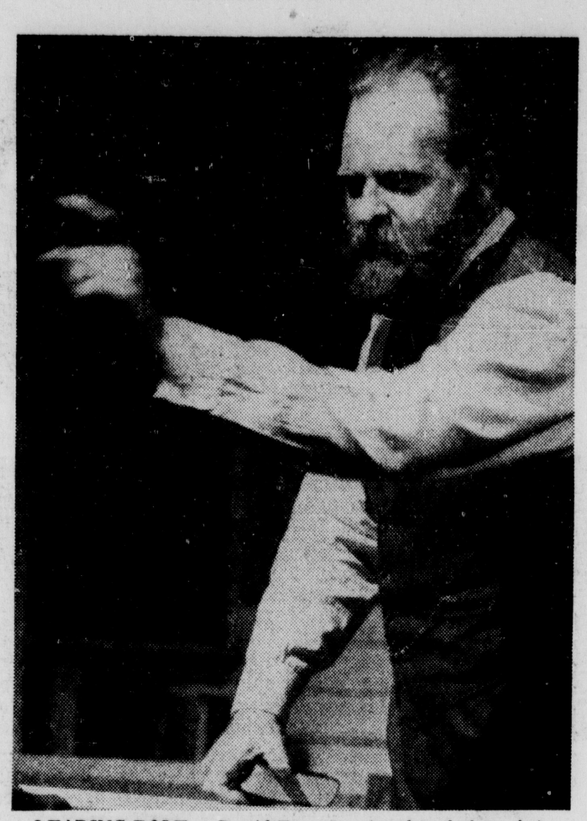
Faw said he feels privileged to be getting the kind of intensive theatrical training that director Harvey Susser imparts. "What's so great about the community involvement in the college drama is that it doesn't matter to the students that I'm of another generation.

"Of course full-time drama students have the edge, because that's what the drama courses are for. But when it comes to the actual productions, you're on an equal basis — even if your old muscles are killing you from the dancing."

Michael is the only one of the family who is planning a theatrical career. He intends to concentrate on the technical side initially, but hopes one day to direct.

And he said it's nice being in a play with your parents. "Before, I was never allowed to stay late at the cast parties. But at the cast party this time, my parents got home after me."

The remaining performances of "Inherit the Wind" are on Thursday and Saturday, with "The Fantastiks" scheduled for Wednesday, Friday and Sunday. All performances are at 8 p.m. at the theater.



LEADING ROLE — David Faw, San Anselmo father of six, strikes a pose as the Rev. Jeremiah Brown in the current College of Marin production of "Inherit the Wind." Faw rose to the starring role from a bit part as a cobbler in "Fiddler on the Roof."

Forest Use Is Lower This Year

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Recreational use of national forests in California is down this year from last year, a Forest Service spokesman said yesterday.

Gerry Gause, public information officer for the regional ofice of the U.S. Forest Service, said the reduction in use, along with the availability of more than $1 million in return from use fees, will make it unnecessary to close any recreation areas in California national forests.

Chief of the Forest Service John R. McGuire said in Washington some recreation areas would be closed for budget reasons.

Gause said, for example, that the Mammoth Lakes area in Inyo National Forest reported camp grounds only half filled this year, compared with capacity use last summer.

Ban On Converting Apartments Fought

The suit, on behalf of five men who own 24 apartment units, charges the city council has no constitutional right to regulate ownership of real estate.

The council voted Monday to ban conversion of apartments into condominiums, which are owned by individual tenants rather than a landlord.

The urgency ordinance was enacted "for the sole purpose of frustrating the applicants," according to plaintiffs Edward H. Kuykendall, Jeffory S. Morshead, Charles D. Kuhn, Alvin J. Harris and Richard A. Cerutti.

Kuykendall and Morshead own 16 apartments at 47 Lyford Drive and the others own an eight-unit building at 80 Lyford.

Calling the council action "unreasonable restraint," the suit contends the council has "no power to regulate ownership" since the proposed conversion is "simply converting the nature of the ownership of the building from one owner to many individual owners."

The prohibition was adopted to maintain the kind of balance the council desires between resident-owned housing and rental units in Tiburon.

Forest Use Is Lower This Year

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Recreational use of national forests in California is down this year from last year, a Forest Service spokesman said yesterday.

Gerry Gause, public information officer for the regional ofice of the U.S. Forest Service, said the reduction in use, along with the availability of more than $1 million in return from use fees, will make it unnecessary to close any recreation areas in California national forests.

Chief of the Forest Service John R. McGuire said in Washington some recreation areas would be closed for budget reasons.

Gause said, for example, that the Mammoth Lakes area in Inyo National Forest reported camp grounds only half filled this year, compared with capacity use last summer.

Ban On Converting Apartments Fought

The suit, on behalf of five men who own 24 apartment units, charges the city council has no constitutional right to regulate ownership of real estate.

The council voted Monday to ban conversion of apartments into condominiums, which are owned by individual tenants rather than a landlord.

The urgency ordinance was enacted "for the sole purpose of frustrating the applicants," according to plaintiffs Edward H. Kuykendall, Jeffory S. Morshead, Charles D. Kuhn, Alvin J. Harris and Richard A. Cerutti.

Kuykendall and Morshead own 16 apartments at 47 Lyford Drive and the others own an eight-unit building at 80 Lyford.

Calling the council action "unreasonable restraint," the suit contends the council has "no power to regulate ownership" since the proposed conversion is "simply converting the nature of the ownership of the building from one owner to many individual owners."

The prohibition was adopted to maintain the kind of balance the council desires between resident-owned housing and rental units in Tiburon.

SPORTS ANALYSIS

Speck Of Light At Paupered Sonoma

By PAUL DWORIN

The perennially paupered Sonoma State College Physical Education Department is finally seeing a speck of light at the end of its tunnel with the formation of the Cossack Associates.

The P.E. department's financial troubles began in April, 1970 when the associated student body of the college voted to disband student government; with that abolition went student body fees, of which $10,000 per year went towards supporting the athletic program.

Since then, the department has had to fund its inter-collegiate sports program solely through community contributions. The man mainly responsible for that community support has been athletic director William Trumbo, whose untiring efforts have kept the program alive against overwhelming odds.

Realizing that his efforts and that of a few others would inevitably be insufficient, Trumbo founded the Cossack Associates with the idea of starting a massive fund-raising campaign.

"Since the nature of funding our athletic program has to be relying on community support, we have to have an effective means of getting that support," he stated.

"We have gotten the necessary funds in the past, but not in the way we want to. If we had gone on with the previous ineffective method of fund-raising, we wouldn't have been able to continue inter-collegiate athletics because it was too time-consuming for those who were doing it. The Cossack Associates will serve to broaden the base of our support and consolidate our fund-raising efforts."

The goal of the organization is to raise $12,500 for the upcoming school year. Although the program needs $25,000 a year to operate, Trumbo arrived at that smaller figure because he feels that revenue gained through ticket sales and concessions will make up the difference.

Twelve thousand, five hundred dollars seems like a lot of money to raise for a program as beleagered with financial problems as Sonoma athletics, but the way Trumbo explains it, it seems almost easy. During a two-week period in August, representatives from seven different areas will be trying to sell their communities memberships in the associates.

The organization will offer three different plans to prospective members: a $25 basic membership, the "Half-Century Club" ($50) and the "Century Club" ($100). In addition, businesses will be solicited for memberships, with a $250 donation making that company a Cossack sponsor and a $500 contribution warranting membership into the President's Circle. Trumbo is hoping to receive $2,500 from each of these categories.

Contributors to the program will be getting more for their money than just a tax write-off, as members will get season tickets, weekly newsletters, decals, access to the college athletic facilities on certain nights and plaques, depending on the amount donated. There will also be special nights honoring businesses which made large contributions.

Cossack Associates president-elect Reg Carolan, a graduate of Drake High School and a former professional football player with the Kansas City Chiefs, matched Trumbo's optimism about the success of the fund-raising campaign with some unbridled enthusiasm of his own.

"This program (inter-collegiate sports) has been subsidized by just a few people over the past few years, but that can only go on for so long," he said. "Now is the time to turn the tide. Sometimes it's the rinky-dink seeming things like social gatherings and golf tournaments that seem to get the ball rolling. I've seen it happen all over the country."

The one thing Carolan was dubious about was that the students at Sonoma do not contribute to the funding of the program with student body fees. "This is almost unheard of as far as any inter-collegiate programs across the country go," he commented.

During each of the past few years, a petition has been circulated asking for a student referendum issue to come to vote, but so far none has. College president Thomas McGrath has been criticized for not having called for one himself. He feels that to do so would impose his opinion on what is essentially a student decision.

Similar accusations have been hurled at the Student Activities Office for its failure to initiate a vote, but it feels that the students do not want a referendum issue. "We've called numerous meetings bringing together members of various organizations and, with the exception of the athletes, the consensus was that they did not want to initiate a referendum," Student Activities advisor Rand Link explained.

In raising funds, the Cossack Associates can also serve to strengthen the bond between the college and the community. First, those who donate money will have an investment, of sorts, in the program. Secondly, through the various membership clubs, the athletic department will be providing needed recreational opportunities for the people of the community. Finally, as the athletic program becomes a subsidiary of the Cossack Associates, the P.E. department can take a more active leadership role in the community with post-season coaching clinics and day sport camps. It can become more of a focal point for athletics in the area.

The associates are looking ahead to the future too. Trumbo felt that membership in the group might increase substantially enough within the next three years that the college could once again field a football team. Looking beyond that time, Carolan said that he foresees Olympic facilities for swimming and track and a mini-dome on the campus in about 10 years.

This may sound a little far-fetched, but actually, the rapid metamorphosis of Sonoma athletics into a financially stable program has a precedent within the college itself. That would be the 1973 Far Western Conference basketball champion Cossacks, who changed from league doormats to conquerors in one year. That team was also masterminded by William Roy Trumbo.

UNDER WRAPS — College All-star Bruce Bannon (83) had Miami Dolphin quarterback Bob Griese well in hand as he dumped Griese for a 12-yard loss in the third quarter of the football game at Soldier Field in Chicago. Jeff Winans (92) came in to assist as the Dolphins' Norm Evans (73) missed the block. Miami won, 14-3.

Shula Has Praise For All-Stars

CHICAGO (UPI) — In victory, Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins was magnanimous in praise of the beaten College All Stars. "I thought the All-Stars played exceptionally well," he said.

"They were big and strong on offense and defense up front, and at times we had trouble moving them and stopping them."

But the Dolphins got a pair of touchdowns from workhorse Larry Csonka and those, together with a customarily stingy defense, delivered a 14-3 victory for Shula's Super Bowl champs.

It was the 29th win for the pros in the 40-game series and their 10th straight victory. The collegians have won only nine times and after Griese directed the Dolphins 60 yards in 10 plays to open the game with Csonkas first touchdown, it seemed to end their chances again.

"We had a good drive at first and then we sputtered," Shula said, "so I switched from Bob (Griese) to Earl (Morrall) and he got the offense going again."

Morrall piloted the Dolphins 55 yards in seven plays for a last period touchdown, passing twice to Jim Mandich for 24 and 11 yards to spark the effort. "Their defense was tough," Morrall said. "They were playing a double zone, and Jim got open and made two good catches."

The All-Stars cashed only one of three good scoring chances. Once, on first down from the 10 Greg Pruitt fumbled and Manny Fernandez recovered for the Dolphins. Then James Thomas recovered a fumbled snap from center Jim Langer on the Dolphins eight, but three plays left the ball on the nine, and Ray Guy missed a 16-yard field goal try.

Guy's field goal from the 10 for the collegians' only points came after the stars had a first down on the Dolphin one and couldn't carry the ball into the

VS. DODGERS

Crucial Set For Giants

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "It can either make us or break us, that's for sure," observed San Francisco Giants slugging first baseman Willie McCovey as he anticipated the opener of a three-game series with the Los Angeles Dodgers tonight at 7 o'clock.

McCovey, whose 18th home run of the season was the lone bright spot for San Francisco in a 6-2 loss to the San Diego Padres Friday night, was echoing the sentiments of many Giants as they awaited their first meeting with Dodgers since May 13.

The Giants, who hold a 4-3 edge over Los Angeles and are 3-1 at Dodger Stadium, remained six games off the pace and dropped into third place in the National League West with the defeat.

"We can still win it if we have a bad series against the Dodgers," McCovey said, "but then we would need some help. It's always better when you can do it yourself."

The Giants, whose six-game win streak was snapped by San Diego right-hander Bill Greif, will send Jim Barr, Tom Bradley and Ron Bryant against the Dodgers' Don Sutton, Andy Messersmith and Claude Osteen in the nearly sold-out three-game series.

"It's a really important series," agreed right fielder Bobby Bonds, who doubled and scored the Giants' first run Friday night. "We won't be out of it if we lose, but winning the series would be a big morale booster for either club."

Giants' manager Charlie Fox said his club was in top shape for a crucial week that includes six games with the Dodgers who play at Candlestick Park next weekend.

"I'll take two out of three in Los Angeles and we'll be all right," Fox declared. "You never know what will happen the rest of the way, but you can't afford to lose two out of three if you want to stay in it."

Greif, who pitched a five-hitter and allowed only one hit — McCovey's upper-deck homer in the ninth — over the last five innings, raised his record to 6-12 while besting Juan Marichal, 8-6.

"I had a good fast ball and was able to throw it in spots," Grief explained. "I tried to challenge McCovey with a fast ball in the ninth and, like a lot of pitchers, found out I couldn't do it."

Dave Roberts delivered a go-ahead run-scoring single as the Padres took the lead with two runs in the sixth. Darrell Thomas collected three singles and three runs-batted-in, sealing the game with a two-run single in the three-run ninth.

Padres' manager Don Zimmer, relieved after snapping the seven-game losing string, couldn't explain why his club is 6-4 against the first-place Dodgers and only 3-5 against the Giants.

"It's just one of those goofy things against L.A.," Zimmer said. "We just haven't been giving anything away against the Dodgers. But their pitching is super, and their hitting and fielding don't fall short either.

"One thing the Giants have going for them is that outfield Bonds, Garry Maddox and Gary Matthews — I've never seen three faster outfielders on one club. Give the Giants or Cincinnati the Dodgers' pitch-

A's Odom Faces Dunning, Texas

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Athletics, who moved up to first place in the America League West just a month ago, held the top rung by only a half game today going into a four-game series against the Texas Rangers.

The All-Star Game injury to Jim "Catfish" Hunter put the A's in trouble for starting pitchers for a heavy stretch of their schedule — 13 games in 11 days before the first off-day Aug. 6.

It started with a double-header loss to the Twins in Minnesota Thursday. The Twins swept the series there by winning 8-2 Friday to move within three games of Oakland. Kansas City is only a half game back after a victory over Chicago.

With another twin bill coming up Sunday. A's Manager Dick Williams has called up Glenn Abbott from the Tucson Pacific Coast League farm club to start one of the games against the Rangers. Reliever Paul Lindblad may have to go for the A's in the other half of the doubleheader. It would be his first 1973 start.

Fortoday, it was John Odom, 2-8, against Texas' Steve Dunning, 0-6. One of Odom's two victories was against the Rangers with whom the A's stand 6-2 so far.

Dave Hamilton lasted only two-thirds of an inning Friday when Minnesota scored seven runs in the first inning, three on George Mitterwald's home run and two on a homer by Steve Brye off Hoeracio Pina.

Hamilton, 5-4, was a substitute starter for Hunter, 15-3, whose hairline fracture of the right thumb will keep him out of the pitching rotation for at least another 10 days, doctors say.

Mitterwald's home run was

Reeve Is Upset In Boys' 18s

In Boys' 18 singles, John Doherty toppled top-seeded Colin Reeve, 6-7, 6-4, 6-1, with an all-around game that wore down the powerful Reeve.

In the other Boys' 18 singles semi-final match, Drake High School's Gene Lachelt stopped Grant Grinnell 7-6, 6-4.

Grinnell, of Redwood High School, was also knocked out of Boys 16 singles in perhaps the most exciting match of the day. After splitting the first two sets with Terra Linda High School's Doug Carlisle, the first seed, Grinnell was ahead, 5-2, in the deciding set but missed seven match point opportunities to the

Marinwood '9' Vs. Mill Valley Today

Marinwood-Lucas Valley and Mill Valley American played at Mary E. Silveira School in Marinwood today for the championship of the Marin County Little League All-Star Tournament.

Marinwood reached the title game with a decisive 10-2 victory over San Rafael American at San Quentin Field yesterday while Mill Valley edged Hamilton-Loma Verde, 4-3, at Hamann Field in Novato.

Marinwood carried a 4-2 lead into the sixth inning, and then exploded for six runs to put the game away. Tim Young led off with a double, followed by Darryl Egide's single which scored him. Troy Tuscher and George Morgan then hit into fielder's choices with Tuscher safe on an error. Mark Johnson singled to drive in Tuscher, Craig Stevens walked and Morgan was plated on a single by Kenny Kunst. Pitcher Greg Safford followed with a single to score Johnson and Stevens, and Young got his second hit of the inning to drive in Kunst. Young got four hits in five at-bats.

The only runs off Safford, who struck out four and allowed two walks, was a two-run home run to left by Craig Stair in the first inning.

Scotland: The Nation Of Golf Courses

By JOHN ALLAN MAY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

Scotland, with acknowledgments to P.G. Wodehouse, has long been a land where all nature shouted, "Fore!"

Many Scottish kings and queens played the game. They occasionally even put it before affairs of state. For 600 years most commoners have played it. They have always put it before affairs of state.

This is a country where not only do they have hotels attached to golf courses but castles attached to golf courses, moorlands attached to golf courses, mountains attached to golf courses, and, of course, towns attached to golf courses.

St. Andrews, in Fife, is so attached to golf courses that it has four. The "Golf Course Guide of the United Kingdom" has only five words to say about it: "Visitors welcome. Apply town council."

As everybody knows, this is the home of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club, supreme arbiter of the traditional game.

A round on the historic Old Course will cost you one pound ($2.40-ish). But on the other courses the charges gradually diminish until upon the Jubilee they reach about 60 cents.

However, unless you are prepared for them, Scottish seaside courses may not always seem immediately delightful. First time out Bobby Jones thought St. Andrews terrible. Later he agreed that for sheer golf it is the greatest. The town council made him a "freeman of the burgh."

Often this is golf in the raw. The Scottish recipe for golf has ever been "art against nature."

Sometimes there are hidden traps, like shell holes, in the fairway. Spare trees and gorse crouch from the wind. And the wind itself is the great gamesman, full of knavish tricks.

It blows not only where it listeth, but from directions not on the list at all.

Probably from Scottish seaside golf courses comes the phrase, "Take the rough with the smooth." Defeat these courses, and at the same time keep your pose and you can truly claim to be a golfer.

Remember: The challenge produces the man. Carnoustie, north near Dundee, produced more great American golf teachers than any other single town in the world. It's almost the world's toughest test. And Ben Hogan's finest achievement was probably to come to Carnoustie and win the Open at his first attempt with four rounds each lower than the last, finally doing the near-impossible and breaking 70.

Here there is only one "Open." It is not "the British Open." It is "The Open." The whole thing, you see, began at Prestwick, in Ayrshire. All other opens are but the great grandchildren of "The Open." It will cost you 2 pounds to play Prestwick. An introduction from a member of your club is necessary.

But you have got to admit it is beautiful.

Golfers with wives who prefer monsters will be interested to learn that there are two courses by Loch Ness, one at either end of the great loch, at Inverness and Fort Angustus. The drive between the two on a fine day — I mean a drive by automobile — is out of this world. You can picnic on the lochside between morning and afternoon rounds.

The most northerly course on the Scottish mainland is at Thurso. You can have a week's golf here for $2.40. There is no need for an introduction. But there are no clubs for hire and no caddy cars or carts either.

There are three courses in the Orkney Isles and two on the Shetlands. There are five on the Western Isles, including two on Skye.

Possibly the best area of all these days is the Valley of the Spey, under the brooding Cairngorm Mountains. This area has been developed for winter sports, which may be what the mountains are brooding about. The only time I was ever in a bunker at Nethy Bridge was on skis.

SPORTS ANALYSIS

Speck Of Light At Paupered Sonoma

By PAUL DWORIN

The perennially paupered Sonoma State College Physical Education Department is finally seeing a speck of light at the end of its tunnel with the formation of the Cossack Associates.

The P.E. department's financial troubles began in April, 1970 when the associated student body of the college voted to disband student government; with that abolition went student body fees, of which $10,000 per year went towards supporting the athletic program.

Since then, the department has had to fund its inter-collegiate sports program solely through community contributions. The man mainly responsible for that community support has been athletic director William Trumbo, whose untiring efforts have kept the program alive against overwhelming odds.

Realizing that his efforts and that of a few others would inevitably be insufficient, Trumbo founded the Cossack Associates with the idea of starting a massive fund-raising campaign.

"Since the nature of funding our athletic program has to be relying on community support, we have to have an effective means of getting that support," he stated.

"We have gotten the necessary funds in the past, but not in the way we want to. If we had gone on with the previous ineffective method of fund-raising, we wouldn't have been able to continue inter-collegiate athletics because it was too time-consuming for those who were doing it. The Cossack Associates will serve to broaden the base of our support and consolidate our fund-raising efforts."

The goal of the organization is to raise $12,500 for the upcoming school year. Although the program needs $25,000 a year to operate, Trumbo arrived at that smaller figure because he feels that revenue gained through ticket sales and concessions will make up the difference.

Twelve thousand, five hundred dollars seems like a lot of money to raise for a program as beleagered with financial problems as Sonoma athletics, but the way Trumbo explains it, it seems almost easy. During a two-week period in August, representatives from seven different areas will be trying to sell their communities memberships in the associates.

The organization will offer three different plans to prospective members: a $25 basic membership, the "Half-Century Club" ($50) and the "Century Club" ($100). In addition, businesses will be solicited for memberships, with a $250 donation making that company a Cossack sponsor and a $500 contribution warranting membership into the President's Circle. Trumbo is hoping to receive $2,500 from each of these categories.

Contributors to the program will be getting more for their money than just a tax write-off, as members will get season tickets, weekly newsletters, decals, access to the college athletic facilities on certain nights and plaques, depending on the amount donated. There will also be special nights honoring businesses which made large contributions.

Cossack Associates president-elect Reg Carolan, a graduate of Drake High School and a former professional football player with the Kansas City Chiefs, matched Trumbo's optimism about the success of the fund-raising campaign with some unbridled enthusiasm of his own.

"This program (inter-collegiate sports) has been subsidized by just a few people over the past few years, but that can only go on for so long," he said. "Now is the time to turn the tide. Sometimes it's the rinky-dink seeming things like social gatherings and golf tournaments that seem to get the ball rolling. I've seen it happen all over the country."

The one thing Carolan was dubious about was that the students at Sonoma do not contribute to the funding of the program with student body fees. "This is almost unheard of as far as any inter-collegiate programs across the country go," he commented.

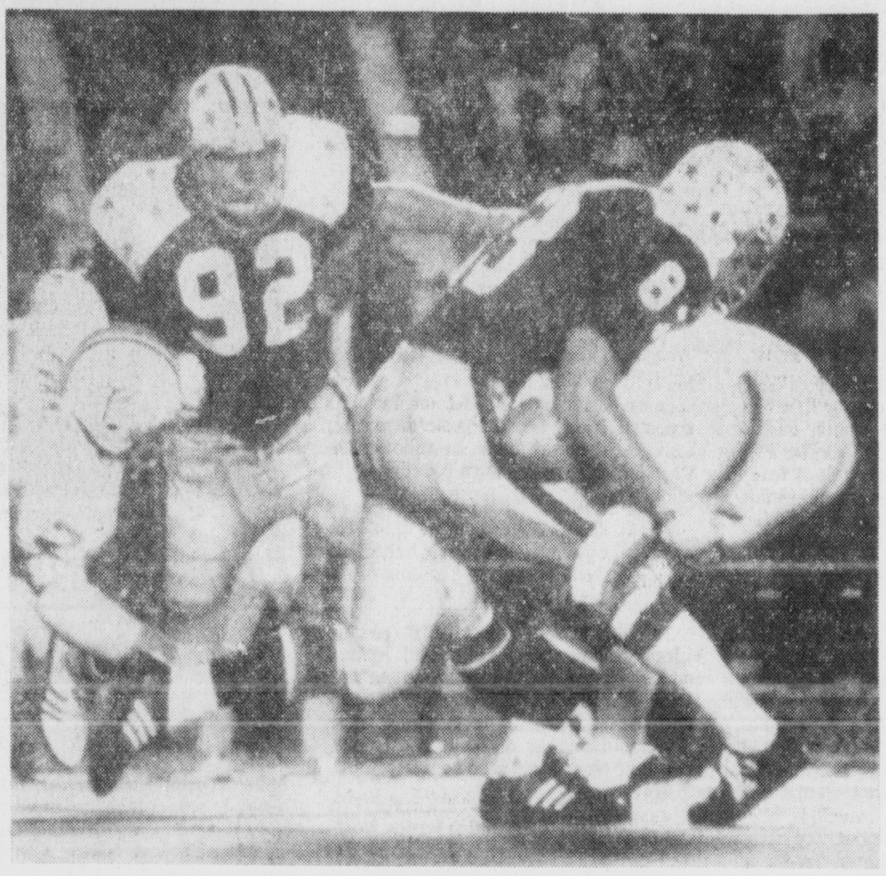
During each of the past few years, a petition has been circulated asking for a student referendum issue to come to vote, but so far none has. College president Thomas McGrath has been criticized for not having called for one himself. He feels that to do so would impose his opinion on what is essentially a student decision.

Similar accusations have been hurled at the Student Activities Office for its failure to initiate a vote, but it feels that the students do not want a referendum issue. "We've called numerous meetings bringing together members of various organizations and, with the exception of the athletes, the consensus was that they did not want to initiate a referendum," Student Activities advisor Rand Link explained.

In raising funds, the Cossack Associates can also serve to strengthen the bond between the college and the community. First, those who donate money will have an investment, of sorts, in the program. Secondly, through the various membership clubs, the athletic department will be providing needed recreational opportunities for the people of the community. Finally, as the athletic program becomes a subsidiary of the Cossack Associates, the P.E. department can take a more active leadership role in the community with post-season coaching clinics and day sport camps. It can become more of a focal point for athletics in the area.

The associates are looking ahead to the future too. Trumbo felt that membership in the group might increase substantially enough within the next three years that the college could once again field a football team. Looking beyond that time, Carolan said that he foresees Olympic facilities for swimming and track and a mini-dome on the campus in about 10 years.

This may sound a little far-fetched, but actually, the rapid metamorphosis of Sonoma athletics into a financially stable program has a precedent within the college itself. That would be the 1973 Far Western Conference basketball champion Cossacks, who changed from league doormats to conquerors in one year. That team was also masterminded by William Roy Trumbo.



UNDER WRAPS — College All-star Bruce Bannon (83) had Miami Dolphin quarterback Bob Griese well in hand as he dumped Griese for a 12-yard loss in the third quarter of the football game at Soldier Field in Chicago. Jeff Winans (92) came in to assist as the Dolphins' Norm Evans (73) missed the block. Miami won, 14-3.

Shula Has Praise For All-Stars

CHICAGO (UPI) — In victory, Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins was magnanimous in praise of the beaten College All Stars. "I thought the All-Stars played exceptionally well," he said.

"They were big and strong on offense and defense up front, and at times we had trouble moving them and stopping them."

But the Dolphins got a pair of touchdowns from workhorse Larry Csonka and those, together with a customarily stingy defense, delivered a 14-3 victory for Shula's Super Bowl champs.

It was the 29th win for the pros in the 40-game series and their 10th straight victory. The collegians have won only nine times and after Griese directed the Dolphins 60 yards in 10 plays to open the game with Csonkas first touchdown, it seemed to end their chances again.

"We had a good drive at first and then we sputtered," Shula said, "so I switched from Bob (Griese) to Earl (Morrall) and he got the offense going again."

Morrall piloted the Dolphins 55 yards in seven plays for a last period touchdown, passing twice to Jim Mandich for 24 and 11 yards to spark the effort. "Their defense was tough," Morrall said. "They were playing a double zone, and Jim got open and made two good catches."

The All-Stars cashed only one of three good scoring chances. Once, on first down from the 10 Greg Pruitt fumbled and Manny Fernandez recovered for the Dolphins. Then James Thomas recovered a fumbled snap from center Jim Langer on the Dolphins eight, but three plays left the ball on the nine, and Ray Guy missed a 16-yard field goal try.

Guy's field goal from the 10 for the collegians' only points came after the stars had a first down on the Dolphin one and couldn't carry the ball into the

VS. DODGERS

Crucial Set For Giants

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "It can either make us or break us, that's for sure," observed San Francisco Giants slugging first baseman Willie McCovey as he anticipated the opener of a three-game series with the Los Angeles Dodgers tonight at 7 o'clock.

McCovey, whose 18th home run of the season was the lone bright spot for San Francisco in a 6-2 loss to the San Diego Padres Friday night, was echoing the sentiments of many Giants as they awaited their first meeting with Dodgers since May 13.

The Giants, who hold a 4-3 edge over Los Angeles and are 3-1 at Dodger Stadium, remained six games off the pace and dropped into third place in the National League West with the defeat.

"We can still win it if we have a bad series against the Dodgers," McCovey said, "but then we would need some help. It's always better when you can do it yourself."

The Giants, whose six-game win streak was snapped by San Diego right-hander Bill Greif, will send Jim Barr, Tom Bradley and Ron Bryant against the Dodgers' Don Sutton, Andy Messersmith and Claude Osteen in the nearly sold-out three-game series.

"It's a really important series," agreed right fielder Bobby Bonds, who doubled and scored the Giants' first run Friday night. "We won't be out of it if we lose, but winning the series would be a big morale booster for either club."

Giants' manager Charlie Fox said his club was in top shape for a crucial week that includes six games with the Dodgers who play at Candlestick Park next weekend.

"I'll take two out of three in Los Angeles and we'll be all right," Fox declared. "You never know what will happen the rest of the way, but you can't afford to lose two out of three if you want to stay in it."

Greif, who pitched a five-hitter and allowed only one hit — McCovey's upper-deck homer in the ninth — over the last five innings, raised his record to 6-12 while besting Juan Marichal, 8-6.

"I had a good fast ball and was able to throw it in spots," Grief explained. "I tried to challenge McCovey with a fast ball in the ninth and, like a lot of pitchers, found out I couldn't do it."

Dave Roberts delivered a go-ahead run-scoring single as the Padres took the lead with two runs in the sixth. Darrell Thomas collected three singles and three runs-batted-in, sealing the game with a two-run single in the three-run ninth.

Padres' manager Don Zimmer, relieved after snapping the seven-game losing string, couldn't explain why his club is 6-4 against the first-place Dodgers and only 3-5 against the Giants.

"It's just one of those goofy things against L.A.," Zimmer said. "We just haven't been giving anything away against the Dodgers. But their pitching is super, and their hitting and fielding don't fall short either.

"One thing the Giants have going for them is that outfield Bonds, Garry Maddox and Gary Matthews — I've never seen three faster outfielders on one club. Give the Giants or Cincinnati the Dodgers' pitch-

A's Odom Faces Dunning, Texas

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Athletics, who moved up to first place in the America League West just a month ago, held the top rung by only a half game today going into a four-game series against the Texas Rangers.

The All-Star Game injury to Jim "Catfish" Hunter put the A's in trouble for starting pitchers for a heavy stretch of their schedule — 13 games in 11 days before the first off-day Aug. 6.

It started with a double-header loss to the Twins in Minnesota Thursday. The Twins swept the series there by winning 8-2 Friday to move within three games of Oakland. Kansas City is only a half game back after a victory over Chicago.

With another twin bill coming up Sunday. A's Manager Dick Williams has called up Glenn Abbott from the Tucson Pacific Coast League farm club to start one of the games against the Rangers. Reliever Paul Lindblad may have to go for the A's in the other half of the doubleheader. It would be his first 1973 start.

Fortoday, it was John Odom, 2-8, against Texas' Steve Dunning, 0-6. One of Odom's two victories was against the Rangers with whom the A's stand 6-2 so far.

Dave Hamilton lasted only two-thirds of an inning Friday when Minnesota scored seven runs in the first inning, three on George Mitterwald's home run and two on a homer by Steve Brye off Hoeracio Pina.

Hamilton, 5-4, was a substitute starter for Hunter, 15-3, whose hairline fracture of the right thumb will keep him out of the pitching rotation for at least another 10 days, doctors say.

Mitterwald's home run was

Reeve Is Upset In Boys' 18s

In Boys' 18 singles, John Doherty toppled top-seeded Colin Reeve, 6-7, 6-4, 6-1, with an all-around game that wore down the powerful Reeve.

In the other Boys' 18 singles semi-final match, Drake High School's Gene Lachelt stopped Grant Grinnell 7-6, 6-4.

Grinnell, of Redwood High School, was also knocked out of Boys 16 singles in perhaps the most exciting match of the day. After splitting the first two sets with Terra Linda High School's Doug Carlisle, the first seed, Grinnell was ahead, 5-2, in the deciding set but missed seven match point opportunities to the

Marinwood-Lucas Valley and Mill Valley American played at Mary E. Silveira School in Marinwood today for the championship of the Marin County Little League All-Star Tournament.

Marinwood reached the title game with a decisive 10-2 victory over San Rafael American at San Quentin Field yesterday while Mill Valley edged Hamilton-Loma Verde, 4-3, at Hamann Field in Novato.

Marinwood carried a 4-2 lead into the sixth inning, and then exploded for six runs to put the game away. Tim Young led off with a double, followed by Darryl Egide's single which scored him. Troy Tuscher and George Morgan then hit into fielder's choices with Tuscher safe on an error. Mark Johnson singled to drive in Tuscher, Craig Stevens walked and Morgan was plated on a single by Kenny Kunst. Pitcher Greg Safford followed with a single to score Johnson and Stevens, and Young got his second hit of the inning to drive in Kunst. Young got four hits in five at-bats.

The only runs off Safford, who struck out four and allowed two walks, was a two-run home run to left by Craig Stair in the first inning.

Scotland: The Nation Of Golf Courses

By JOHN ALLAN MAY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

Scotland, with acknowledgments to P.G. Wodehouse, has long been a land where all nature shouted, "Fore!"

Many Scottish kings and queens played the game. They occasionally even put it before affairs of state. For 600 years most commoners have played it. They have always put it before affairs of state.

This is a country where not only do they have hotels attached to golf courses but castles attached to golf courses, moorlands attached to golf courses, mountains attached to golf courses, and, of course, towns attached to golf courses.

St. Andrews, in Fife, is so attached to golf courses that it has four. The "Golf Course Guide of the United Kingdom" has only five words to say about it: "Visitors welcome. Apply town council."

As everybody knows, this is the home of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club, supreme arbiter of the traditional game.

A round on the historic Old Course will cost you one pound ($2.40-ish). But on the other courses the charges gradually diminish until upon the Jubilee they reach about 60 cents.

However, unless you are prepared for them, Scottish seaside courses may not always seem immediately delightful. First time out Bobby Jones thought St. Andrews terrible. Later he agreed that for sheer golf it is the greatest. The town council made him a "freeman of the burgh."

Often this is golf in the raw. The Scottish recipe for golf has ever been "art against nature."

Sometimes there are hidden traps, like shell holes, in the fairway. Spare trees and gorse crouch from the wind. And the wind itself is the great gamesman, full of knavish tricks.

It blows not only where it listeth, but from directions not on the list at all.

Probably from Scottish seaside golf courses comes the phrase, "Take the rough with the smooth." Defeat these courses, and at the same time keep your pose and you can truly claim to be a golfer.

Remember: The challenge produces the man. Carnoustie, north near Dundee, produced more great American golf teachers than any other single town in the world. It's almost the world's toughest test. And Ben Hogan's finest achievement was probably to come to Carnoustie and win the Open at his first attempt with four rounds each lower than the last, finally doing the near-impossible and breaking 70.

Here there is only one "Open." It is not "the British Open." It is "The Open." The whole thing, you see, began at Prestwick, in Ayrshire. All other opens are but the great grandchildren of "The Open." It will cost you 2 pounds to play Prestwick. An introduction from a member of your club is necessary.

Not far away is Troon, another historic course, where this year's Open is being played. Here, too, an introduction is needed to thread the hallowed turf. But there are four other courses there where the green fee is $1 or less.

Another splendid seaside course, with magnificent views cut to Ailsa Craig, Arran, and the Mull of Kintyre, is Turnberry.

But if you want courses less rugged but as grand, or grander, you must go to Gleneagles, which, like Turnberry and St. Andrews, has a famous hotel. This is the Scotland of the picture postcards, moor and mountain and bubbling burn. And, of course, heather.

Combined AP & UPI

Cook, 1969 American Football League rookie of the year, told Bengals coach Paul Brown he was not satisfied with the slow recovery of his arm, and also dissatisfied with the lack of progress he was making. Cook did not announce any future plans.

CHICAGO — Jake Scott, safetyman for the Miami Dolphins and most valuable player in the last Super Bowl, ended his holdout Friday when he signed a new contract after a conference with coach Don Shula.

Scott had been subjected to fines of $200 a day while staying out of training camp, and refused to come to camp without a contract. The Dolphins, on the other hand, refused to negotiate unless he came to camp.

Auto Racing

IRWINDALE, Calif. — Lawrence Derr, 32, Corona, Calif., was killed Friday night when his dragster went out of control and slammed into a guard railing at Irvindale Raceway.

Drag strip officials told police that Derr was traveling at about 60 miles per hour during a practice run when he lost control of his machine. It went into a spin and crashed into the railing, witnesses said.

Armstrong Wins 3 Crowns In Boxing

NEW YORK — It's August, 1938 and in the sporting world Carl Hubbell is seeing a doctor about a very sore pitching arm. Young Bobby Riggs has just won the Eastern Grass Court Singles Tennis Championship and Henry Armstrong is shooting for a "triple crown" in boxing.

Henry has developed an unusual perpetual motion attack that wears his opponents down from constant pressure.

As round one begins, Armstrong bobs, weaves and moves inside. He's pumping punches at Ambers from all angles. Lou is jabbing at the oncoming challenger and shooting uppercuts at close range.

In the sixth Ambers goes down again. He's up, but he's forced to call on all of his ring savvy to ward off his knockout-hungry opponent.

Ambers recovers but this buzz-saw that he is fighting tonight will not let up.

Lou is wilting under the constant heat of Henry's attack. However, the champion is still fighting back with both hands. The final bell ends an excellent fight and the decision could be close.

A split verdict gives Henry Armstrong the fight and it also gives him simultaneous possession of three world boxing crowns.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Hendrick Stirs Palmer's Memory

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Jim Palmer will not have much trouble remembering George Hendrick the next time they meet.

Hendrick, an oftimes moody outfielder for the Cleveland Indians with whom Palmer was not too familiar, cost the Baltimore Orioles' righthander the second no-hitter of his career Friday night when he singled sharply to center as the leadoff batter in the eighth inning. It was the only hit Palmer allowed as he hurled the Orioles to a 9-0 victory in the first game of a doubleheader.

Palmer, who came within two outs of a perfect game earlier this season before settling for a two-hitter, notched his fourth shutout of the year and ran his record to 12-6, but he didn't feel he was that overpowering.

"I'm happy to win but I really didn't have anything exceptional going for me, nothing outstanding, unless you consider the fact I had the best defense in baseball behind me," he said. "Hendrick hit a slider that broke good. He could have grounded to short on it. We haven't seen that much of Hendrick and the toughest guys are the ones you don't know. I pitch to him more down than away, but he waits well."

The Orioles supported Palmer with a season-high 16 hits, including three by Tommy Davis, who drove in five runs. Bobby Grich added a homer to the OrioIls' offense.

Baltimore also won the nightcap, 5-2, as Andy Etchebarren delivered a three-run double in the fourth inning.

In other American League action, Detroit topped Boston 4-2, Kansas City edged Chicaego 2-1 in 10 innings, New York edged Milwaukee 7-6, Texas beat California 5-2 and Minnesota whipped Oakland 8-2.

Houston beat Los Angeles 5-2, New York nipped St. Louis 2-1, Montreal edged Philadelphia 5-4, Cincinnati routed Atlanta 12-2, Pittsburgh downed Chicago 10-6 and San Diego topped San Francisco in National League games.

Al Kaline, enduring the worst season of his 20 years in the majors, hit a homer in the first inning then snapped a 1-1 tie in the eighth with a two-run single as the Tigers beat the Red Sox for the 10th time in 11 games.

Starter Bill Lee took the loss for the Red Sox. The Terra Linda left-hander went seven and one-third innings, surrendering four runs on seven hits while striking out two and walking three. Lee's record dipped to 12-5.

Fred Patek scored all the way from second base with the winning run on an infield hit by Carl Taylor to give the Royals a victory over the White Sox.

Fittipaldi Crashes In Practice

Fittipaldi's accident occurred as he swung into the pit straight at about 100 miles per hour. His black and gold machine hit the left hand quard trail, spun across the track and crashed into the right hand rail.

Fittipaldi remained wedged in his car as rescuers tried to free his trapped feet. He was taken to the special trackside hospital unit and treated for shock and unspecified foot injuries.

Emerson emerged from the hospital unit smiling but limping heavily. He drove back to the pits where Lotus mechanics prepared his second car which he would have qualify to start Sunday.

"The car came out of the right-hander, hit the guardrail, came across the track and jammed into the other one," Wilson said.

"He is all right. He jammed his foot very heavily but I do not think it is broken or anything," he said.

Emerson was dueling for fastest practice time with Scotsman Jackie Stewart at the time of the accident. Stewart unofficially had clocked 1:20.28 and Emerson unofficially clocked 1:30.00 around the 2.6 miles seaside circuit.

Green Happy About Golf Performance

MONTREAL (UPI) — The last time Hubert Green was in Montreal to play golf was in 1971 at the Canadian Open. He finshed in a tie for 27th with a 72-hole score of 291.

Now, two years later, at the same golf club and at the same tournament he is tied for the lead with only two rounds to play.

Lest you think that Green has not done anything on the Professional Golfers Association tour, he collected a cool $15,000 for his victory at the Tallahassee Open, and he ranks 20th on the PGA money list with winnings of more than $67,000. Should he win here he would crack the $100,000 mark with the $35,000 first prize.

After a sizzling round of five-under-par 67 in the opening round Thursday, Green came back with a 71 Friday to give him a 36-hole total of 138. That score was good for a first place tie with Forrest Fezler.

"I'm pretty happy with my round today," said an excited Green. "I haven't really had time to enjoy it yet, I'm still trying to calm back down."

While Green was out taming the par 72, 6,905 yard course here at Richelieu Valley, many of the other golfers were having their difficulties.

The cut came at 148 and among those who missed were Gary Player, U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller, defending champion Gay Brewer, and Napa's Ron Cerrudo.

Bobby Mitchell, who had a two-stroke lead until he dumped his approach shot into a creek and took a triple-bogey seven at the 445-yard 18th hole, was alone in third place at 139 with a 70 Friday.

First round leader Hale Irwin, who had 75 Friday, and British Open champion Tom Weiskopf were at 140, and there were seven players at 141 including Lee Trevino and Bruce Crampton.

2 Ex-Colts, Schmidt In Grid Hall

CANTON, Ohio (UPI) — Former teammates Raymond Berry and Jim Parker of the Baltimore Colts and ex-linebacker Joe Schmidt of the Detroit Lions were to be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame today.

Afterward, the San Francisco Forty Niners and the New England Patriots were to meet in the annual American Football Conference-National Football Conference Hall of Fame game.

Parker, a No. 1 draft choice rom Ohio State, played 11 years with the Colts and was named an All-Pro eight times—four as a guard and four as a tackle.

Schmidt, a seventh-round draft choice of the Lions, quickly became the defensive leader and was an All-National Football League eight times, playing in nine straight Pro Bowls. He subsequently coached the Lions until resigning last year.

All 10 members of the charter group of famers were invited to attend a reunion.

Pete Rozelle, the NFL commissioner, will speak briefly. Also scheduled to participate are New York Jets Coach Weeb Ewbank, Ohio State Coach Woody Hayes and William Clay Ford, owner of the Detroit Lions.

Awards will go to four photographers for football coverage, Ron Overdahl, Milwaukee Journal, Bob East III, South-Dade, Fla., News Leader; Carl Skalak Jr., Elyria, Ohio, Chronicle-Telegram, and Jerry L. Manis, Alton, Ill., Evening Telegraph.

McCaffree also figured largely in the tying and winning runs in the fifth inning. He tripled to score Mark Hommen with the tying run, and when catcher John Shimmin walked and was caught in a pickle between first and second base, he scored the tie-breaker.

Guy, the Oakland Raiders first draft choice, was a major factor in the All-Star performance as he punted four times for a 44.1 yard average to keep the Dolphins at bay, and Shula said he would be "a real asset" to the Oakland Raiders, who signed him just prior to the game.

his fourth in four games and his 14th of the season. He had two in the second game against Oakland Thursday. Last year, the 28-year-old Twins catcher had only one homer and wanted to be traded, but several deals fell through.

"The guys on the bench would say I'd hit another Egyptian homer," said Mitterwald.

"I guess I'm starting to hit American style now."

Mitterwald has slammed six of his 14 team-leading homers this month, his last four driving in 11 runs and bringing the Twins from six games behind the A's.

More important, the club is only two games back in the less column before opening a three-game series tonight at Metropolitan Stadium against Chicago.

The Twins, 7-1 against Oakland this season, begin a road trip with a three-game series against the A's Tuesday night.

Mitterwald credits his surge to the confidence Quilici game him and the persistence of batting ceach Ralph Rowe, who taught Mitty to wait longer before swinging.

Bert Blyleven, 13-9, was the beneficiary of the seven-run inning off Dave Hamilton, 5-4, and reliever Horacio Pina.

Blyleven struck out nine and scattered seven hits. He gave up a run-scoring single to Gene Tenace in the fourth and balked in another Oakland run in the fifth.

Jockey Blum In 4,000th Win

OCEANPORT, N.J. (UPI) — Just two days short of the 20th anniversary of his first winner, jockey Walter Blum accomplished the 4,000th victory of his career by taking the seventh race at Monmouth Park Friday with Student Lamp.

Only two other active riders, Willie Shoemaker and Bill Hartack, have visited the winner's circle 4,000 times. Blum ranks sixth among all-time North American riders, with three retired jockeys— John Longden, Eddie Arcaro and Steve Brooks—above him on the list.

Student Lamp, running for a $21,000 claiming price and trained by a famous ex-rider, Doug Dodson, was the favorite of the 14,126 Monmouth fans and paid $3.60, $2.80 and $2.60 across the board.

Track Club Holds Road Race Sunday

Combined AP & UPI

Cook, 1969 American Football League rookie of the year, told Bengals coach Paul Brown he was not satisfied with the slow recovery of his arm, and also dissatisfied with the lack of progress he was making. Cook did not announce any future plans.

CHICAGO — Jake Scott, safetyman for the Miami Dolphins and most valuable player in the last Super Bowl, ended his holdout Friday when he signed a new contract after a conference with coach Don Shula.

Scott had been subjected to fines of $200 a day while staying out of training camp, and refused to come to camp without a contract. The Dolphins, on the other hand, refused to negotiate unless he came to camp.

Auto Racing

IRWINDALE, Calif. — Lawrence Derr, 32, Corona, Calif., was killed Friday night when his dragster went out of control and slammed into a guard railing at Irvindale Raceway.

Drag strip officials told police that Derr was traveling at about 60 miles per hour during a practice run when he lost control of his machine. It went into a spin and crashed into the railing, witnesses said.

BRETTON WOODS, N.H. — Vijai Amritraj of India Friday upset top-ranked Rod Laver of Australia 6-7, 7-6, 6-4 and advanced to the semifinals in the $25,000 Volvo International Tennis Tournament.

WASHINGTON — Arthur Ashe of Miami Friday defeated Nikki Pilic of Yugoslavia 6-4, 4-6, 6-3 in the quarter-final round of the $75,000 Washington Star-News International Tennis Championships.

CLEVELAND — Top-seeded Chris Evert Friday topped Pat Bostrom of Seattle 6-2, 6-0 in quarterfinal singles play at the $25,000 Marie O. Clark Memorial Tennis Tournament.

Track-Field

ODESSA, USSR — The U.S. swept the first two places in the 100 meter dash and the 110 meter hurdles Friday to take a narrow 64-61 lead over Russian men at the midway point of their track and field meet. Soviet women lead American girls, 45-38.

Horse Racing

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. — Secretariat set two Saratoga Track records in the mud Friday in prepping for the Whitney and Travers stakes.

The 3-year-old Triple Crown champion ripped four-fifths of a second off the old mile record by travelling the distance in 1:34 flat and then went all out to lower the 1⅛ mile mark by two-fifths of a second as he was clocked in 1:47.45.

Baseball

ST. LOUIS — The St. Louis Cardinals traded infielder Ed Crosby to the Cincinnati Reds Friday for righthanded pitcher Ed Sprague.

Crosby, 24, had a .128 average in 39 at-bats this season. Sprague, 27, has a 9-11 major league record, including a 1-3 mark and a 5.08 earned run average this season.

Club Pro Eastland Bowls 288

Oh, that 10 pin!

Country Club Bowl pro Lou Eastland, 39, left the 10 pin on his first ball of the opening game, converted it, then reeled off 10 consecutive strikes en route to a 288 Tuesday night in the 555 Trios at the San Rafael bowling house.

"I left the 4-7 on the 12th ball," he said yesterday. After the first game, he rolled a 209, 169 and 238 for a 904 series.

HAMILTON LANES closes its doors Tuesday at 11 p.m. The bowling lanes are becoming dark due to the phaseout of the Air Force Base.

NORM OUELLETE of San Quentin has the third highest scratch game, a 287, in the 28th California State Men's Bowling Tournament in Hayward after 12 weeks of play. The tournament concludes Aug. 26.

SUNDAY AT MIDNIGHT is the entry deadline for the North Bay Summer Doubles qualifying at Nave Lanes. Two-man teams paying $7.80 at the desk may bowl three games to determine 10 team qualifiers for the finals July 14-15 at Holiday Bowl in Santa Rosa.

Scoring will be by total pins and handicaps. The same format will be used in the finals where there will be $1,000 in the prize fund.

Armstrong Wins 3 Crowns In Boxing

NEW YORK — It's August, 1938 and in the sporting world Carl Hubbell is seeing a doctor about a very sore pitching arm. Young Bobby Riggs has just won the Eastern Grass Court Singles Tennis Championship and Henry Armstrong is shooting for a "triple crown" in boxing.

Henry has developed an unusual perpetual motion attack that wears his opponents down from constant pressure.

As round one begins, Armstrong bobs, weaves and moves inside. He's pumping punches at Ambers from all angles. Lou is jabbing at the oncoming challenger and shooting uppercuts at close range.

In the sixth Ambers goes down again. He's up, but he's forced to call on all of his ring savvy to ward off his knockout-hungry opponent.

Ambers recovers but this buzz-saw that he is fighting tonight will not let up.

Lou is wilting under the constant heat of Henry's attack. However, the champion is still fighting back with both hands. The final bell ends an excellent fight and the decision could be close.

A split verdict gives Henry Armstrong the fight and it also gives him simultaneous possession of three world boxing crowns.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Hendrick Stirs Palmer's Memory

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Jim Palmer will not have much trouble remembering George Hendrick the next time they meet.

Hendrick, an oftimes moody outfielder for the Cleveland Indians with whom Palmer was not too familiar, cost the Baltimore Orioles' righthander the second no-hitter of his career Friday night when he singled sharply to center as the leadoff batter in the eighth inning. It was the only hit Palmer allowed as he hurled the Orioles to a 9-0 victory in the first game of a doubleheader.

Palmer, who came within two outs of a perfect game earlier this season before settling for a two-hitter, notched his fourth shutout of the year and ran his record to 12-6, but he didn't feel he was that overpowering.

"I'm happy to win but I really didn't have anything exceptional going for me, nothing outstanding, unless you consider the fact I had the best defense in baseball behind me," he said. "Hendrick hit a slider that broke good. He could have grounded to short on it. We haven't seen that much of Hendrick and the toughest guys are the ones you don't know. I pitch to him more down than away, but he waits well."

The Orioles supported Palmer with a season-high 16 hits, including three by Tommy Davis, who drove in five runs. Bobby Grich added a homer to the OrioIls' offense.

Baltimore also won the nightcap, 5-2, as Andy Etchebarren delivered a three-run double in the fourth inning.

In other American League action, Detroit topped Boston 4-2, Kansas City edged Chicaego 2-1 in 10 innings, New York edged Milwaukee 7-6, Texas beat California 5-2 and Minnesota whipped Oakland 8-2.

Houston beat Los Angeles 5-2, New York nipped St. Louis 2-1, Montreal edged Philadelphia 5-4, Cincinnati routed Atlanta 12-2, Pittsburgh downed Chicago 10-6 and San Diego topped San Francisco in National League games.

Al Kaline, enduring the worst season of his 20 years in the majors, hit a homer in the first inning then snapped a 1-1 tie in the eighth with a two-run single as the Tigers beat the Red Sox for the 10th time in 11 games.

Starter Bill Lee took the loss for the Red Sox. The Terra Linda left-hander went seven and one-third innings, surrendering four runs on seven hits while striking out two and walking three. Lee's record dipped to 12-5.

Fred Patek scored all the way from second base with the winning run on an infield hit by Carl Taylor to give the Royals a victory over the White Sox.

Fittipaldi Crashes In Practice

Fittipaldi's accident occurred as he swung into the pit straight at about 100 miles per hour. His black and gold machine hit the left hand quard trail, spun across the track and crashed into the right hand rail.

Fittipaldi remained wedged in his car as rescuers tried to free his trapped feet. He was taken to the special trackside hospital unit and treated for shock and unspecified foot injuries.

Emerson emerged from the hospital unit smiling but limping heavily. He drove back to the pits where Lotus mechanics prepared his second car which he would have qualify to start Sunday.

"The car came out of the right-hander, hit the guardrail, came across the track and jammed into the other one," Wilson said.

"He is all right. He jammed his foot very heavily but I do not think it is broken or anything," he said.

Emerson was dueling for fastest practice time with Scotsman Jackie Stewart at the time of the accident. Stewart unofficially had clocked 1:20.28 and Emerson unofficially clocked 1:30.00 around the 2.6 miles seaside circuit.

CANADIAN OPEN

Green Happy About Golf Performance

MONTREAL (UPI) — The last time Hubert Green was in Montreal to play golf was in 1971 at the Canadian Open. He finshed in a tie for 27th with a 72-hole score of 291.

Now, two years later, at the same golf club and at the same tournament he is tied for the lead with only two rounds to play.

Lest you think that Green has not done anything on the Professional Golfers Association tour, he collected a cool $15,000 for his victory at the Tallahassee Open, and he ranks 20th on the PGA money list with winnings of more than $67,000. Should he win here he would crack the $100,000 mark with the $35,000 first prize.

After a sizzling round of five-under-par 67 in the opening round Thursday, Green came back with a 71 Friday to give him a 36-hole total of 138. That score was good for a first place tie with Forrest Fezler.

"I'm pretty happy with my round today," said an excited Green. "I haven't really had time to enjoy it yet, I'm still trying to calm back down."

While Green was out taming the par 72, 6,905 yard course here at Richelieu Valley, many of the other golfers were having their difficulties.

The cut came at 148 and among those who missed were Gary Player, U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller, defending champion Gay Brewer, and Napa's Ron Cerrudo.

Bobby Mitchell, who had a two-stroke lead until he dumped his approach shot into a creek and took a triple-bogey seven at the 445-yard 18th hole, was alone in third place at 139 with a 70 Friday.

First round leader Hale Irwin, who had 75 Friday, and British Open champion Tom Weiskopf were at 140, and there were seven players at 141 including Lee Trevino and Bruce Crampton.

2 Ex-Colts, Schmidt In Grid Hall

CANTON, Ohio (UPI) — Former teammates Raymond Berry and Jim Parker of the Baltimore Colts and ex-linebacker Joe Schmidt of the Detroit Lions were to be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame today.

Afterward, the San Francisco Forty Niners and the New England Patriots were to meet in the annual American Football Conference-National Football Conference Hall of Fame game.

Parker, a No. 1 draft choice from Ohio State, played 11 years with the Colts and was named an All-Pro eight times—four as a guard and four as a tackle.

Schmidt, a seventh-round draft choice of the Lions, quickly became the defensive leader and was an All-National Football League eight times, playing in nine straight Pro Bowls. He subsequently coached the Lions until resigning last year.

All 10 members of the charter group of famers were invited to attend a reunion.

Pete Rozelle, the NFL commissioner, will speak briefly. Also scheduled to participate are New York Jets Coach Weeb Ewbank, Ohio State Coach Woody Hayes and William Clay Ford, owner of the Detroit Lions.

Awards will go to four photographers for football coverage, Ron Overdahl, Milwaukee Journal, Bob East III, South-Dade, Fla., News Leader; Carl Skalak Jr., Elyria, Ohio, Chronicle-Telegram, and Jerry L. Manis, Alton, Ill., Evening Telegraph.

Guy, the Oakland Raiders first draft choice, was a major factor in the All-Star performance as he punted four times for a 44.1 yard average to keep the Dolphins at bay, and Shula said he would be "a real asset" to the Oakland Raiders, who signed him just prior to the game.

Miami, led by Csonka with 76 yards in 17 carries, rushed for 173 yards and 251 overall while holding the stars to 79 rushing and 54 passing for a 133 total.

A's Odom Pitches Vs. Texas' Dunning

his fourth in four games and his 14th of the season. He had two in the second game against Oakland Thursday. Last year, the 28-year-old Twins catcher had only one homer and wanted to be traded, but several deals fell through.

"The guys on the bench would say I'd hit another Egyptian homer," said Mitterwald.

"I guess I'm starting to hit American style now."

Mitterwald has slammed six of his 14 team-leading homers this month, his last four driving in 11 runs and bringing the Twins from six games behind the A's.

More important, the club is only two games back in the less column before opening a three-game series tonight at Metropolitan Stadium against Chicago.

The Twins, 7-1 against Oakland this season, begin a road trip with a three-game series against the A's Tuesday night.

Mitterwald credits his surge to the confidence Quilici game him and the persistence of batting ceach Ralph Rowe, who taught Mitty to wait longer before swinging.

Bert Blyleven, 13-9, was the beneficiary of the seven-run inning off Dave Hamilton, 5-4, and reliever Horacio Pina.

Blyleven struck out nine and scattered seven hits. He gave up a run-scoring single to Gene Tenace in the fourth and balked in another Oakland run in the fifth.

McCaffree also figured largely in the tying and winning runs in the fifth inning. He tripled to score Mark Hommen with the tying run, and when catcher John Shimmin walked and was caught in a pickle between first and second base, he scored the tie-breaker.

Jockey Blum In 4,000th Win

OCEANPORT, N.J. (UPI) — Just two days short of the 20th anniversary of his first winner, jockey Walter Blum accomplished the 4,000th victory of his career by taking the seventh race at Monmouth Park Friday with Student Lamp.

Only two other active riders, Willie Shoemaker and Bill Hartack, have visited the winner's circle 4,000 times. Blum ranks sixth among all-time North American riders, with three retired jockeys— John Longden, Eddie Arcaro and Steve Brooks—above him on the list.

Student Lamp, running for a $21,000 claiming price and trained by a famous ex-rider, Doug Dodson, was the favorite of the 14,126 Monmouth fans and paid $3.60, $2.80 and $2.60 across the board.

Track Club Holds Road Race Sunday

The Northern California Seniors Track Club will be sponsoring a 15-mile open road race tomorrow morning in conjunction with the Amateur Athletic Union.

Runners will be leaving Fort Baker at 8:30 a.m. Entry fee is $1.50 and registration will be prior to 8 a.m.

Fuentes Is Enjoying His Best Season With Giants

By JOE SARGIS

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Tito Fuentes, the peppery little San Francisco Giants' second baseman, is enjoying his best big league season ever and it's no fluke.

"Tito was a pretty damn good player the last two seasons," said Charlie Fox the other day, "but this year is something else. He's a complete player now. He thinks baseball every second he is on the field and that has to make a difference."

Fuentes rapped out six hits in a doubleheader sweep of the San Diego Padres Thursday to boost his batting average to .286. Fuentes batted .295 in 1969 but he had only 183 at-bats that year and wasn't the regular that he now is.

"Playing all the time makes a difference," said Fuentes of his 1973 season. "Also, you never stop learning in baseball. I think I learn something every day I play. I don't want to sound like I'm bragging but I am a smarter player now than I was before."

Tito, to his credit, is a very teachable player. He'll listen to anyone's advice but he's smart enough to think things over before making a change. Also, it depends on who is doing the advising.

Take a week ago in Chicago, for instance.

Both Fox and pitching coach Don McMahon thought Fuentes, a switch hitter, was standing too close to the plate while batting lefthanded. They suggested he pull his front foot back away from the plate a couple of inches.

"I tried it and it worked," Fuentes said. "Pulling my front foot back only a few inches gives me a chance to pull the ball more when I'm batting lefthanded. That forces the defense to play over a little more to the right and gives me a hole up the middle."

Fuentes had four of his hits the other day up the middle while batting lefthanded.

"That proved to me what Fox and McMahon said was a good suggestion," said Fuentes.

Another player Fuentes has been listening to of late is Bobby Bonds, who is having a super year as the greatest leadoff man in history with 27 homers, 122 hits, 89 runs scored, 69 RBIs and 29 stolen bases in games through Thursday.

Fuentes had a chance to be the hero in Thursday's second game against the Padres, simply because San Diego walked Bonds intentionally to fill the bases with two out in the bottom of the 10th. The pitcher was lefthander Mike Caldwell, who in 3 2-3 innings of relief had given up only a bloop single.

As Bonds walked to first on his intentional pass he stopped to talk with Fuentes a minute.

"Bobby told me I was not standing up straight batting righthanded against lefthanded pitchers," Fuentes said. "I don't know why but lately against lefthanders I been bailing out, swinging with my arms instead of my body."

Once again, Fuentes proved a good listener as he bounced a single over short to drive in the winning run. Naturally, the first man Fuentes ran over to was Bonds.

"I can't tell you how much Bonds has meant to our club this year," said Fuentes. "I'll say this, I'd do anything he says. He's a real smart ball player. That's why he is doing so well. Of course, I don't expect to do what he does. I'm just a little fella and I have to think about placing the ball."

"Tito underrates himself," said Fox. "In his way he is making as big a contribution as anyone on the club."

Fox is right. While batting second most of the year Fuentes has driven in 46 runs with his admitted goal 60.

"I'll say this," Fuentes emphasized. "If I drive in 60 runs the Giants will win the pennant, and somehow I'm going to get 60. You wait and see."

THROWING UP — Forrest Fezler threw his club up in the air after missing a putt on the 17th hole yesterday of the $175,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship in Montreal. Fezler shot a 71 for a two-round score of 138. He was tied for the lead with Hubert Green going into today's third round. See story, page 12.

Raiders Ink Biletnikoff, Kicker Guy

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (UPI) — The Oakland Raiders were a full team today as they held their annual Family Day program following the signing of holdout Fred Biletnikoff and top draft pick Ray Guy.

Coach John Madden Friday announced that Biletnikoff had come to terms for his ninth season. The star wide receiver, who has caught 119 passes over the past two seasons, signed a three-year contract in 1971 and later renegotiated it upward.

He reportedly wanted another $15,000 this season but settled for around $5,000.

The signing of the kicking whiz, Guy, to a three-year pact was announced in Chicago prior to Friday's College All Star game, in which Guy kicked well.

The Southern Mississippi star punted for a 46.2 yard average and hit a National Collegiate Athletic Association record 61-yard field goal last season. He reportedly got more than $200,000 from the Raiders.

Defensive back Nemiah Wilson came to camp Thursday.

Chopping Winner

HAYWARD, Wis. (UPI) — Ron Wilson of Australia won the underhand chopping contest Friday with a time of 20 seconds flat to kick off the 14th annual Lumberjack World Championship.

FEDERAL COURT SUIT

NFL Players Challenge Rozelle Over Rentzel

CHICAGO (UPI) — A suit challenging the authority of National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle to suspend wide receiver Lance Rentzel of the Los Angeles Rams will be filed in federal court in Los Angeles, probably Monday, according to the NFL Players Association.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the players group, said Rozelle's order suspending Garvey was in "callous disregard" of Rentzel's rights. The suspension was levied, Garvey said, for an indefinite period after Rentzel pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of marijuana.

The suit, Garvey said, would name Rozelle, the NFL and the Los Angeles Rams as defendants and would challenge the NFL constitution which gives the commissioner the right to suspend.

"We believe the player should have had due process," Garvey said. "We would like to know where the commissioner gets the power to expel from the league and terminate the career of a player. This has got to come to a stop, his power to expel on any issue."

Rentzel has appealed his case, Garvey said, and "we think he has a pretty good chance of winning the appeal. Rozelle's action jeopardizes his appeal and is callous disregard of his rights."

The players, he said, would like to have a provision that an independent arbitrator be authorized to handle appeals, and said that now "we have Commissioner Rozelle taking action and the appeal is to arbitrator Rozelle."

He also charged that Rozelle was using Rentzel as a "scapegoat" to prove he would deal severely with any drug problem involving NFL players.

TREAD WEAR EXPECTANCY

Because of variable driving habits and road conditions under which tires are used, it is impractical for Montgomery Ward, and conceivably misleading to our customers, to guarantee any specific number of months or miles of tread wear. We can, however, indicate the wear potential we have built into our tires in terms of service in normal family use. If a Riverside tire wears down to the tread wear indicators during the Tread Wear Expectancy, Montgomery Ward will upon presentation of the tire and evidence of date of purchase replace the tire for the then current price less the following dollar allowance:

Tread Wear Expectancy	Tread Wearout Allowance

C78-14 TUBELESS BLACKWALL PLUS 2.11 FEDERAL EXCISE TAX AND TRADE-IN TIRE

- Dual belts fight mileage-robbing squirm and scrub
- Polyester combines protective strength, riding comfort
- Carries Wards 36-month tread wear expectancy

TREAD WEAR EXPECTANCY

Because of variable driving habits and road conditions under which tires are used, it is impractical for Montgomery Ward, and conceivably misleading to our customers, to guarantee any specific number of months or miles of tread wear. We can, however, indicate the wear potential we have built into our tires in terms of service in normal family use. If a Riverside tire wears down to the tread wear indicators during the Tread Wear Expectancy, Montgomery Ward will upon presentation of the tire and evidence of date of purchase replace the tire for the then current price less the following dollar allowance:

Tread Wear Expectancy	Tread Wearout Allowance
42,000 miles	Prorated on Miles Driven
36,000 miles
45 month	$13.00
40 month	10.00
39 month	8.00
36 month	6.00
33 month	5.00
30 month	4.00
24 month	3.00
18 month	2.00

THE ENERGY CRISIS

Several Avenues Pursued To Fill Natural Gas Need

By S. FRED SINGER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service
(Sixth of 12 articles)

A year ago LNG and SNG might have been mistaken for Vietnamese generals, Siamese twins, and perhaps new psychedelic drugs. By now most people recognize them as liquefied natural and synthetic (or substitute) natural gas.

LNG is indeed natural gas. At least it starts out that way. But shipping any gas is costly because of its bulk. Overland transfer by pipeline costs 2 cents per 100 miles per 1,000 cubic feet and is economic only because 1,000 cubic feet of natural gas has a heat value of a million BTU (British thermal units), about the same as 1/6 of a barrel of oil (about 7 gallons), or about the same as 1/25 of a ton of coal (about 40 pounds).

But pipelines cannot yet span oceans, so natural gas is first liquefied at high pressures and extremely low temperatures. It must be conveyed in specially built insulated vessels, and of course it must be gasified at the receiving end.

The procedure is so costly that there was no objection from our domestic gas producers to importing LNG. They say it not as a competitor, but as a demonstration that domestic gas is a bargain, and perhaps as a magnet for pulling up the price of domestic natural gas. With the latter at 20 cents per 1,000 cubic feet at the wellhead(and about 70 cents average in northeast cities) and with LNG at $1.40 to $2 at the city gate, there is quite a spread here. And LNG costs are likely to escalate further.

It is to the great credit of our public officials that they have resisted rushing into gigantic LNG deals with Algeria and with the Soviet Union. The latter, we are told, would require a $10 billion investment by us in plant and pipelines in the USSR — a very expensive long-range commitment.

Early in June, Dr. Armand Hammer, chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corporation, announced an agreement of intent under which Occidental and El Paso Natural Gas Company would move LNG from the Soviet Union by tanker to the U.S. West Coast. The intent is to move some $10 billion worth of natural gas over a 25-year period. If consummated, it will require some $4 billion to construct a 2,000-mile pipeline, a liquefaction plant, and a fleet of tankers.

There could also be other costs involved: federal subsidies for tanker construction and federal guarantees for the capital investments. The memory of the Russian wheat deal where the U.S. paid three times over is still fresh in many minds: first, by selling too cheaply; secondly, by internal subsidies which were not necessary; and finally, by now paying a higher price for food.

Energy economics is not so different from wheat economics. One must always ask: Who benefits and who pays? Domestic gas producers see a chance to raise their prices up to the LNG mark. A rise in gas prices will certainly tend to raise the prices of oil and coal, so those producers won't object. Gas pipeline companies have little incentive to keep prices low; at worst they simply pass the price increase along to the consumer, but they are likely to charge more anyway.

Gas distributors are in a similar situation. Shipyards see a chance for new business and federal subsidies. Equipment manufacturers see a chance for a big new market. There are few who will stand up for the consumer, who pays for it all in the end.

Fortunately there are lower-cost alternatives to LNG. One result of the proposed deregulation of the wellhead price of natural gas will be a release of gas to the small users, commercial and residential, who might have been customers for LNG. Paying a little more for deregulated domestic gas will actually save the consumer some money.

Before the price of domestic gas rises too high, perhaps before 1980, gas may reach the continental United States from large Arctic deposits via a trans-Canada pipeline. (The trans-Alaska pipeline, unfortunately, cannot handle gas economically.) And by that time also synthetic natural gas from coal will make its appearance.

The problems of coal gasification have been technical and economic. Optimists predict a price of about 65 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, pessimists closer to $1. Depending on price, it may not be too many years before SNG becomes competitive with natural gas, especially gas from offshore and from the Arctic.

Right now SNG is being made by a number of gas distributors who use naphtha, propane, or some similar light hydrocarbon as a feedstock. It is expensive, and it also increases the need for oil imports.

Another approach, competitive to LNG, for using foreign natural gas is the "jumbo methanol process," described in a recent issue of the Oil and Gas Journal. The gas is turned into methyl alcohol (methanol), a liquid which can be transported at normal temperatures by pipeline or in ordinary tankers at very low cost. At the receiving end it can be turned into gas and piped to consumers, or it can be burned as a liquid. It might even make a good motor fuel and supplement gasoline. The great advantage is that it can use foreign natural gas resources which heretofore may have been wasted.

With respect to LNG, the advantages of methanol are not only delivered cost, safety, and ease of handling, but also the reduced need for initial capital. Put another way, LNG facilities and tankers would have to operate at full capacity; for methanol this will not be important. It could therefore be used more economically for peak shaving, that is, to satisfy peak demand which cannot be handled by the pipeline network. In addition, methanol can be piped and stored at low cost.

Transport Controls May Cost Billions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) said yesterday the transportation controls and other clean air measures it has proposed may wind up costing the average motorist from $32 to $175 —and the nation as a whole somewhere "in the low billions."

It also said the automobile industry currently has plans to build only about half as many buses as will eventually be needed to take people in and out of cities once commuter controls are clamped on, and suggested some priority system will have to be worked out to distribute buses adequately.

Robert W. Fri, who will continue to serve as acting EPA director until President Nixon's new nominee, Russell E. Train, takes over, told a news conference the economic impact of transportation controls to comply with the clean air law are very hard to pin down.

As a whole, he said, the nation may wind up paying "somewhere in the low billions" for such things as exhaust control devices on cars, new mass transit systems and higher gasoline prices caused by rationed supplies.

Fri listed some examples which he said gave clues to what the average motorist might have to pay. A relatively uncomplicated situation, he said, exists in Rochester, N. Y., where the basic cost will be $2 for vehicle inspection and perhaps $30 for repairs on the average car to meet clean air standards.

At the other extreme, he said, is California's San Joaquin Valley where drivers might pay $3 for higher gasoline prices caused by ceilings on the supply, $2 to $30 for vehicle inspections and maintenance, and $90 to $140 to retrofit older cars with exhaust controls —for a total bill of from $95 to $175.

Fri said he was dismayed that comment on the proposals covering 36 cities in the nation's urban areas has centered so far on what should not be done, rather than what should be done.

He conceded, however, that there are problems. To achieve more than a 20 per cent reduction in car usage after 1977 "will require a major and in some cases unreasonable effort unless driving is to be cut without a corresponding increase in mass transit," he said.

"Second, even in order to achieve the 20 per cent level of driving reductions, transit planners and bus builders need to get hopping now," he added. "Other than Washington, D.C., we know of no mass transit plan designed to cut traffic by more than 5 per cent."

Halt Is Ordered To Sterilizations

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — The Alabama Mental Health Department said yesterday it will halt the sterilization of mentally retarded youths until a court rules on the practice.

Attorney George W. Dean had asked for a temporary restraining order, claiming officials at Partlow State School and Hospital "caused numerous inmates entrusted to their care and custody to be surgically sterilized so as to prevent them from bearing children."

Novelist Plans To Leave France

PARIS (UPI) — Novelist Francoise Sagan says she is fleeing Paris to live in Ireland.

Sagan, who broke into the Paris literary scene at the age of 18 with her first novel "Bonjour Tristesse", is now 38.

She said one of the reasons was a Paris newspaper report which suggested she had been drinking heavily. She said she is suing the newspaper.

Sheltered and protected by the lush green summits to the West, this unique location basks at the same time in brilliant sunshine and fresh cool ocean breezes. A sweeping view of the valley and hills explodes from your Greenoaks' Townhouse in all directions. The beauty, tranquility and simplicity of country living are in abundance everywhere. Yet this rural setting is situated only minutes from the modern Northgate Shopping Center with its specialty shops, department stores, restaurants and markets. Elementary and high schools, both public and parochial, are equally convenient. And the living itself! Your Townhouse In The Country has been carefully planned so that you can experience the comfort of two worlds. There is the special intimacy of your own family in your own luxurious home and at the same time the convenience and pleasure of sharing with friends and neighbors the Recreation Center with its giant swimming pool, squash courts and many other activities. All are there when you want them. And all are available to you without maintenance worries. Truly Greenoaks is a plan for the future that has become a reality today.

Come and visit us during our Grand Opening Celebration—Now!

The INDEPENDENT-JOURNAL reserves the right to edit, or withhold publication, and may exercise its discretion in acceptance or classification of any and all advertising.

DEADLINES
New ads, corrections, and cancellations must be made before 5:30 p.m. the day before publication, 1 p.m. Saturday for Monday and 24 hours before holidays. Suburban office deadline, 4:30 p.m. the day before publication.

ERRORS
We make every effort to avoid errors. But when hundreds of ads are handled daily, mistakes do slip through. We ask that you check your ad and call immediately if it is in error. We regret that we cannot be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion or for errors not clearly affecting the value of the ad, and are responsible only for that line or portion of the ad that appeared incorrectly.

Marin County—1800

"How do I know A Realtor will get me the best possible price when I sell my home?"

Your Realtor is a professional. He's in the marketplace, following changing conditions every day. With this specialized knowledge and perspective, he can almost always negotiate the best possible price for your home. And when you work through a member office of the Marin County Board of Realtors, your property can go on Multiple Listing Service within a week after your property is listed. A picture and description of your home is sent to more than 230 offices in the county.

This exposure, plus the more than 900 sales people working for you, means you get the very best prospects available looking at your home.

The complexities and subtleties of buying and selling property are nothing to entrust to an amateur, so if you're selling, sell your home through a member office of the Marin County Board of Realtors. Your Real Estate Professionals.

"How do I know A Realtor will get me the best possible price when I sell my home?"

Your Realtor is a professional. He's in the marketplace, following changing conditions every day. With this specialized knowledge and perspective, he can almost always negotiate the best possible price for your home. And when you work through a member office of the Marin County Board of Realtors, your property can go on Multiple Listing Service within a week after your property is listed. A picture and description of your home is sent to more than 230 offices in the county.

This exposure, plus the more than 900 sales people working for you, means you get the very best prospects available looking at your home.

The complexities and subtleties of buying and selling property are nothing to entrust to an amateur, so if you're selling, sell your home through a member office of the Marin County Board of Realtors. Your Real Estate Professionals.

At Golden Tee you have all the luxury and personal freedom of an apartment, but now you can put it all together with your own spacious townhome. Payments are as low as rent, because you get all the tax savings and investment benefits of home ownership.

You live in a country club atmosphere with the Bennett Valley Municipal Golf Course right in your backyard and a private cabana swim club just steps from your door with saunas, pool tables, and a luxurious clubhouse. There's plenty of time to enjoy your swinging new life, because all exterior maintenance and gardening is done for you by professionals.

Stay cool and swing into summer in an air conditioned two bedroom townhome at Golden Tee. With out low prices and great finaicing you can easily swing a deal that fits your budget.

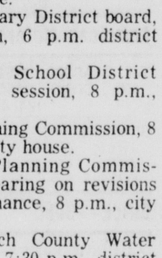
HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Drug Resistant Typhoid Being Brought Home By Tourists



Travelers returning from Mexico are bringing back into this country a form of typhoid that is resistant to chloramphenicol — the medication of choice. Seven cases reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association involved individuals who had visited Northern and Central Mexico, where typhoid is said to be epidemic.

THE REPORT came from physicians in California. One victim had been very careful in that he did not drink the water, but he ate local foods and drank iced beverages. The ice had been made from local water supplies. Freezing may inactivate, but it does not kill, the typhoid bacilli. This is a mistake made by many tourists visiting tropical areas. In addition, they must avoid the water, including bottled water, unless it is known to be safe and pure.

Typhoid fever (or other forms of traveler's diarrhea) seldom occurs in countries and larger cities with high hygienic standards or in tourists who exercise care in their selection of food and drink. Whenever there is doubt about good sanitation, eat only what can be peeled or cooked, drink boiled water, and beverages that have been boiled or bottled, carbonated soft drinks and beer or wine.

And we must emphasize the dangers associated with using tap water for toothbrushing and for ice in drinks.

TYPHOID is an unusual form of traveler's diarrhea. Unrecognized victims (and carriers) might contaminate our own water supply. Before sanitary measures were taken in Chicago during the early decades of this century, half of the patients seen by my physician father had typhoid fever. Thanks to improvements in sanitation and the typhoid vaccine, it is now a rare disease.

Most instances of diarrhea among travelers are not typhoid and occur at the beginning of a trip. There is vomiting, abdominal cramps, chills, and fever. The exact cause is not known, but it is believed that eating strange or exotic foods and seasonings may upset the intestinal tract. Fatigue from lack of sleep and overexertion may also play a role. To my knowledge, there is no absolute preventive.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to Dr. Van Dellen, c/o the Independent-Journal, P.O. Box 330, San Rafael, Ca. 94902.

CURE IN BELL'S

Mrs. M. C. writes: Is Bell's palsy ever completely cured?

REPLY

Not if you mean 99.9 per cent cured. Many of the victims improve to such an extent that an expert would be needed to detect any residual changes. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on this condition.

PAINFUL BUNIONS

P. A. C. writes: What can I do with a growing and painful bunion? Pease answer soon because mine is very painful. I am over 50 years of age.

REPLY

The surgical removal of a painful bunion is an acceptable and successful precedure. Consult your physician for temporary relief and set a date for the operation.

Prime Rate Hiked

NEW YORK (UPI) — Major banks lifted the prime interest rate yesterday from 8½ to 8¾ per cent.

ALMANAC

By U.P. International

Today is Saturday, July 28, the 209th day of 1973 with 156 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn. The evening star is Venus.

Mrs. John F. Kennedy, widow of the assassinated 35th American president now Mrs. Aristotle Onassis, was born July 28, 1929.

On this day in history:

In 1914, Austria declared war on Serbia, marking the start of World War I.

In 1932, more than 15,000 unemployed World War I veterans encamped in Washington were driven from the city by federal troops. They were demanding immediate payment of a "war bonus."

In 1945, the United States Senate ratified the United Nations' charter by a vote of 89 to 2.

Also in 1945, an Army B25 bomber lost in the fog crashed into the site of the Empire State Building in New York City, killing 13 persons.

A thought for the day: Greek philosopher Aesop said, "Little friends may prove great friends."

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.
Other areas:
San Francisco, clean air.
San Jose, significant air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Grand Jury Interference By President Is Charged

"This is the kind of situation that makes justice grieve at being so treated," Ervin told John D. Ehrlichman, Nixon's former chief domestic affairs advsier, during Senate hearings yesterday.

Ehrlichman has testified that, at the President's request, he called Assistant Attorney General Henry Peterson, then supervising the Justice Department's Watergate prosecution, and asked him to allow Stans to give testimony in a deposition— a question and answer session with only lawyers present— instead of before the grand jury. Peterson agreed.

This was before the indictments of seven Watergate defendants were handed down in September. The written transcript of Stans' deposition was given to the grand jury, but the jurors were unable to question him or observe his demeanor as a witness.

"Under our system of criminal jurisdiction, witnesses are supposed to go before the grand jury so that the grand jury may ask them questions," Ervin said, his voice rising, "even though they may be questions that the prosecuting attorneys do not see fit to ask."

"Now I'm not saying anything of what the President's intention was," Ervin said. "The President ought to have never made a request which had the effect of bypassing the judicial process by which witnesses in investigations go before grand juries and are subject to beng questioned by grand juries."

Ervin charged that had Stans given the grand jury the same testimony he gave the Senate committee, high officials of the Committee to Re-elect the President could have been indicted on charges of being accessories to the fact of burglary.

Ehrlichman, addressing the nationwide television audience as well as Ervin, got in only one comment on length. He said:

"Lest the viewers be left with the impression that the grand jury didn't see the deposition, I think it's important to note that the grand jury did in fact have that deposition read to them, and it included the questions of prosecutors and Mr. Stans' response, and, of course, the grand jury had the opportunity to indicate to the prosecutors any additional questions that they might wish to have asked of Mr. Stans, or they could have asked that Mr. Stans then be brought up to the grand jury."

Ehrlichman, completing four days of testimony, will return to the witness chair in the Senate Caucus Room Monday. His testimony is running much longer than expected. He will be followed by his close friend and associate, former White House chief of staff H.R. "Bob" Haldeman, who has a 104-page prepared statement.

Watergate Costs Top $2 Million

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Watergate investigation is proving to be one of the most expensive in history with known public and private costs already nearing $2 million.

The estimates are already more than twice the cost of the year-long Pentagon Papers trial, previously considered one of the most expensive public proceedings on record.

The prospect of a long court fight over President Nixon's refusal to submit records and tapes to the Senate Watergate committee is likely to raise the cost even higher.

On top of that is the possibility of another round of Watergate criminal trials as an outgorwth of Senate committee testimony and grand jury investigations already underway.

Several big outlays that have already been publicized may represent only the tip of the iceburg.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

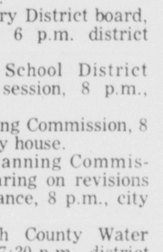
Drug Resistant Typhoid Being Brought Home By Tourists



Travelers returning from Mexico are bringing back into this country a form of typhoid that is resistant to chloramphenicol — the medication of choice. Seven cases reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association involved individuals who had visited Northern and Central Mexico, where typhoid is said to be epidemic.

THE REPORT came from physicians in California. One victim had been very careful in that he did not drink the water, but he ate local foods and drank iced beverages. The ice had been made from local water supplies. Freezing may inactivate, but it does not kill, the typhoid bacilli. This is a mistake made by many tourists visiting tropical areas. In addition, they must avoid the water, including bottled water, unless it is known to be safe and pure.

Typhoid fever (or other forms of traveler's diarrhea) seldom occurs in countries and larger cities with high hygienic standards or in tourists who exercise care in their selection of food and drink. Whenever there is doubt about good sanitation, eat only what can be peeled or cooked, drink boiled water, and beverages that have been boiled or bottled, carbonated soft drinks and beer or wine.

And we must emphasize the dangers associated with using tap water for toothbrushing and for ice in drinks.

TYPHOID is an unusual form of traveler's diarrhea. Unrecognized victims (and carriers) might contaminate our own water supply. Before sanitary measures were taken in Chicago during the early decades of this century, half of the patients seen by my physician father had typhoid fever. Thanks to improvements in sanitation and the typhoid vaccine, it is now a rare disease.

Most instances of diarrhea among travelers are not typhoid and occur at the beginning of a trip. There is vomiting, abdominal cramps, chills, and fever. The exact cause is not known, but it is believed that eating strange or exotic foods and seasonings may upset the intestinal tract. Fatigue from lack of sleep and overexertion may also play a role. To my knowledge, there is no absolute preventive.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to Dr. Van Dellen, c/o the Independent-Journal, P.O. Box 330, San Rafael, Ca. 94902.

CURE IN BELL'S

Mrs. M. C. writes: Is Bell's palsy ever completely cured?

REPLY

Not if you mean 99.9 per cent cured. Many of the victims improve to such an extent that an expert would be needed to detect any residual changes. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on this condition.

PAINFUL BUNIONS

P. A. C. writes: What can I do with a growing and painful bunion? Pease answer soon because mine is very painful. I am over 50 years of age.

REPLY

The surgical removel of a painful bunion is an acceptable and successful precedure. Consult your physician for temporary relief and set a date for the operation.

Prime Rate Hiked

NEW YORK (UPI) — Major banks lifted the prime interest rate yesterday from 8½ to 8¾ per cent.

ALMANAC

By U.P. International

Today is Saturday, July 28, the 209th day of 1973 with 156 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn. The evening star is Venus.

Mrs. John F. Kennedy, widow of the assassinated 35th American president now Mrs. Aristotle Onassis, was born July 28, 1929.

On this day in history:

In 1914, Austria declared war on Serbia, marking the start of World War I.

In 1932, more than 15,000 unemployed World War I veterans encamped in Washington were driven from the city by federal troops. They were demanding immediate payment of a "war bonus."

In 1945, the United States Senate ratified the United Nations' charter by a vote of 89 to 2.

A thought for the day: Greek philosopher Aesop said, "Little friends may prove great friends."

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.
Other areas:
San Francisco, clean air.
San Jose, significant air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Grand Jury Interference By President Is Charged

"This is the kind of situation that makes justice grieve at being so treated," Ervin told John D. Ehrlichman, Nixon's former chief domestic affairs advsier, during Senate hearings yesterday.

Ehrlichman has testified that, at the President's request, he called Assistant Attorney General Henry Peterson, then supervising the Justice Department's Watergate prosecution, and asked him to allow Stans to give testimony in a deposition—a question and answer session with only lawyers present— instead of before the grand jury. Peterson agreed.

This was before the indictments of seven Watergate defendants were handed down in September. The written transcript of Stans' deposition was given to the grand jury, but the jurors were unable to question him or observe his demeanor as a witness.

"Under our system of criminal jurisdiction, witnesses are supposed to go before the grand jury so that the grand jury may ask them questions," Ervin said, his voice rising, "even though they may be questions that the prosecuting attorneys do not see fit to ask."

"Now I'm not saying anything of what the President's intention was," Ervin said. "The President ought to have never made a request which had the effect of bypassing the judicial process by which witnesses in investigations go before grand juries and are subject to beng questioned by grand juries."

Ervin charged that had Stans given the grand jury the same testimony he gave the Senate committee, high officials of the Committee to Re-elect the President could have been indicted on charges of being accessories to the fact of burglary.

Ehrlichman, addressing the nationwide television audience as well as Ervin, got in only one comment on length. He said:

"Lest the viewers be left with the impression that the grand jury didn't see the deposition, I think it's important to note that the grand jury did in fact have that deposition read to them, and it included the questions of prosecutors and Mr. Stans' response, and, of course, the grand jury had the opportunity to indicate to the prosecutors any additional questions that they might wish to have asked of Mr. Stans, or they could have asked that Mr. Stans then be brought up to the grand jury."

Ehrlichman, completing four days of testimony, will return to the witness chair in the Senate Caucus Room Monday. His testimony is running much longer than expected. He will be followed by his close friend and associate, former White House chief of staff H.R. "Bob" Haldeman, who has a 104-page prepared statement.

Watergate Costs Top $2 Million

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Watergate investigation is proving to be one of the most expensive in history with known public and private costs already nearing $2 million.

The estimates are already more than twice the cost of the year-long Pentagon Papers trial, previously considered one of the most expensive public proceedings on record.

The prospect of a long court fight over President Nixon's refusal to submit records and tapes to the Senate Watergate committee is likely to raise the cost even higher.

On top of that is the possibility of another round of Watergate criminal trials as an outgorwth of Senate committee testimony and grand jury investigations already underway.

Several big outlays that have already been publicized may represent only the tip of the iceburg.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Carroll O'Connor isn't so dumb. He knows exactly what he's doing in the role of Archie Bunker in the popular CBS-TV series, "All in the Family." It's almost as though Caroll has spent his whole life — 39, 49, or 59 years — learning the part of this loud-mouthed bigot who blames his problems on everybody else. Why? See below.

Birthday Biography: Carroll was born in New York City, where "getting ahead" is like fighting to get onto a subway. The smart guy takes a taxi. So Carroll avoided all the pushing and shoving by going to Montana for college. He also stayed clear of submarines in World War II, sailing on 14 merchant vessels, never sunk once.

Life was tough for O'Connor at the start. In the early 1950s, he and his newly wed wife, Nancy Fields, lived in a small, cold flat in Dublin while he tried acting in the Irish theater. It didn't pay much. Nor did Broadway open up to his talents when he returned in 1954.

Success came gradually. He won a part in an off-Broadway show. This led to TV jobs. Then Hollywood called and used him in 27 pictures. Finally he was spotted by producer Norman Lear, who knew instantly, "That's the character I want."

Why does O'Connor play Archie Bunker so well? Because he wants to show Americans what a bigot is really like. And how does he do that? By reading James Baldwin, a black writer he greatly admires. Baldwin was born in New York city the same day, month and year as O'Connor.

Coming birthdays (July 29-August 4); Sunday — Melvin Belli, 66; Monday — Casey Stengel, 84; Tuesday — Hank Bauer, 51; Wednesday — Arthur Hill, 51; Thursday — Carroll O'Connor, 49; James Baldwin, 49; Friday — Tony Bennett, 47; Saturday — Tina Cole, 30. Contest winners will be notified by mail.

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Midnight Carelessness Can Create Atrocious Overbids

Careful research has revealed the fact that the most atrocious overbids are made very close to midnight.

This is when most people are playing their last rubber of bridge before calling it a night, and the losers are willing to stretch an ace or two in the hope of breaking even.

FANCY REASONS

North had all sorts of fancy reasons for pushing the bidding up to six clubs, but the true reason was that this was the last rubber of the evening.

As it happened, he got away with his atrocious overbid.

West opened the king of diamonds, and declarer gulped hard as he saw the dummy. Then he ruffed the diamond in dummy, led a trump to the ace and tried a finesse with the queen of hearts.

BLAME THE HOUR

Perhaps it was the hour that caused East to win the trick with the king of hearts. He might still have saved the day by returning a heart, but he actually returned a spade.

This was enough for South. Declarer took the ace of spades, ruffed another diamond in dummy and drew trumps.

Then dummy's hearts, which fortunately broke 3-3, allowed him to discard a spade and his last two diamonds.

DEFENSIVE HOLDUP

East had the chance to execute a defensive holdup play. He should have played a low heart, quickly and casually, instead of taking the king.

South would surely plan to take another heart finesse, and then the roof would fall in on him. (In fact, even if South knew what was going on, he would probably go down.)

What's more, refuse it without even thinking about it. Don't give away the location of your king. The trick will come back to you, with interest.

DAILY QUESTION

♣ - 6 5 2
What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. The hand is not worth an overcall.

The atrocious bidding in today's hand is not restricted to North and South!

Orthodox Christians Believe Theirs Is True Church

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor

There are six million Christians in America who are neither Catholic fish nor Protestant fowl, and they'd thank you to remember that.

They are members of 20 Eastern Orthodox denominations transplanted to America by immigrants from Greece, Russia, Romania, Bulgaria, Armenia, Serbia and other lands of Eastern Europe and the near East where this ancient family of churches has always been the dominant expression of Christianity.

The Eastern churches, whose chief bishop was the Patriarch of Constantinople, parted company with Western Christendom, whose chief bishop was the Pope of Rome, in "The Great Schism" of 1054.

THE PRIMARY issue leading to their separation was Rome's assertion of papal supremacy over the entire Christian world, which the Eastern churches were not prepared then, and are not prepared now, to acknowledge.

It irks an Orthodox to hear someone refer to Orthodoxy as "splitting off" from Rome. In Orthodox eyes, it was the other way around: they didn't leave Rome, Rome left them. To the true believer, Orthodoxy is the one, true, original Christian church.

Orthodox Christians cite both Biblical and historical evidence that Christianity was born at the eastern end of the Mediterranean. Until it obtained a toehold in the imperial capital of Rome, most of its apostolic activity was concentrated in that area. Jerusalem, Antioch, Corinth and Alexandria were great centers of Christian worship long before the Roman church emerged from the catacombs.

IN RECENT years, Pope Paul VI and the Patriarch of Constantinople have met to exchange "the kiss of peace" and other gestures intended to symbolize a mutual spirit of good will between the long-estranged communions. But any chance of their reuniting seems remote, at best.

There is a somewhat better chance of uniting most Orthodox bodies in this country in a single "Orthodox Church of America." But even that long-discussed project is hampered by the complexities of cold war politics. In several instances, there are two Orthodox bodies representing Americans of the same national descent—for example, two Russian groups, two Armenian groups, two Ukrainian groups.

One of each pair maintains ties with its historic mother church in the homeland; the other eschews such relations on grounds the mother church, like the homeland, is under Communist domination.

LARGEST AND strongest Orthodox body in the Western Hemisphere is the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of North and South America, which has some two million members in the United States. Many of the Smaller Orthodox denominations have fewer than 100,000 members.

Although they remain poles apart on the issue of papal authority, Eastern Orthodoxy and Roman Catholicism closely resemble each other in doctrine. The Orthodox Eucharist, known as "The Divine Liturgy," is fundamentally similar to the Roman Mass. the most conspicuous difference (to a visitor at any rate) is that the Orthodox service runs much longer, sometimes as long as three hours, much of which is spent standing.

ANTICIPATING modern psychology by centuries, Orthodox churches have long proceeded on the premise that worship should involve all the senses. To encourage immersion of the whole person in an atmosphere of devotion, Orthodox churches strive for visual beauty through spectacular mosaics on ceilings and walls and through richly colored paintings of Christ, the Virgin Mary and the Saints.

The latter are called "ikons" and many Orthodox Christians keep them in their homes to assist in focusing their minds on godly matters when they engage in private prayor.

Incense and music—including the singing or chanting of most of the liturgy by priest and choir—are other measures by which total involvement of the senses in worship is encouraged.

ALTHOUGH GREEK historically played the same role in Orthodox worship that Latin did in Roman Catholic worship, the Orthodox churches preceded Rome by many years in granting permission for each national church to use its own native language. Thus services may be conducted in Greek, Romanian, German, Arabic, Russian, any other Slavic tongue or—as is increasingly the case in Orthodox churches in America—in English.

The Orthodox give great reverence to the Virgin Mary, and teach that she lived a sinless life. But they reject, as late and doubtful doctrine, the Catholic dogma that Mary was "immaculately conceived" — that is, born without taint of original sin.

They also reject the Catholic doctrine of purgatory as a state in which souls too sinful for immediate admission to heaven, but nevertheless saved from eternal punishment in hell, undergo a temporary period of punishment to "purge" and purify them. The Orthodox, in common with Protestants, find no warrant in scripture or ancient sacred tradition for this Catholic teaching.

ORTHODOX ARE much stricter than Catholics about fasting. They keep a longer and sterner Lent, and they still don't eat meat on Fridays, although Catholics now may do so.

On clerical celibacy, Orthodoxy is somewhat more flexible than Catholicism. Once ordained, a priest may not marry. But a married man may be ordained a priest and continue to live in the married state. Hence any candidate for the Orthodox priesthood who is interested in matrimony is well advised to lay hold of that estate before ordination. The only restriction on a married priest is that he may not be elected a bishop or become a monk: these offices are reserved for celibate clergy.

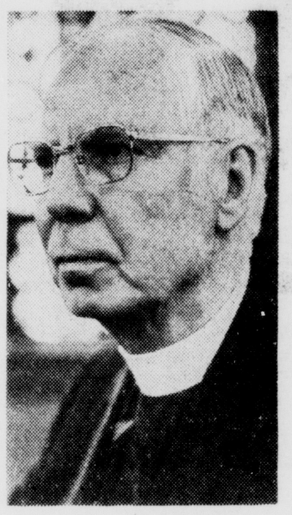
It used to be customary for Orthodox priests to wear beards and many still do. But beards now are regarded as optional, and it is not uncommon today to see a cleanshaven Orthodox priest ministering to a congregation containing a large number of bearded young laymen.

Rev. Harold Hallett Ends Career With St. John's

Rev. Harold E. Hallett has retired as rector emeritus of St. John's Episcopal Church, Ross, after 31 years of service.

The retirement was effective last Sunday, at which time long-time friend and fellow priest Todd Ewald assisted Rev. Hallett in conducting a "farewell" 10 a.m. communion service celebrated by nearly 300 parishioners and friends. A special commemorative program was created for the occasion.

After the service a reception was held in honor of Rev. Hallett and his wife, Helen. They were presented with a "parishioner's purse" and various parish representatives, including the acolytes, expressed their gratitude for the rector's spiritual leadership over the years.



REV. HAROLD HALLETT
Retires after 31 years

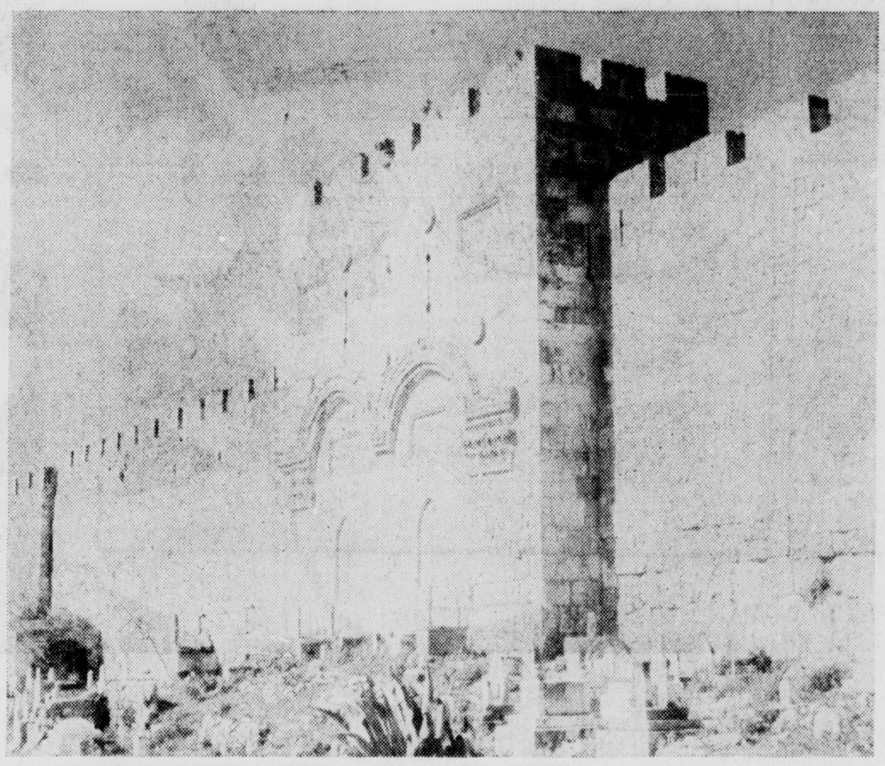
Rev. Hallett was born in Pasadena on July 21, 1908, graduated from Pasadena High School, Pasadena Junior College and the University of California at Los Angeles.

In 1932 he graduated from the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass., and was ordained deacon by the bishop of Los Angeles. Bishop Sherrill of Massachusetts ordained him to the priesthood on April 5, 1933. He was curate of St. Stephen's Memorial Church in Lynn, Mass., 1933-1934. From 1934 through 1937 he was rector of the Church of the Messiah, Auburndale; and Rector of Christ Church, Quincy 1938-1941.

The New England climate proved too difficult for his health, so Bishop Sherrill, on a visit to Ross, suggested Rev. Hallett for the vacancy at St. John's. Bishop Block accepted the selection and Rev. Hallett took his first service as rector here on Palm Sunday, 1942.

He was married to Helen Elizabeth Henson of Seattle, a graduating student from St. Margaret's, Berkeley, on August 3, 1944, in Christ Church, Seattle, They have three sons, Harold E., Jr. (1945), James Malcolm (1947), and Douglas Lawrence (1949).

His spiritual leadership of the parish over more than 30 years has been marked by development of the facilities as well: doubling of the church capacity, expansion of the parish house, installation of the organ, acquisition of the rectory. Diocesan service included terms on the Diocesan Council, the Standing Council and seven years (including the chairmanship) of the Board of Examining Chaplains.



SEALED GOLDEN GATE — The Golden Gate was once an important entrance to the walled city of Jerusalem. As time passed the gate fell into disrepair until 1543, when Sultan Suleiman restored it. Then, for some unknown reason, he sealed it shut. Benefit Seen In Watergate

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

One constructive result of the Watergate affair could be a renewed respect among the American people for the wisdom of their Founding Fathers.

The men who wrote the U.S. Constitution decreed that church and state should remain forever separate. In a deliberate break with the British system under which the monarch also is head of the church, the architects of the American way sought to draw a clear line of demarcation between political power and spiritual leadership.

Unfortunately, this concept, which seemed so important to men like Jefferson and Madison, has never really grasped the popular imagination.

Throughout our nation's history, beginning with George Washington, Americans have had a tendency to expect their presidents to be more than chief executives of the government. They have sought to make their presidents serve also as High Priests, personal embodiments and symbols of the nation's ethical ideals and aspirations.

A very few presidents — Abraham Lincoln is one who comes readily to mind —have had the extraordinary combination of attributes necessary to fulfill this dual role.

But very often the cherished national myth of president-as-high-priest has come into harsh conflict with the fact that most presidents are merely successful politicians who have clawed their way to the top by compromise, expedience, ruthlessness or luck. A not-insignificant number have been hack politicians, with no discernible qualifications even for political leadership. They were catapulted into the White House by death or assassination after they had been rather casually chosen for the undemanding role of vice president.

Although this has been going on for nearly 200 years, Americans still insist on surrounding the office of President of the United States with a kind of religious mystique, and expecting its inhabitant to "set a high example" of moral rectitude and personal piety for the nation.

This is why presidents rarely seen in church before Inauguration Day suddenly become ardent church-goers once they're in the White House.

The sad but hardly surprising truth is that the number of saints who've been elected president has been greatly exceeded by the number of men susceptible to such human failings as adultery, deceit, double-crossing and using the power of government to obtain wealth, perquisites or prerogatives for themselves, their families and their friends.

If Watergate has made one thing perfectly clear, it is that Americans are naive to assume there is some mystical aura of righteousness about the presidency which automatically assures a high standard of ethical sensitivity in the White House staff.

Presidents are NOT high priests. They are victorious politicians. And the people who work for them and wield power in their name are just as apt to be liars or crooks as they are to be incorruptible statesmen.

They all bear watching at all times.

Seminary Accredited By Two Organizations

Dr. Arnold B. Come, president of San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo and Berkeley, has announced that the Seminary has been accredited by the Western Association of Schools and Colleges and that its Doctor of Ministry programs have been accredited by the American Association of Theological Schools.

Referring to the accrediting by the Western Association of Schools and Colleges Dr. Come said, "This accreditation means that our students will be able to transfer some of the courses they have taken at the seminary toward other degree programs in colleges and universities throughout the country."

The American Association of Theological Schools has accredited the seminary for many years, but this is the first time they have accredited specific degree programs.

San Francisco Theological Seminary started offering the doctor of ministry degree in 1970. It now has two types of programs that lead to the doctor of ministry degree. The first is for full-time students who have just completed their master of divinity degree. Here a student takes classwork and works in a church on a dissertation/project.

The second program is designed for full-time ministers who meet in groups with eight to ten other clergy/students in their own geographic areas for three academic quarters and then spend six weeks on the San Anselmo campus during the summer months. These part-time students then work on independent dissertation/projects and take additional seminars before receiving their degrees. The latter program is part of the seminary's advanced pastoral studies department.

San Francisco Theological Seminary is a founding member of the Graduate Theological Union in Berkeley.

Therapist Will Speak About Vietnam Work

On Wednesday, Aug. 1, at 8 p.m., Dorothy Weller will speak of her experiences as a physical therapist at the Quaker Rehabilitation Center in Quang Ngai Province, Vietnam. Her talk, illustrated with slides and a tape recording, will be at the Mill Valley Methodist Church, Sycamore and Camino Alto.

From July 4, 1967, for four years, she worked with civilian war casualties, amputees, preparing their stumps for fitting with artificial limbs made at the center.

Dorothy Weller's assignments, in addition to drawing up the specifications for the physical therapy section of Quang Ngai Provincial Hospital, and her own therapy duties, included training Vietnamese therapists, and writing a physiotherapy manual in Vietnamese.

During this period she lived and worked very closely with the Vietnamese people, forming close friendships and sharing their tragedy.

Her account of the war, its effects on the people and their culture, and an account of what can be done to ease their plight, is a moving one, listeners have said.

Prophecy To Be Examined In Film Slated At Church

Can the future be predicted? The film, "The Professor and the Prophets," another in the Moody Institute of Science series, applies scientific tests to the prophecies of the Bible in a film to be shown at Calvary Baptist Church, tomorrow at 7 p.m., in the main chapel.

In the film, Dr. Irwin A. Moon and mathematician Peter Stoner examine a number of famous Biblical cities and the prophecies concerning them.

The theory of probability is applied to answer the question, "Could the accuracy of Bible prophecy be due merely to clever human guesswork or mere chance, or is there evidence of divine inspiration?"

In full color, the film shows the Golden Gate in Jerusalem, the rose-red rock city of Petra, the ruins of ancient Babylon, and other historical and archaeological sites.

Graham Film Will Be Shown

The Billy Graham film, "His Land," will be shown tomorrow at 6 p.m. at Grace Church of Marin, Bolinas and Richmond roads, San Anselmo.

The free showing s open to the public.

Summer Bible School Slated In Marin City

A summer vacation Bible school will begin Monday and continue through Aug. 10 at the First Missionary Baptist Church, 501 Drake Avenue, Marin City.

Theme of the school, according to the Rev. E. Paul Perkins, pastor, will be "Growing Up in Christ."

Classes will be held from 9 a.m. to noon each Monday through Friday and are open to everyone.

Film Scheduled In Marin City

A film entitled Ethiopian Call" will be shown at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the First Missionary Baptist Church, 501 Drake Avenue, Marin City.

Rev. E. Paul Perkins, pastor, said the film will deal with the problems of the poverty-stricken and disease-ridden Ethiopian people.

Catholic Pentecostal Will Speak Tomorrow

Father Joseph Dipbels, MA, STL, will speak on the current world-wide explosion of the charismatic movement at The Church of the Open Door tomorrow night.

Father Diebels, who has been a Jesuit priest for 30 years, was formerly a professor of theology at the University of San Francisco. For the past year he has been one of three official charismatic coordinators for the Catholic Church in the Bay Area.

He believes that Catholics and Protestants alike may experience the reality of God through a Pentecostal encounter with the Holy Spirit. His topic will be, "Charismatic Renewal Today."

The Church of the Open Door is located in Scout Hall, 177 E. Blithedale, in Mill Valley. The program is set for 7 p.m. A nursery will be provided.

Orthodox Christians Believe Theirs Is True Church

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor

There are six million Christians in America who are neither Catholic fish nor Protestant fowl, and they'd thank you to remember that.

They are members of 20 Eastern Orthodox denominations transplanted to America by immigrants from Greece, Russia, Romania, Bulgaria, Armenia, Serbia and other lands of Eastern Europe and the near East where this ancient family of churches has always been the dominant expression of Christianity.

The Eastern churches, whose chief bishop was the Patriarch of Constantinople, parted company with Western Christendom, whose chief bishop was the Pope of Rome, in "The Great Schism" of 1054.

THE PRIMARY issue leading to their separation was Rome's assertion of papal supremacy over the entire Christian world, which the Eastern churches were not prepared then, and are not prepared now, to acknowledge.

It irks an Orthodox to hear someone refer to Orthodoxy as "splitting off" from Rome. In Orthodox eyes, it was the other way around: they didn't leave Rome, Rome left them. To the true believer, Orthodoxy is the one, true, original Christian church.

Orthodox Christians cite both Biblical and historical evidence that Christianity was born at the eastern end of the Mediterranean. Until it obtained a toehold in the imperial capital of Rome, most of its apostolic activity was concentrated in that area. Jerusalem, Antioch, Corinth and Alexandria were great centers of Christian worship long before the Roman church emerged from the catacombs.

IN RECENT years, Pope Paul VI and the Patriarch of Constantinople have met to exchange "the kiss of peace" and other gestures intended to symbolize a mutual spirit of good will between the long-estranged communions. But any chance of their reuniting seems remote, at best.

There is a somewhat better chance of uniting most Orthodox bodies in this country in a single "Orthodox Church of America." But even that long-discussed project is hampered by the complexities of cold war politics. In several instances, there are two Orthodox bodies representing Americans of the same national descent—for example, two Russian groups, two Armenian groups, two Ukrainian groups.

One of each pair maintains ties with its historic mother church in the homeland; the other eschews such relations on grounds the mother church, like the homeland, is under Communist domination.

LARGEST AND strongest Orthodox body in the Western Hemisphere is the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of North and South America, which has some two million members in the United States. Many of the Smaller Orthodox denominations have fewer than 100,000 members.

Although they remain poles apart on the issue of papal authority, Eastern Orthodoxy and Roman Catholicism closely resemble each other in doctrine. The Orthodox Eucharist, known as "The Divine Liturgy," is fundamentally similar to the Roman Mass. the most conspicuous difference (to a visitor at any rate) is that the Orthodox service runs much longer, sometimes as long as three hours, much of which is spent standing.

ANTICIPATING modern psychology by centuries, Orthodox churches have long proceeded on the premise that worship should involve all the senses. To encourage immersion of the whole person in an atmosphere of devotion, Orthodox churches strive for visual beauty through spectacular mosaics on ceilings and walls and through richly colored paintings of Christ, the Virgin Mary and the Saints.

The latter are called "ikons" and many Orthodox Christians keep them in their homes to assist in focusing their minds on godly matters when they engage in private prayor.

Incense and music—including the singing or chanting of most of the liturgy by priest and choir—are other measures by which total involvement of the senses in worship is encouraged.

ALTHOUGH GREEK historically played the same role in Orthodox worship that Latin did in Roman Catholic worship, the Orthodox churches preceded Rome by many years in granting permission for each national church to use its own native language. Thus services may be conducted in Greek, Romanian, German, Arabic, Russian, any other Slavic tongue or—as is increasingly the case in Orthodox churches in America—in English.

The Orthodox give great reverence to the Virgin Mary, and teach that she lived a sinless life. But they reject, as late and doubtful doctrine, the Catholic dogma that Mary was "immaculately conceived" — that is, born without taint of original sin.

They also reject the Catholic doctrine of purgatory as a state in which souls too sinful for immediate admission to heaven, but nevertheless saved from eternal punishment in hell, undergo a temporary period of punishment to "purge" and purify them. The Orthodox, in common with Protestants, find no warrant in scripture or ancient sacred tradition for this Catholic teaching.

ORTHODOX ARE much stricter than Catholics about fasting. They keep a longer and sterner Lent, and they still don't eat meat on Fridays, although Catholics now may do so.

On clerical celibacy, Orthodoxy is somewhat more flexible than Catholicism. Once ordained, a priest may not marry. But a married man may be ordained a priest and continue to live in the married state. Hence any candidate for the Orthodox priesthood who is interested in matrimony is well advised to lay hold of that estate before ordination. The only restriction on a married priest is that he may not be elected a bishop or become a monk: these offices are reserved for celibate clergy.

It used to be customary for Orthodox priests to wear beards and many still do. But beards now are regarded as optional, and it is not uncommon today to see a cleanshaven Orthodox priest ministering to a congregation containing a large number of bearded young laymen.

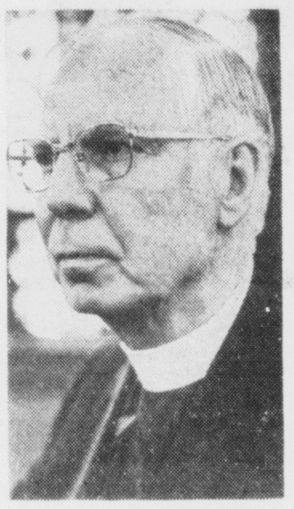
Rev. Harold Hallett Ends Career With St. John's

Rev. Harold E. Hallett has retired as rector emeritus of St. John's Episcopal Church, Ross, after 31 years of service.

The retirement was effective last Sunday, at which time long-time friend and fellow priest Todd Ewald assisted Rev. Hallett in conducting a "farewell" 10 a.m. communion service celebrated by nearly 300 parishioners and friends. A special commemorative program was created for the occasion.

After the service a reception was held in honor of Rev. Hallett and his wife, Helen. They were presented with a "parishioner's purse" and various parish representatives, including the acolytes, expressed their gratitude for the rector's spiritual leadership over the years.

Rev. Hallett was born in Pasadena on July 21, 1908, graduated from Pasadena High School, Pasadena Junior College and the University of California at Los Angeles.



REV. HAROLD HALLETT
Retires after 31 years

In 1932 he graduated from the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass., and was ordained deacon by the bishop of Los Angeles. Bishop Sherrill of Massachusetts ordained him to the priesthood on April 5, 1933. He was curate of St. Stephen's Memorial Church in Lynn, Mass., 1933-1934. From 1934 through 1937 he was rector of the Church of the Messiah, Auburndale; and Rector of Christ Church, Quincy 1938-1941.

The New England climate proved too difficult for his health, so Bishop Sherrill, on a visit to Ross, suggested Rev. Hallett for the vacancy at St. John's. Bishop Block accepted the selection and Rev. Hallett took his first service as rector here on Palm Sunday, 1942.

He was married to Helen Elizabeth Henson of Seattle, a graduating student from St. Margaret's, Berkeley, on August 3, 1944, in Christ Church, Seattle. They have three sons, Harold E., Jr. (1945), James Malcolm (1947), and Douglas Lawrence (1949).

His spiritual leadership of the parish over more than 30 years has been marked by development of the facilities as well: doubling of the church capacity, expansion of the parish house, installation of the organ, acquisition of the rectory. Diocesan service included terms on the Diocesan Council, the Standing Council and seven years (including the chairmanship) of the Board of Examining Chaplains.

The Bible Stories By A Cast Of Puppets —

By DON KEOWN

"There is room in religion for imagination and for humor," believes Rev. Bob Morgan.

And he and his wife Diana prove it by taking puppets into the churches to re-enact the stories from the Bible.

Bob Morgan is the 28-year-old former pastor of the First Baptist Church of Sausalito. He has been working in connection with the evangelism department of the California Southern Baptist State Convention, and will continue to perform those part-time functions along with the newly assumed duties of minister of music and education at the First Baptist Church in Ripon, a position to which he has just been appointed.

The Morgans, Mill Valley residents, have been working with the puppets for more than a year.

"I HAD ALWAYS been fascinated by puppets and by cartoons," Morgan says, "and this whole thing got started when I shot my mouth off one day in class at the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary at Strawberry about this idea I had of doing puppet shows that would dramatize the stories in the Bible.

"The first thing I knew, I received an invitation by telephone to do a one-week stand of puppet shows at a church revival in San Francisco."

Neither Morgan nor his wife had ever worked with puppets. But they were game. They hastily assembled a cast and put together a repertoire of plays.

"And that first run went surprisingly well," says Morgan.

SO THEY HAVE been doing it ever since, taking their box filled with puppets and props, their simple portable stage and their plays into churches, youth meetings, organizations and even rest homes for performances throughout the Bay Area that have become increasingly popular.

Morgan was Hawaii born and reared, the son of a Southern Baptist Church minister.

"Perhaps this desire to bring out the humor and the color of the Bible derives from the kind of humdrum religious situation I knew as a preacher's kid," he says frankly. "Now that I am in a position to do so, I have done everything I can to encourage by my example and by my work the use of every creative talent we possess in the worship and the fellowship within the church.

"MY POINT IS that you can be entertaining to the community without being derogatory toward the church or Bible."

Bob Morgan did three years of undergraduate work at Oklahoma Baptist University, then quit to go to work in the Torrance area as a programmer for a research manufacturing company.

He completed his final undergraduate work at California Baptist College in Riverside, then, in April of 1972, came to the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary in Marin for graduate work.

He is now working toward a Master's Degree in religious education. And simultaneously, for a time, he held the pastorate at the Sausalito church.

MORGAN'S CURRENT position with the evangelism department of the State Southern Baptist Convention is a voluntary one. He has been on call to join with an evangelist in conducting weekend revivals at churches of the area from time to time.

His specific responsibilities are for the music and for discipleship training at these revival meetings. "And we use the puppets, as well as cartoons, to make our training sessions more interesting and more effective," he says.

But Bob and Diana Morgan also put their puppets to other uses — at Sunday morning worship services in Southern Baptist churches in the Bay Area, at youth gatherings, at non-church affairs, in school classrooms, etc.

THE MORGANS make their own puppets, with Diana sewing them on her sewing machine. At each appearance, when spectators show a special interest, the Morgans encourage them to get their own teen-agers involved in doing puppet shows in their church.

"We offer to help them to make their puppet, or to sell them some of ours," Morgan says.

Consequently Morgan-made puppets have been sold to new owners as far away as Hawaii and Los Angeles. The Morgans charge from $5 to $10 a puppet — "what we regard as a fair amount for our labor, plus the cost of the materials."

"We have sold quite a number of puppets, and now retain about 15 for our own shows," he adds.

A SHOW WILL run from 10 minutes to 35 minutes in duration. There is no written script. But the story line is faithful to the Bible, "although we sometimes have to fill in time gaps." The dialogue is in contemporary English.

"Ken Taylor's 'The Living Bible' is one of our best sources," Bob Morgan says.

"Jonah and the Whale" is a popular production. "Daniel in the Lion's Den" is another. "Balaam and the Talking Donkey," taken from Numbers, Chapter 11, in the Old Testament, is another hit.

"What am I doing? I must be going crazy, standing here talking to a donkey," Balaam wonders aloud when he finds himself engaged in conversation with the ass.

"THAT TALKING donkey preceded Francis the talking mule by many centuries," smiles Morgan. And it is typical of the humorous stories and passages that lie in the Bible usually undetected "because there is no laugh-track to point them out," but which become apparent and rib-tickling when performed by the puppets.

"We were hesitant to involve Jesus in our stories," the young minister admits. "We wondered: Would people think we were being disrespectful? The relationship with our Saviour is so sacred."

Finally the Morgans decided to go ahead with Biblical stories in which Jesus was a principal. "After all, the most momentous events in the Bible are those in which Jesus was involved."

THE MORGANS took special care not to portray Jesus as a buffoon, but at the same time were also determined not to hide his great humanity from their audiences.

"A careful reading of the New Testament discloses that Jesus said some very funny — drily funny — things," Morgan declares. "Jesus was just as human as anyone."

Morgan cites Jesus' conversation with Zacheus, "the short fellow who had to climb a tree in order to see Jesus." The Morgans have worked this episode into a puppet play and entitled it "Guess Who Is Coming to Dinner."

THE MORGANS also work other contemporary touches into their shows. The Whale, after swallowing Jonah, observes: "I don't believe I really ate the whole thing." And invariably sends the audience into stitches.

Each play bears an underlying message for its viewers. Jonah, in attempting to escape his responsibilities, gets himself involved with and inside the Whale. Only when he is willing to accept his responsibilities does the Whale eject him — right back onto the same shore and among the same responsibilities he had fled.

Morgan estimates that 90 per cent of the puppet shows have been given in churches — all Southern Baptist, "not because we planned it that way, but because that is our church, and where our contacts are."

DIANA MORGAN, too, came from a Southern Baptist family. She was born and reared in California, the daughter of an electronics engineer. She and Bob Morgan met, appropriately, in church in Southern California.

The Morgans have two small daugh-

By PAT ANGLE

Two years ago New College of California was nothing more than a gleam in the eye of its founder, Dr. John Leary.

Today the small private school in Sausalito may be one of the fastest growing institutions of higher learning in the nation, practically exploding with plans for new programs and campuses.

This fall the college expects to double its enrollment, from 60 to 120 students, and ambitiously proposes to begin an unusual law school at the same time.

In the fall of 1974, New College will open a London branch; there is already talk of establishing a New York campus in the near future.

IN OPERATION less than 24 months, the college has already been approved for candidacy for accreditation by the Western Assn. of Colleges and Universities. It hopes to attain full accreditation next spring.

And, at a time when the federal governing is tightening its purse strings on aid to education, the college has just received nearly $170,000 in federal funds.

All these are pretty impressive achievements for the fledgling liberal arts college which began unpretentiously in September of 1971 with 16 students, two full-time instructors and only $2,500 in its coffers.

MUCH OF THE credit for the college's success must go to Leary, a Jesuit priest whose years as an administrator at two prestigious Catholic colleges convinced him that today's students needed and wanted something more than they were receiving from traditional educational institutions.

"I would see the freshmen coming in, highly motivated and anxious to learn," Leary said. "Then, within a few months time, I could see a visible decline in their enthusiasm and energy."

During eight years as president of Gonzaga University in Washington State and later as president of the University of Santa Clara, Leary had plenty of time to mull over the problem.

HE LISTENED to students who complained that they felt like nothing more than products in a large, impersonal knowledge factory. He heard his best teachers lament that, although they gave lectures as well as in the past, they knew from the many glazed eyes staring back at them that they simply were not reaching their students.

In the spring of 1971, Leary and a small group of students and teachers decided it was time to put away many of the old methods and look for better ways of imparting knowledge.

Like the Pilgrims of old, the little band left their comfortable and familiar home at Santa Clara to get into a new ship which was to bring them to Sausalito.

"IT WAS LIKE stepping into the void," Leary recalled with a chuckle.

They were very much on their own since the university made it clear it had no desire to finance or stand behind an experimental college of the type they envisioned.

What Leary, the teachers and students sought was a way to combine the stability of an established institution with the creativity of an experimental college. It was kind of like adding up apples and oranges, and the prospects didn't look promising since many free universities and similar institutions were folding almost as soon as they began.

EVEN THE MOST adventurous educational undertaking can't move without funds and the college's coffers contained a meager $150 after Leary rented a house in the Sausalito hills which was to serve as temporary headquarters.

It was a "painful, humiliating" time for the president who was fast coming to the conclusion that his grand idea was about to flop resoundingly.

"I'd been a big shot at Gonzaga and head of the Presidents' Assn. of Washington State Colleges, and now I was going to fall on my face," he said. "I felt like a damned fool."

BUT LIKE THE lilies of the field and the birds of the air, the New College

Made-In-Marin By Macraman

MARIN LIVING

By DON KEOWN

In the clubs or on the stage, Ed Millis and Chris Ducey of San Anselmo form the country-folk-rock musical duo called Prairie Madness.

When not performing or rehearsing their music, the two long-haired men form a different kind of partnership under a different name, Macraman.

As Macraman they function as an unusual two-man craft and business enterprise out of the house on Medway Road that Millis shares with Ducey and the latter's wife and two children, ages 3 and 5.

Their products are lamp shades, wall-hanging plant-holders, purses and even rocking chairs, all fashioned from raw linen cord by the old process of macrame.

They have been selling their shades, wallhangings and chairs to a number of small specialty shops in the Bay Area, and they expect their participation in next weekend's San Francisco Gift Show at Civic Auditorium and Brooks Hall, Civic Center, San Francisco, to open up a number of new markets to them.

Meanwhile, the two men continue to keep busy with their music as well.

MILLIS, 28, IS a native of North Carolina, and a University of North Carolina graduate, where he majored in political science. He attended law school for a year, worked in a couple of movies produced by Hollywood companies in North Carolina, and then moved to Los Angeles "where I became more heavily involved in my music."

Millis, a pianist, had always had a keen interest in music. And this led him to Ducey and their partnership.

Chris Ducey, 27, was born and reared in upstate New York, and attended a small community college there for two years. "But music was always my thing," he says.

HE WAS A guitarist, but came West at age 19 with hopes of becoming an actor. He starred in "The Happeners," a pilot show for a television series about a rock group living in Greenwich Village. "It was planned as sort of the ABC-TV version of 'The Monkees,' but it didn't sell," says Ducey. "Nevertheless, it got me an expense-paid trip back to New York for the filming."

In New York, Ducey auditioned for a leading role in the Broadway production of "Hair." Instead, he was told there was an opening for him in the Los Angeles cast of the musical.

"It was only a sub-role," Ducey says, "but its impact was to lead me away from acting and back into guitar playing and singing."

ONE OF THE first Ducey-Millis joint undertakings was the writing of the music for a play, "Visigoths," that did well at Hollywood's Ivar Theater.

As Prairie Madness, the two young men began to perform in Southern California with good results. "Still," they admit, "there were times when we had some hours to while away, waiting for work."

It was during one of those lulls that Millis read a newspaper article about macrame. "It really didn't tell much about the technique, but there were a couple of pictures, and from those I figured out for myself the two basic knots.

"This was at the peak of the craze for macrame," he says, "and I would do things like an order of 20 dozen belts for a Los Angeles chain. It wasn't very creative. But it gave me something to do. And it brought in some bread."

The Duceys and Millis moved to Marin County two years ago. "We love it here."

PRAIRIE MADNESS soon became familiar and popular performers in such clubs as the Lions Share, the Boarding House, the End of the Beginning, Sweetwater, Resh House, New Orleans House and the Sleeping Lady.

They have appeared in benefits at Marin Veterans Memorial Building and in other halls. And they have cut an album for Columbia, labeled simply "Prairie Madness." Recently they added bassist Allen Strong, formerly with Sons of Champlin, to their combo.

"But," says Ducey, "we decided about six months ago that we ought to get into some kind of a business on the side to take care of our spare time and to bring in some extra money."

MILLIS, AT his hobby macrame, had graduated from belts to such more elaborate projects as lampshades. "They were beautiful," says Ducey, "and they seemed to me to represent our opportunity."

It was arranged that Millis would be the artist-craftsman, and that Ducey would do the selling. Just as Millis, until taking up macrame, had never before tackled a craft, so Ducey was totally unfamiliar with sales work "other than the selling of myself — something every entertainer has to do a bit of."

The two have dubbed the Medway Road house where they live and work The Macra-Factory.

AND DUCEY dubs himself "the micraman because I'm just the salesman — Ed is the macraman in the outfit."

But Ducey does get into the production act. It is his job to put on the finishing touches including the fringing to the lampshades, wallhangings, etc., turned out by his partner.

"And that's a long, hard job," Millis gives credit to his teammate. "It can take several hours to fringe a shade."

Millis will put in two or three days in the making of a shade, using the basic half-hitch and square knots, and variations of the two. "That is where you really get fancy," says Ducey of those variations.

SOMETIMES A lampshade is made from scratch. But more often the two find an interesting old shade, rip off its outside covering and replace it with one of Millis' original creations of knotted rope.

"No two of Ed's shades are ever alike," his partner says admiringly. "For each one, the creative design is distinctive. Thus what the owner really acquires is a unique piece of art."

They say they know of only one other macrame artist-craftsman in the area, a friend, David Hill of San Rafael, who does similar shades.

"BUT DAVID works with white cord, while Ed usually uses a natural or earth-colored cord," Ducey says.

The lampshade knotted from white cord has a classic elegance, while the shade made from the brown, natural cord has an organic appeal appropriate to today's ecological interests. "Both colors go well with any and all furnishings," they note.

At the outset Millis worked with a combination flax and jute cord "quite similar to that used in butcher shops." But it is no longer available. So now he uses a 100 per cent flax or raw linen cord.

WHILE MILLIS says "of course, I'm a craftsman, and proud of it," he and his partner say they have tried to stress the artistic facet of macrame over the craft aspects in their products.

"There is a lot of junk flooding the markets today under the name macrame," Ducey says, "and I would like to see the public better educated as to what constitutes good and what constitutes bad macrame."

Warming up to his sales talk, he declares: "Why some people will go into a shop and plunk down $22 for a plant-hanger that doesn't have more than a dozen knots in it. They could make it themselves in a few minutes if they'd just sit down and do it. But a plantholder by Ed — it will have 200 or 300 knots in it, and artistically done. A shade will have well over 2,000 knots."

"I would like to see the public better educated on what constitutes good and what constitutes bad macrame," says Chris Ducey. "There is far more to macrame than just symmetry."

A MACRAMAN lampshade they sell for from $50 to $110. One of the rocking chairs, portable and folding, goes for about $50.

They have made their sales to such shops as Onica in San Rafael, Tamarind Tree in Mill Valley, the Plantique in San Rafael, the Park in Mill Valley, Sherwood Forest in Mill Valley, the Perennial in Larkspur and the Greenhouse in San Francisco.

"They look great hanging in the window or near the entry to a plant store," Ducey says, and tells of one such buyer who held onto his possession despite repeated offers for it from customers. "But finally he succumbed," Ducey smiles. "So we made him another one."

MACRAMAN ISN'T looking toward the department store trade.

"We don't want to get into this thing on the wholesale level," Millis explains.

ED MILLIS IS THE artist-craftsman in the two-man partnership that produces macrame products under the name Macraman. Here, Millis, working in a home that he shares with partner Chris Ducey and Ducey's family on San Anselmo's Medway Road, begins one of the lampshades that he turns out from natural-colored raw linen cord. Millis also produces plantholders, chairs and purses by the knot-tying craft that a few years ago began a resurgence back to fashion and popularity.

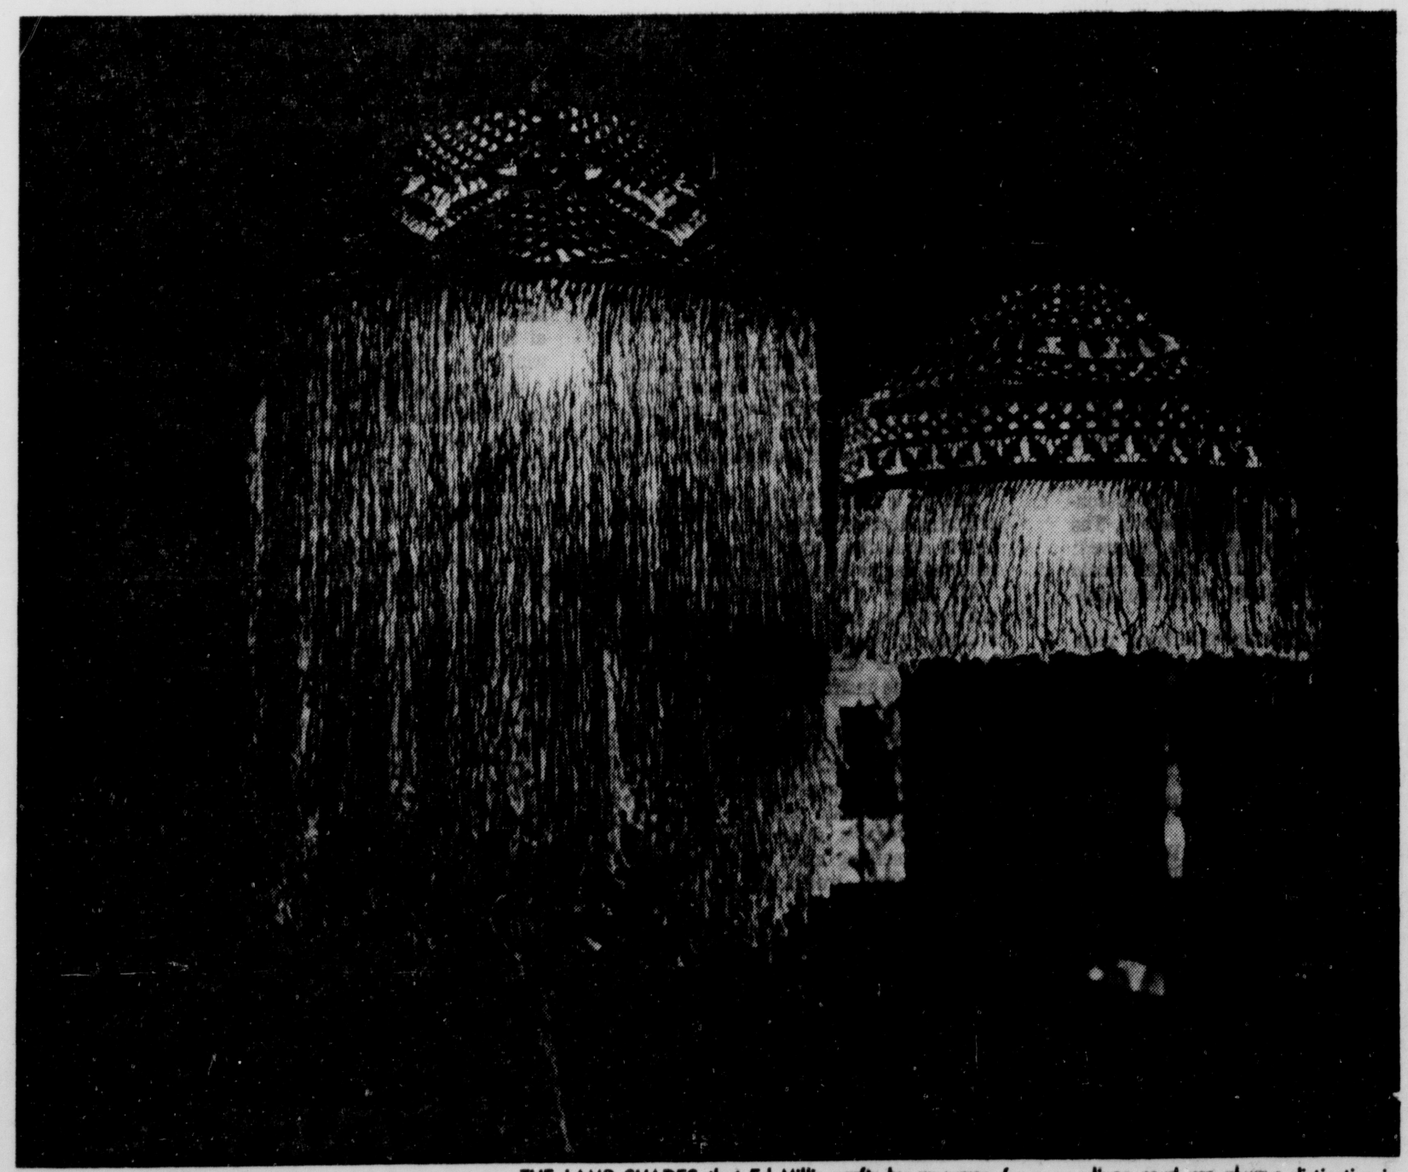
CHRIS DUCEY IS the second partner in Macraman, the two-man firm whose macrame work is beginning to show up more and more in smaller shops around the area. Ducey handles the selling, and sometimes puts the finishing touches on partner Ed Millis' work. Here he hangs one of their plantholders.



THE LAMP SHADES that Ed Millis crafts by macrame from raw linen cord are always distinctive in their design — "one of a kind." Shades such as the one shown above may take Millis two or three days of work, using the basic half-hitch and square knots, and variations of the two. Generally, he works upon the frame of an old shade from which the original covering has been removed. Another product of Macraman is a chair with wooden frame and cord "upholstery" as shown at right. The chair folds and is portable, and sells for about $50.

MARIN LIVING

By DON KEOWN

In the clubs or on the stage, Ed Millis and Chris Ducey of San Anselmo form the country-folk-rock musical duo called Prairie Madness.

When not performing or rehearsing their music, the two long-haired men form a different kind of partnership under a different name, Macraman.

As Macraman they function as an unusual two-man craft and business enterprise out of the house on Medway Road that Millis shares with Ducey and the latter's wife and two children, ages 3 and 5.

Their products are lamp shades, wall-hanging plant-holders, purses and even rocking chairs, all fashioned from raw linen cord by the old process of macrame.

They have been selling their shades, wallhangings and chairs to a number of small specialty shops in the Bay Area, and they expect their participation in next weekend's San Francisco Gift Show at Civic Auditorium and Brooks Hall, Civic Center, San Francisco, to open up a number of new markets to them.

Meanwhile, the two men continue to keep busy with their music as well.

MILLIS, 28, IS a native of North Carolina, and a University of North Carolina graduate, where he majored in political science. He attended law school for a year, worked in a couple of movies produced by Hollywood companies in North Carolina, and then moved to Los Angeles "where I became more heavily involved in my music."

Millis, a pianist, had always had a keen interest in music. And this led him to Ducey and their partnership.

Chris Ducey, 27, was born and reared in upstate New York, and attended a small community college there for two years. "But music was always my thing," he says.

HE WAS A guitarist, but came West at age 19 with hopes of becoming an actor. He starred in "The Happeners," a pilot show for a television series about a rock group living in Greenwich Village. "It was planned as sort of the ABC-TV version of 'The Monkees,' but it didn't sell," says Ducey. "Nevertheless, it got me an expense-paid trip back to New York for the filming."

In New York, Ducey auditioned for a leading role in the Broadway production of "Hair." Instead, he was told there was an opening for him in the Los Angeles cast of the musical.

"It was only a sub-role," Ducey says, "but its impact was to lead me away from acting and back into guitar playing and singing."

As Prairie Madness, the two young men began to perform in Southern California with good results. "Still," they admit, "there were times when we had some hours to while away, waiting for work."

It was during one of those lulls that Millis read a newspaper article about macrame. "It really didn't tell much about the technique, but there were a couple of pictures, and from those I figured out for myself the two basic knots.

MILLIS BEGAN filling in his spare time with macrame, producing belts.

"This was at the peak of the craze for macrame," he says, "and I would do things like an order of 20 dozen belts for a Los Angeles chain. It wasn't very creative. But it gave me something to do. And it brought in some bread."

The Duceys and Millis moved to Marin County two years ago. "We love it here."

PRAIRIE MADNESS soon became familiar and popular performers in such clubs as the Lions Share, the Boarding House, the End of the Beginning, Sweetwater, Resh House, New Orleans House and the Sleeping Lady.

They have appeared in benefits at Marin Veterans Memorial Building and in other halls. And they have cut an album for Columbia, labeled simply "Prairie Madness." Recently they added bassist Allen Strong, formerly with Sons of Champlin, to their combo.

"But," says Ducey, "we decided about six months ago that we ought to get into some kind of a business on the side to take care of our spare time and to bring in some extra money."

MILLIS, AT his hobby macrame, had graduated from belts to such more elaborate projects as lampshades. "They were beautiful," says Ducey, "and they seemed to me to represent our opportunity."

It was arranged that Millis would be the artist-craftsman, and that Ducey would do the selling. Just as Millis, until taking up macrame, had never before tackled a craft, so Ducey was totally unfamiliar with sales work "other than the selling of myself — something every entertainer has to do a bit of."

The two have dubbed the Medway Road house where they live and work The Macra-Factory.

AND DUCEY dubs himself "the micraman because I'm just the salesman — Ed is the macraman in the outfit."

But Ducey does get into the production act. It is his job to put on the finishing touches including the fringing to the lampshades, wallhangings, etc., turned out by his partner.

"And that's a long, hard job," Millis gives credit to his teammate. "It can take several hours to fringe a shade."

Millis will put in two or three days in the making of a shade, using the basic half-hitch and square knots, and variations of the two. "That is where you really get fancy," says Ducey of those variations.

SOMETIMES A lampshade is made from scratch. But more often the two find an interesting old shade, rip off its outside covering and replace it with one of Millis' original creations of knotted rope.

"No two of Ed's shades are ever alike," his partner says admiringly. "For each one, the creative design is distinctive. Thus what the owner really acquires is a unique piece of art."

They say they know of only one other macrame artist-craftsman in the area, a friend, David Hill of San Rafael, who does similar shades.

Two San Anselmo Men Partners In Business And As Entertainers

WELL BEFORE THEY went into the macrame business together, Chris Ducey and Ed Millis were musical partners. And they continue to perform as instrumentalists — guitar and piano — and singers as Prairie Madness with success in clubs and on the stage. They've made one album for Columbia.

"We want to keep it down to where our products will be sold one at a time to someone who will really appreciate the thought and work that has gone into it."

Ducey adds: "There is one exception to that. We would be willing to go into it on a larger scale if we could do a complete place."

THEY HAVE A restaurant in mind as such a possibility.

To what kind of people do the shades, plant-holders and chairs of rope appeal?

The appeal, the two young men reply, appears to be to all ages and all walks of life — to the young hip, to the middle-aged middle class, to the artistic, to the ecology-minded, to the tourist, to the elderly for whom the macrame products have a nostlagic quality, to the smart young couples who see it as chic.

IT IS AN ancient craft that enjoyed its last big splurge of popularity before the current surge in the early 20th Century when sailors practiced it extensively and elaborately as a means of passing their time at sea. That boom came to an end when radio arrived upon the scene — and sailors began listening for their entertainment, rather than working with their hands.

The simplicity of its tools is one outstanding feature of macrame among the crafts.

"Except for scissors, and for a measuring tape, which you might use only once, your hands are your only tools," Millis says. "That might explain the current popularity of macrame, when there is this interest in getting away from the machine, and in working with the hands."

CONTRIBUTES Ducey: "There have been some great macrame shows in Paris, New York and other places, where the work displayed has been simply incredible."

But the two macrame enthusiasts are also worried by the huge output of lesser quality work that has been part of the craft boom. They see it as a threat to the integrity of the craft that could conceivably cause it to fade again from the scene.

"The public has got to be educated to the fact that there is more — far more — to macrame than just symmetry," Ducey insists.

FOR THE TWO musicians turned craftsmen-business men as well, it is virtually a crusade — the making of their point that cord woven and knotted with the hands can be as much an artform as oil colors painted onto canvas, or clay shaped into sculpture.

And all the while, Prairie Madness continues to play up a storm in the rock and folk clubs of the area, producing what the musicians themselves call "a mellow, personal" kind of music in which one critic, lauding a performance, also detected strong Gospel overtones.

About Carpets

by Doug Emerson

CARPET TERMS are second nature to us, so it's natural for us to talk about Olefin fibers, about cut pile and backing and broadloom, shags and plushes, without giving a second's thought to the meaning of what we're saying, since these terms are as familiar to us as a carpenter's tools are to him.

But they may be a mystery to many of you, so let's look at a few of them. You've all heard the term broadloom, for instance, but how many know that this doesn't mean a type of yarn or fabric, but any carpet woven or tufted on a broad or wide loom, at least six feet wide, and often twelve or fifteen feet wide?

Fibers are the basic "thread" of the carpet yarn, many fibers being combined to make a single yarn. These fibers may be natural, like wool, or man-made, such as the popular nylons, polyesters and acrylics.

Pile simply refers to the exposed or top surface of the fibers. When these are cut, the result is a cut pile, or plush. When looped, they create a loop pile. These can be combined in sculptured effects. Shags are loosely tufted long pile carpets, the pile being an inch or inch-and-a-half long, or longer.

But words tell only part of the carpet story. Seeing for yourself is convincing when you look over our great collection. If words fail you, the carpets won't. And you can buy on convenient "terms." Come in . . . to your carpet headquarters!

MARIN LIVING

supporters needn't have worried about material requirements. At the last minute, one of the institution's newly-chosen trustees, Oregon businessman Andrew Polich, provided a gift of $2,500. Added to the tuition — $2,000 a year — from each of the handful of students, it was enough to get things going.

So New College began — a shaky start perhaps — with classrooms in living rooms, houseboats and on beaches and hillsides throughout Marin.

The rest is fast becoming educational history.

IT'S NOT EASY to document the reasons for the college's success. Even Leary is hard-pressed to explain why students and teachers are flocking to its doors and money is coming in in sufficient quantity (mostly from donations) to provide a reasonably solid financial base and meet next year's estimated $250,000 budget.

There is no sylvan campus, with tree-shaded walks and ivy-covered buildings, to attract the eye. Instead, the college rents classroom space in the Schoonmaker industrial building on the city's waterfront, although there are now plans to build a modest structure — as a permanent home — somewhere in Sausalito.

New College has no student conveniences such as dormitories, health services and cafeterias. Students are on their own when it comes to food, housing and the like.

"WE DON'T provide any kind of baby-sitting service," the president said.

There are no impressive libraries or laboratories and students must often trek to neary colleges for courses in science, business and other career-oriented studies.

But still they come, in ever-increasing numbers.

Leary seems to think that the "pioneering atmosphere" has something to do with the college's attraction for today's young people.

"IN MOST established institutions, all the challenges of duress, all the obstructions and hardships are gone and this tends to take a lot of the zing out of things," he said.

"Here students have the chance to set their own goals and create their own learning experience and apparently that is just what many want."

Students go to school only four days a week — Monday through Thursday — and can obtain a Bachelor's Degree in only three years, since the sophomore year has been eliminated because it was considered "a waste of time" by the college's founders.

ON FRIDAYS, they are encouraged to find jobs out in the community and receive credit for their work. Some have worked in community action groups, while others have worked in city planning departments, hospitals, schools, banks, drug rehabilitation centers, woodworking shops or wherever their interests lie.

Students also have a major share in planning their academic programs and the college humanities-oriented courses — more than 40 will be offered next fall by 25 instructors — reflect their needs, experiences and feelings.

There are no required courses, but several are "strongly recommended" and the faculty and administration do their darndest to convince the students to take them.

TWO OF THE "urged courses" are Building Imagination and Building Discipline. The first is designed to show students how to stimulate and expand their own imagination, and Leary thinks it is extremely important.

"To build something new, you have to be able to imagine it," he said. "And if you want to be more than a pawn, if you want to design your tomorrow, you have to build."

Building Discipline is also essential, according to the president, to enable the person to "subordinate his appetite to his intelligence."

"So much doesn't get done, because people don't organize themselves," he added.

OTHER COURSES cover a wide variety of topics, from religion to Marxism and the profit motive. Classes in taste, persuasion, mental balance and stress, politics, decision making, leadership, the art of leisure, frailty — an avenue to strength and the value and danger of conviction are only a few of the unusual ones offered.

"In most established institutions, all the challenges of duress, all the obstructions and hardships are gone, and this tends to take a lot of zing out of things," says New World College's John Leary. "Here students have the chance to set their own goals and create their own learning experience. . ."

Students can determine the direction the classes take and the college is small enough so that a single student or a group can team up with a faculty member to create a course or study project.

There are no requirements for graduation and no grades. After each term students meet with their teachers and counselors to prepare a written evaluation of their work and growth and determine how much credit they should receive toward their degrees.

THE STUDENTS also play an important role in governing the college, via the community council which sets policies and makes decisions on issues that arise during the school year.

This year everyone at New College had an equal voice on the council, but the large number of voting members proved unwieldy. So next year, the council's composition may return to what it was originally — five students, three faculty members and Leary.

Since the college's 12 trustees' role is to keep the institution going financially and participate with faculty and students in long-range planning, most of the decisions affecting day-to-day operations are made by the council.

LEARY HAS veto power over the council's actions, but has exercised it only once — this spring — when the group voted to eliminate the urged classes.

And, the president said the trustees once "talked the council out of" a plan to pay every staff member at the college, from the president to the janitor, a flat salary of $13,000.

In his position as president, Leary sees himself as "the janitor, payer of bills and keeper of the books," rather than the college boss who rules with an iron hand. "I think my function is to perform the menial tasks needed to keep the college going."

AT PRESENT, the New College student body and staff are immersed in eager plans for the law school and London campus and enthusiasm for both projects is high.

Demonstrating that New College is not adverse to old ideas, the law school will, in some ways, represent a step back in time to the period when lawyers were trained by being apprenticed to attorneys.

Twelve practicing Bay Area attorneys — about half of them women — have agreed to serve on the faculty, each giving one-third of his or her time to the college.

Dr. Thomas Mack, former director of legal services for the Western Region of the Office of Economic Opportunity will head the four-year program. Initially, there will be 35 students.

DURING THE first year, students will take basic law courses in contracts, torts and criminal law and procedure. At the end of that time they will be required to pass an abbreviated version of the State Bar Examination in order to qualify for the apprenticeship program.

During the second, third and fourth years, they will spend two afternoons a week in the classroom, studying such subjects as evidence, civil procedure, laws of community and real property, equity and constitutional law.

The rest of the time, they will be apprenticed to law firms and assist the attorneys in interviewing, gathering facts, taking depositions, negotiating and in actual trials.

TRIAL SIMULATIONS and seminars in techniques of strategy will also be part of the curriculum.

Mack believes that most law schools have neglected the practical side of legal education by focusing strictly on classes.

"The New College Law School hopes to restore a balance between learning in the classroom and learning by doing," he said.

Although the London campus is still more than a year away, Leary and some staff members and students have already traveled to England on a reconnaissance mission to see about costs and available facilities.

PATTERNED AFTER the Sausalito campus, it will consist of a small rented classroom building and take advantage of existing schools and libraries. Students will have to find their own flats and make all their living arrangements.

Operations will probably begin with a "director-teacher and four or five good tutors," according to Leary. During vacations, students will continue their studies while traveling through Europe.

Leary said London was chosen as the site for a new campus chiefly because there would be no language barrier. "Also, it's a marvelous jumping off place to the front door of Western culture," he added.

New College continues to change so rapidly that one student joked that "You never know what you'll find there when you walk in the door.

IN SOME WAYS, it is in a state of constant flux, continually refining curriculum, teaching methods, ways of learning and the like.

Yet, through all the changes, Leary and his staff work to provide enough continuity to keep the institution operating, striving for that finely-drawn balance of structure and freedom.

Even Leary has a hard time defining the essence of New College or how it works.

"I suppose you could say our general thrust is to explore better ways of helping people be more themselves, but please don't ask me exactly how we do that," he quipped.

"IN A WAY, we're trying to put new flesh on old values and provide the individual with a more sane direction in a very confused and confusing world."

He said New College "is new because it demands that you change every day."

Leary believes that New College has continued to exist and prosper because it is more stable than the average experimental college and because the students "are more serious about what they're doing than most."

He is an advocate of some kind of structure and puts it into practice at New College. "Chaos isn't a virtue, but then I think structure should be as loose as possible," he said.

SO CLASSES meet at specified times and students are expected to be there and to have mastered a given subject matter, "so many pages of this or that book."

Yet, at the same time, the college attempts to provide "the kind of climate of freedom where students can determine the direction in which their classes will go and what they will learn," according to the president.

Whatever New College is, it seems to be working.

NEW COLLEGE OF CALIFORNIA is an unusual school. So it is not surprising that classes sometimes meet in unusual "classrooms." This class has assembled in the open air on a grassy hillside. The Sausalito college attempts to provide "the kind of climate of freedom where students can determine the direction in which their classes will go and what they will learn."

FOUNDER AND PRESIDENT of New College of California is Dr. John Leary, a Jesuit priest with experience as an administrator at two major Catholic universities, Gonzaga and Santa Clara. He has watched the young Sausalito-based school grow rapidly to an anticipated 120-student enrollment this fall.

supporters needn't have worried about material requirements. At the last minute, one of the institution's newly-chosen trustees, Oregon businessman Andrew Polich, provided a gift of $2,500. Added to the tuition — $2,000 a year — from each of the handful of students, it was enough to get things going.

So New College began — a shaky start perhaps — with classrooms in living rooms, houseboats and on beaches and hillsides throughout Marin.

The rest is fast becoming educational history.

IT'S NOT EASY to document the reasons for the college's success. Even Leary is hard-pressed to explain why students and teachers are flocking to its doors and money is coming in in sufficient quantity (mostly from donations) to provide a reasonably solid financial base and meet next year's estimated $250,000 budget.

There is no sylvan campus, with tree-shaded walks and ivy-covered buildings, to attract the eye. Instead, the college rents classroom space in the Schoonmaker industrial building on the city's waterfront, although there are now plans to build a modest structure — as a permanent home — somewhere in Sausalito.

New College has no student conveniences such as dormitories, health services and cafeterias. Students are on their own when it comes to food, housing and the like.

"WE DON'T provide any kind of baby-sitting service," the president said.

There are no impressive libraries or laboratories and students must often trek to nearby colleges for courses in science, business and other career-oriented studies.

But still they come, in ever-increasing numbers.

Leary seems to think that the "pioneering atmosphere" has something to do with the college's attraction for today's young people.

"IN MOST established institutions, all the challenges of duress, all the obstructions and hardships are gone and this tends to take a lot of the zing out of things," he said.

"Here students have the chance to set their own goals and create their own learning experience and apparently that is just what many want."

Students go to school only four days a week — Monday through Thursday — and can obtain a Bachelor's Degree in only three years, since the sophomore year has been eliminated because it was considered "a waste of time" by the college's founders.

ON FRIDAYS, they are encouraged to find jobs out in the community and receive credit for their work. Some have worked in community action groups, while others have worked in city planning departments, hospitals, schools, banks, drug rehabilitation centers, woodworking shops or wherever their interests lie.

Students also have a major share in planning their academic programs and the college humanities-oriented courses — more than 40 will be offered next fall by 25 instructors — reflect their needs, experiences and feelings.

There are no required courses, but several are "strongly recommended" and the faculty and administration do their darndest to convince the students to take them.

TWO OF THE "urged courses" are Building Imagination and Building Discipline. The first is designed to show students how to stimulate and expand their own imagination, and Leary thinks it is extremely important.

"To build something new, you have to be able to imagine it," he said. "And if you want to be more than a pawn, if you want to design your tomorrow, you have to build."

Building Discipline is also essential, according to the president, to enable the person to "subordinate his appetite to his intelligence."

"So much doesn't get done, because people don't organize themselves," he added.

OTHER COURSES cover a wide variety of topics, from religion to Marxism and the profit motive. Classes in taste, persuasion, mental balance and stress, politics, decision making, leadership, the art of leisure, frailty — an avenue to strength and the value and danger of conviction are only a few of the unusual ones offered.

"In most established institutions, all the challenges of duress, all the obstructions and hardships are gone, and this tends to take a lot of zing out of things," says New World College's John Leary. "Here students have the chance to set their own goals and create their own learning experience. . ."

Students can determine the direction the classes take and the college is small enough so that a single student or a group can team up with a faculty member to create a course or study project.

There are no requirements for graduation and no grades. After each term students meet with their teachers and counselors to prepare a written evaluation of their work and growth and determine how much credit they should receive toward their degrees.

Bob Morgan's Puppets Stress Bible's Lessons

ters, Denise and Stephanie, ages 7 and 3. The little girls, say their parents, love the puppets dearly.

For their puppetry, the Morgans have kept their props to a minimum — "in the Bible stores, it's the characters who count. The props only get in the way."

And their stage is simple and easily transported and set up, consisting only of two vertical stands and a parallel bar that fits across them, plus a simulated velvet curtain.

SOMETIMES THE Morgans don't even need that equipment. They make use of an upright piano top, a kitchen serving window or a counter as their stage.

"We have even used the baptistry in a church," Morgan says.

The young minister and his wife admit that they were braced for criticism from some who might think they were treating the Bible and its stories too lightly. "But it hasn't come," he says. "Everywhere we go, we have been very well received, and all ages seem to have enjoyed the show."

While a Morgan puppet show is often billed as being for the children, the younsters are encouraged to bring their parents along. And the adults appreciate the show as much as their offspring. Further proof of the success the Morgans have enjoyed in crossing age boundaries is the reception they have enjoyed in rest home appearances.

PERSONS OF all ages find it easy to identify with puppet characters and to feel a personal involvement in the story they are seeing re-enacted before them.

"I must confess the debt that we owe Sesame Street," says Morgan. "The Muppets on that television show — and the use of cartoons as well — have demonstrated just how effective these can be as educational tools. They produce in the child an amazing degree of concentration, and that is one of the keys to learning. Another is to make learning fun. This is one of the most effective forms of learning."

Bob Morgan remains active in his second interest, cartooning, as well. He has been doing two cartoons strips, "Soulwinner Sam" and "The Bedside Baptist" for the weekly news magazine, The California Southern Baptist. That work has been going on for three years, and church publications in other states are beginning to pick it up and run it — most recently Illinois.

THE CARTOONS have given rise to a series of chalk talks in which the Morgan cartoon characters play a part.

And Bob and Diana Morgan are in the process of planning the adoption of some of the cartoon characters such as Hallelujah Sam into their puppet family.

The creative evangelistic work of Bob Morgan crosses boundaries from one field into another in other ways. He wrote a tract or pamphlet in which a cartoon character, the Red Demon, in appropriate devil's advocate style, — and futiley, Morgan hopes — tries desperately to discourage the reader from continuing through the booklet. "A little bit of reverse psychology," says Morgan.

THE TRACTS are sold at four cents a copy by Western Book and Tract Co. at 1618 West Franklin St., Oakland, mostly to people who like to pass out religious tracts on street corners or to distribute them by leaving them in public places.

"Because of all the publicity that has been accorded satanic worship and cultism, there's a renewed interest within the church in its old enemy, Satan," explaims Morgan. Conversely, in the roles accorded him by the Morgans, he is one of their most popular performers.

"He is usually our announcer," says Morgan.

IN THE CHURCH show, Satan comes on by announcing that he is a good personal friend of the pastor. This brings a laugh from the audience. Then he comments that he has been doing his best to discourage the pastor, but that the congregation has been doing a pretty good job of that themselves, and that he appreciates their help. Then it is the pastor's turn to laugh.

In some more reverse psychology, Satan makes periodic appearances during a show, encouraging them to walk out on the show, or to make noise and disrupt the proceedings. When the spectators don't heed his appeals, his feelings are hurt, and it is he who leaves.

"Yes," smiles Bob Morgan, preacher and evangelist, "I'll have to admit that Satan, bright red and complete with horns, is one of my favorite puppets." And he looks with real affection upon the devilish little character resting in his box and awaiting his next bout with forces he cannot defeat.

SOMETIMES, SAYS Morgan, the humor of one of the Bible story puppet shows is unintentional.

He remembers well the occasion when he and Diana were putting their puppets through the paces of the story of the Good Samaritan. The victim had been beaten up by the robbers behind a rock, then left slumped over the stage. To free her hands to manipulate other puppets, Diana thumbtacked the beaten Hebrew in that position. There came the point where the Good Samaritan, manipulated by Bob Morgan, was to lift the beating victim up and place him on his donkey. But Morgan was unaware of the tack inserted by his wife. Once, twice and yet a third time the Good Samaritan tried to pick up the reclining puppet. At least realization struck Morgan. And from the Good Samaritan came: "Hey, somebody thumbtacked this guy to the stage!"

"This earned me a big laugh from the audience, and an elbow in the ribs from my wife backstage," Morgan chuckles. "And even after we got the thumbtack out, the Good Samaritan had trouble picking the Hebrew up in his arms. So finally he just picked him up with his mouth and tossed him onto the donkey. That created pandomonium in the audiences"

"OFTEN THE mistakes are the funniest part of a show. In fact, the audience generally thinks they are intentional," the puppeteer says. "So we don't worry about them."

When they take their puppets into schools for shows, the Morgans are careful not to run afoul of separation of church and state doctrine. Jonah, for instance, becomes Johnny. And this time he is a small boy running away from school when he gets involved with the Whale. He winds up spit out beside the schoolhouse, and eager to return to classes after his adventures.

Sometimes when Diana cannot go with him, Bob Morgan will recruit teen-agers to work with him that evening.

"WE BEGIN our preparations by reading the story out of the Bible, then discuss what we are going to portray, and 'walk through it' it. Then I give each person a puppet, tell him what that character is like and what he will be doing, and they put the talk into their own words, but including key Biblical quotations, of course."

While most of the characters in the Bible are Hebrew, the Morgans make use of multi-ethnic puppets "to show that what happened to the Jew thousands of a years ago is representative of what happened to — and is still going on with — the whole human race."

Morgan, in charge of music in his new post as Ripon and also in his assignments as a weekend evangelism team member, also works music into the puppet shows.

"Neither Diana nor I play instruments," he says. "But we both grew up in the church, singing in the choirs, leading congregational singing. Neither of us have had any formal musical training.

"BUT WE HAVE collected a large number of songs, many of them the Scriptural songs in which Biblical passages have been put to music, and which are very popular with young people groups today. We sing those songs within or after the puppet shows, and try to teach them to the audience."

It is all part, Morgan says, of the belief that creativity is the best tool for encouraging remembrance of any material.

And no material, the young minister believes, is more worthwhile remembering than the old stories from the Holy Book.

"Every story in the Bible has a very serious lesson for us," he repeats, "for the non-believer as well as the believer. That is the motive that has caused us to take our puppets and stage into the churches and to other places into which we have been invited. There's a relevancy behind Daniel's victory, behind the Good Samaritan's brotherhood, behind the ordeal of Jonah that has a relevancy to today's life situations. Seen on stage, enacted by colorful, meaningful characters, that relevancy becomes vividly apparent."

"I have done everything I can to encourage the use of every creative talent we possess in the worship and the fellowship within the church," says Rev. Bob Morgan, pastor and puppeteer. "My point is that you can be entertaining to the community without being derogatory toward the church or Bible."

REV. BOB MORGAN and wife Diana unpack their puppets, preparatory to a show. Bob is checking Jimmy, the little emcee, while Diana gives the Dragon her attention. The Morgans explain that the Dragon participates only in the school plays, and not in the Biblical stories. "There is no dragon in the Bible," they say. (Independent-Journal photos)

"THE GOOD SAMARITAN" is being enacted here by three of the puppets from the cast of characters assembled by Bob and Diana Morgan. Despite the humor, all of the plays remain true to the narration and spirit of the Bible. And all contain strong moral lessons for the viewers.

A FAVORITE OF the audiences for the Biblical plays of puppeteers Bob and Diana Morgan is "Jonah and the Whale." The whale reverses the usual procedure by catching the man. And when he swallows Jonah, observes: "I can't believe I ate the whole thing." For school audiences, Jonah becomes Johnny, and the story takes on a secular but still moralistic theme.

When they take their puppets into schools for shows, the Morgans are careful not to run afoul of separation of church and state doctrine. Jonah, for instance, becomes Johnny. And this time he is a small boy running away from school when he gets involved with the Whale. He winds up spit out beside the schoolhouse, and eager to return to classes after his adventures.

Sometimes when Diana cannot go with him, Bob Morgan will recruit teen-agers to work with him that evening.

"WE BEGIN our preparations by reading the story out of the Bible, then discuss what we are going to portray, and 'walk through it' it. Then I give each person a puppet, tell him what that character is like and what he will be doing, and they put the talk into their own words, but including key Biblical quotations, of course."

"I have done everything I can to encourage the use of every creative talent we possess in the worship and the fellowship within the church," says Rev. Bob Morgan, pastor and puppeteer. "My point is that you can be entertaining to the community without being derogatory toward the church or Bible."

While most of the characters in the Bible are Hebrew, the Morgans make use of multi-ethnic puppets "to show that what happened to the Jew thousands of a years ago is representative of what happened to — and is still going on with — the whole human race."

Morgan, in charge of music in his new post as Ripon and also in his assignments as a weekend evangelism team member, also works music into the puppet shows.

"Neither Diana nor I play instruments," he says. "But we both grew up in the church, singing in the choirs, leading congregational singing. Neither of us have had any formal musical training.

"BUT WE HAVE collected a large number of songs, many of them the Scriptural songs in which Biblical passages have been put to music, and which are very popular with young people groups today. We sing those songs within or after the puppet shows, and try to teach them to the audience."

It is all part, Morgan says, of the belief that creativity is the best tool for encouraging remembrance of any material.

And no material, the young minister believes, is more worthwhile remembering than the old stories from the Holy Book.

"Every story in the Bible has a very serious lesson for us," he repeats, "for the non-believer as well as the believer. That is the motive that has caused us to take our puppets and stage into the churches and to other places into which we have been invited. There's a relevancy behind Daniel's victory, behind the Good Samaritan's brotherhood, behind the ordeal of Jonah that has a relevancy to today's life situations. Seen on stage, enacted by colorful, meaningful characters, that relevancy becomes vividly apparent."

"THE GOOD SAMARITAN" is being enacted here by three of the puppets from the cast of characters assembled by Bob and Diana Morgan. Despite the humor, all of the plays remain true to the narration and spirit of the Bible. And all contain strong moral lessons for the viewers.

A FAVORITE OF the audiences for the Biblical plays of puppeteers Bob and Diana Morgan is "Jonah and the Whale." The whale reverses the usual procedure by catching the man. And when he swallows Jonah, observes: "I can't believe I ate the whole thing." For school audiences, Jonah becomes Johnny, and the story takes on a secular but still moralistic theme.

SCIENCE AND THE SUPERNATURAL—A CONFLICT?

SUPER NATURE by Lyall Watson; Doubleday, 344 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

The popular belief is that science and the supernatural are by necessity in conflict — that to believe in one, you must scoff at the other.

No so, says Lyall Watson, the brilliant South African-born, London-based scientist and writer.

He finds in science much that supports and even explains the supernatural. Indeed, he demonstrates, the scientific-proven is often as awesome and as complex as the unproven psychical phenonomena.

Watson explores in fascinating detail the sometimes interlapping relationships between science and mysticism in his book "Super Nature." The reader, whether he accepts, rejects or is selective in his reaction to the Watson thesis, is likely to find the book one of the most absorbing and provocative that he will read this year.

Let it be noted that Watson does not accept indiscriminately all the trappings of the occult that are so popular these days. For instance, he is skeptical of hauntings, noting that the "witnesses" invariably sight the spirits fully garbed in period costumes. He is willing to accept spirit-people, but spirit-boots, spirit-hats and spirit-pants are a bit too much for him. The indication to him is that the viewers are recreating images of lost ones as they remember them, or of other personages as they have seen them depicted pictorially.

Watson notes with some skepticism how frequently Napoleon, Cleopatra, other royalty, the people of Atlantis and Babylonians speak through mediums, in contrast to the far fewer times the many more millions of less famous dead are heard from.

Still, Watson finds much in nature and science's probing of it that compliments beliefs regarded as supernatural.

As the astrologers have insisted, he shows, the planets, just as do the moon and sun, do, indeed, effect life on earth, down to the tiniest insects and not excluding man. But Watson does question the strong emphasis placed by astrology upon the individual's time of birth. There are other times, he suggests, when the embryo and the born human are equally or more susceptible to outside influences.

Watson finds, too, some scientific foundation for the belief in psychokinesis, in the aura, in alchemy, even in palmistry. He explores telepathy, clairvoyance, hypnosis, dreams, the subconscious, hallucinations, graphology, phrenology, poltergeists, reincarnation, etc.

For most, he finds some scientific base for man's interest in these fields, his cases ranging from the admittedly light but titillating to the strong and (as in the case of telepathy) virtually proven.

Watson demonstrates time and time again that man and particularly the scientist has written off some things as superstition simply because they are difficult to prove, while accepting as things no less incredible as fact because they occur before his eyes, or because scientific research has borne them out.

Telepathy, Watson seems to suspect, plays a particularly major and unsuspected role in man's, animal's and even insect's existence.

And the influences of the sun, the moon and the planets upon the earth and its life are only beginning to be appreciated.

"Earth in its turn is ruffled by the galactic winds of change and subject to forces brought to bear on it by an even wider environment," says Watson, who writes beautifully, even poetically. "Inevitably these forces filter through to us, and life on earth learns to dance to the rhythm of other bodies. The most insistent beat comes, naturally, from our nearest neighbors."

"We are indeed larvae, eating our way through earth's resources in a mindless, caterpillar fashion, but I believe the imago is already beginning to stir within. When the climate is right, it will break out not as some sort of super-computer but as an organic being that will embody all of Supernature and look back on technology as a childhood toy."

"Life survives in the chaos of the cosmos by picking order out of the whole. Death is certain, but life becomes possible by following patterns that lead like paths of firmer ground through the swamps of time. Cycles of light and dark, of heat and cold, of magnetism, radioactivity, and gravity all provide vital guides, and life learns to respond to even their most subtle signs . . . Nothing happens in isolation. We breathe and bleed, we laugh and cry, we crash and die in time with cosmic cues."

And: "Life arose by order out of chaos and maintains this order by collecting information from the cosmos. Cosmic forces bombard earth all the time . . ."

In the reaction of earth and its populations to this bombardment, Watson finds, are to be found the roots to many of the old beliefs written off as superstition. "These results," he says of one series of studies, "make it clear that man is, among other things, a remarkably sensitive living sundial." Anyone for sun worship?

And again: "Superimposed on the cosmic chaos are rhythms and harmonies that control many aspects of life on earth by a communication of energy made possible by the shape of things here and their resonance in sympathy with cosmic themes." And: "The cosmos is a chaotic frenzy of wave patterns, some of which have been orchestrated on earth into an organized life system. The harmony between the two can be understood only with the aid of a score, and of all the possibilities open to use at this moment, astrology (for all its weird origins and sometimes weirder devotees) seems to offer the best interpretation."

Lyall Watson's book is filled with insights, conclusions and speculations that quite likely will turn your head around in a number of ways in your thinking on the great mystery that is life upon this planet. Even as one suspects Watson has deliberately chosen the most provocative and most exotic of studies, experiments and experiences to advance his arguments, and quite plainly in some cases has ignored conflicting evidence, one nevertheless must grant that he has assembled a mass of documentation and contention to support his assertion that "of all the faculties we possess, none is more important at this time than a wide-eyed sense of wonder." Curiosity, of course, is its close cousin. Watson whets both your sense of wonder and your curiosity.

WEARING ANTLER headdress and caribou skins to fool his prey, this hunter pauses in his pursuit of caribou. Anthropologists believe that such hunters, in expanding their range, wandered from Asia across the Bering Land Bridge between Siberia and Alaska at the height of the Ice Age to enter North America and become the ancestors of the American Indians — perhaps more than 25,000 years ago. The illustration is from Time-Life's "The First Americans," fifth volume in its "The Emergence of Man" series, written by Robert Clairborne with the collaboration of Time-Life editors, and priced at $7.95. Concludes Clairborne: "After 25,000 years of occupancy, the Indian left the land as rich, as wild and as beautiful as his immigrant ancestors had found it. He was a resounding ecological success." The white man's much shorter span in North America is a different story.

Some New Books For The Younger Readers

"Birds and Their Nests" (McGraw-Hill, no price listed) offers budding young ornithologists a sampling of the work and habits of some of the globe's more unusual nest-builders.

The text is by the Zoological Society of London's Dr. Gwynne Vevers, who earlier did "Ants and Termites" and "Elephants and Mammoths" as part of the publisher's Natural Science Picture Books and who also serves as scientific adviser for the series. Artwork is by Colin Threadgall, a countryman of the author.

By turning the pages, young birdwatchers can get some insight into birds that range from Australia's bowerbirds to the European bee-eater, from penguins to cliff swallows, from Quaker parakeets to weaverbirds. All the species covered are distinguished by unusual nest-building habits. What is missing from the book is coverage in greater depth of the more orthodox nestmakers — the ones the child is most likely to encounter in his or her own backyard.

The book concludes with an effective plea for conservation and a warning against collecting or otherwise disturbing birds' eggs.

NATURAL FOOD cookbooks have been flooding the markets. So quite naturally, we have to have one for the youngsters.

It is done by Ruth Cavin with illustrations by Frances Gruse Scott, published by Atheneum, and entitled "One Pinch of Sunshine; One-Half Cup of Rain."

Priced at $5.95 it is really an excellent cookbook by any standard for the beginner, filled with recipes with child appeal — such as Poppyseed Candy, Whole Wheat Pancakes, Blender Milkshakes, Handmade Peanut Butter, Sloppy Joes, Lumber Camp Stew and Honey Nut Ice Cream.

Before plunging into the recipes, Mrs. Cavin offers the young novice some basic instruction on how to work in the kitchen.

She has produced an attractive book, and appears to have been faithful to the health food creed of avoiding the prepared convenience foods, the starches, sugars, etc. Best of all, she seems to have a sound idea of the kinds of things kids enjoy. But then she has reared three.

WILLIAM H. Armstrong, whose "Sounder" is already firmly established as a classic, now has written "The Mills of God" (Doubleday, $4.95). It is another sensitive novel exploring man's special relationship with the dog.

Aaron Skinner, 12 and poor, resident of isolated Dry Hollow, pines for a fine dog, but his financial status forces him to accept a less-than-handsome Blue Tick. The boy Aaron and dog Rowdy then share experiences in the hills, both sharpening his feelings for nature, and with the boy maturing while his friendship with his pet ripens.

No one will be surprised that Armstrong does this kind of thing very well, striking an almost casual tone as he relates events that are momentous to the boy. And there is an object lesson, not blatantly done, at the end for Aaron — and for young readers.

KWAME NKRUMAH was a controversial man. But he was also in many ways, for all his faults and errors, representative of the best and most imaginative of the leadership of the new Africa. He is, then, a worthy choice for a young readers' biography, and Robin McKown has obliged with "Nkrumah" (Doubleday, $4.50).

Mrs. McKown, much traveled and a busy writer, presents a middle-of-the-road portrait of the first chief of state of Ghana, recognizing his strengths, taking note of his weaknesses, and putting his life into the special context of his time and place. It is well-written biography, proving that politicians can make for a lively life story if the biographer has the skill and the feeling for her subject.

An earlier Robin McKown biography was about an even more controversial African, Patrice Lumumba. She can't be accused of picking safe subjects.

Two Minorities In Soviet Capital

MOSCOW BY NIGHTMARE by Joyce Shub; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 239 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

The great attraction of this novel is the seemingly authentic look it provides at two minorities in the Moscow population, the small foreign colony, and the Russian intellectuals who stubbornly resist pressure from the state to desist from their bohemian life and to conform.

Mrs. Shub lived in Moscow as the wife of foreign correspondent Anatole V. Shub until he was expelled by the Kremlin.

Her central character, Vannie Tomkins, is also the wife of a Western correspondent posted in Moscow. Weary of the restrictions placed upon its "guests" by the Soviet government, she begins actively to solicit the companionship and friendship of underground Muscovites. It brings her into conflict with the state. And it causes problems, not only for Vannie, but for her friends, Russian and non-Russian alike.

Trouble-prone Vannie may irritate some readers with her extreme naivete. And there is a Cold War flavor to the novel that seems out of pace with the times. Still, one suspects, international entente not withstanding, that life in Moscow is very likely unpleasantly like what Mrs. Shub describes. (Life in Washington D.C. today is no picnic either.) And her story has the special enticement of providing that insight, while at the same time remaining a better than fair suspense yarn.

A Man Running From His Shadow

The newly divorced, the lonely ones shut up in their apartments like ice cubes in a tray, with only the inch by inch solace of booze and the tube, are the subject of Dan Wakefield's new novel. This seemingly overworked theme, like that of his earlier "Going All The Way," transcends itself almost alarmingly by his deft placement of satiric acupuncture needles right where it hurts.

Marilyn and Phil, the two central characters, share post-mortem analyses of their dissolved marriages. On the basis of this bond, which is as tenuous as a relationship based solely upon having served in the ranks of the same army, they become lovers, then somewhat weary friends helping each other cope with the singles industry. The result could be merely more cruel or facile comedy, another jello mold script from Neil Simon, but instead we have a savagely funny study of loneliness.

And so he does at the hands of his creator, for Wakefield is a cartographer of desperation, tracing its hidden springs, sudden twists, lunar tides and explosive rapids.

In fleeing boredom, Phil resembles a man running from his shadow at sun-up, thinking at noon that he has outdistanced it, only to see it lengthen before him as the day wanes. At one point, between skull imploding hangovers and casual pickups, he manages to find at least a sense of purpose in compulsively following the regimen necessary to rid himself of an infestation of lice that became his wards after an amorous encounter.

Wakefield's explorations of ennui are classic, always original, and by turns sardonic, lyrical, touching, clinical. At times the cumulative effect of alienation is so immediate that the reader feels physically oppressed, as if the empty hours described in the book had taken the form of a slow, sloppy beast sitting on his chest, a nightmare in the word's original sense. But an indelibly witty nightmare.

What starts as the difficulty of those grown up in the 1950s to cope with today's pop culture (like jowly middle aged men in their throbbing doubleknits, or else a sense that one's manners are anachronistic and courtly), then moves quite properly toward what is really amiss, as defined by George Meredith's observation that "in tragic life we are betrayed by what is false within."

So on New Year's Eve, when Marilyn has a date with a married man, Phil warns that this could mean trouble.

And Marilyn, the more pragmatic of the two, shrugs and says sadly but truly: "Trouble is better than nothing."

An Essayist Fails To Achieve Focus

THE BOOKS IN FRED HAMPTON'S APARTMENT by Richard Stern; Dutton, 301 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

The reputation of Richard Stern as novelist and essayist is formidable, but we found this latest collection of his commentary upon the social, political and cultural scene too often flimsy and trivial. In other words: a disappointment. The best part of the book consists of pieces on literary figures and trends, with his subjects ranging from Joyce and Pound to Bellow, Malamud and Updike. Here, Stern is at home and an expert. But the remainder of "The Books in. . ." seems unfocused, uncertain and unimportant.

BROWSING BOOKMAN

Charles Berlitz, the underwater explorer and adventurer, has done a new revised edition of "Dive: The Complete Book of Skindiving," originally authored by Rick and Barbara Carrier.

The previous editions were issued in 1955 and 1963.

Now Funk & Wagnalls has brought out the newest version, pricing its 285 pages with a generous splash of photographs at a modest $6.95. To the Carriers' material Berlitz has added a considerable amount of new information from his fast store of expertise. The book provides a brief history of skindiving, a description of the underwater world that awaits the diver, a discussion of equipment, special chapters on spearfishing and photography, another on sea legends and lore, an analysis of the physiological problems of diving and a bibliography.

"The sea waits. . . .the possibilities. . .are infinite," is the chal lenging conclusion.

ALAN HALL, son of a botanist, himself a farmer and forager, has produced "The Wild Food Trail Guide" as a $3.45 Holt, Rinehart and Winston paperback that describes in detail the most common edible plants of North America, with drawings by Katie Matthysse, a range map, a cross-index by season, and data on their habitat and uses. "For the trail or the backyard," claims the cover. ". . . makes plant identification sure, safe and easy." One way, it would seem, to beat the high food prices, or at least lessen its impact. The backpacker, camper, sportsman, et al, should find it invaluable and enjoyable.

FROM THE Comstock Editions house in Sausalito: an original, "Backpacking in the Wilderness Rockies" by Thomas Winnett, and two reprints, Enos A. Mills' classic "The Grizzly" (1919) and Padraic Colum's "Legends of Hawaii" (1937).(The books are $1.50 each. And the Richard Goulds of Comstock continue to prove their premise that there is no limit to material on the West deserving of publication.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

THE STONE BABY by Ben Healey; Lippincott, 191 pages, $5.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

British film artist-designer turned author Ben Healey first introduced the character Harcourt d'Espinal, art connoisseur, bon vivant and wheeler-dealer, in "The Vespucci Papers." He brings him back here for another encore.

The scene is Venice, where the portly d'Espinal becomes involved in a shady transaction between some devious parties, centering around a forgery of Michelangelo's Sleeping Cupid. There's a lot of scheming and finally some gunplay involving Mafiosa types.

Healey's best character is a small street urchin, whose ingenuity and daring put her in danger. She's well done, but the rest of the cast, even d'Espinal, is less than memorable.

Many reviewers have praised Healey as a literary stylist of wit and polish. But we find his writing here peculiarly dry and juiceless, and his novel, therefore, rather tedious.

KWAME NKRUMAH was a controversial man. But he was also in many ways, for all his faults and errors, representative of the best and most imaginative of the leadership of the new Africa. He is, then, a worthy choice for a young readers' biography, and Robin McKown has obliged with "Nkrumah" (Doubleday, $4.50).

Mrs. McKown, much traveled and a busy writer, presents a middle-of-the-road portrait of the first chief of state of Ghana, recognizing his strengths, taking note of his weaknesses, and putting his life into the special context of his time and place. It is well-written biography, proving that politicians can make for a lively life story if the biographer has the skill and the feeling for her subject.

An earlier Robin McKown biography was about an even more controversial African, Patrice Lumumba. She can't be accused of picking safe subjects.

Two Minorities In Soviet Capital

MOSCOW BY NIGHTMARE by Joyce Shub; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 239 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

The great attraction of this novel is the seemingly authentic look it provides at two minorities in the Moscow population, the small foreign colony, and the Russian intellectuals who stubbornly resist pressure from the state to desist from their bohemian life and to conform.

Mrs. Shub lived in Moscow as the wife of foreign correspondent Anatole V. Shub until he was expelled by the Kremlin.

Her central character, Vannie Tomkins, is also the wife of a Western correspondent posted in Moscow. Weary of the restrictions placed upon its "guests" by the Soviet government, she begins actively to solicit the companionship and friendship of underground Muscovites. It brings her into conflict with the state. And it causes problems, not only for Vannie, but for her friends, Russian and non-Russian alike.

Trouble-prone Vannie may irritate some readers with her extreme naivete. And there is a Cold War flavor to the novel that seems out of pace with the times. Still, one suspects, international entente not withstanding, that life in Moscow is very likely unpleasantly like what Mrs. Shub describes. (Life in Washington D.C. today is no picnic either.) And her story has the special enticement of providing that insight, while at the same time remaining a better than fair suspense yarn.

A Man Running From His Shadow

The newly divorced, the lonely ones shut up in their apartments like ice cubes in a tray, with only the inch by inch solace of booze and the tube, are the subject of Dan Wakefield's new novel. This seemingly overworked theme, like that of his earlier "Going All The Way," transcends itself almost alarmingly by his deft placement of satiric acupuncture needles right where it hurts.

Marilyn and Phil, the two central characters, share post-mortem analyses of their dissolved marriages. On the basis of this bond, which is as tenuous as a relationship based solely upon having served in the ranks of the same army, they become lovers, then somewhat weary friends helping each other cope with the singles industry. The result could be merely more cruel or facile comedy, another jello mold script from Neil Simon, but instead we have a savagely funny study of loneliness.

And so he does at the hands of his creator, for Wakefield is a cartographer of desperation, tracing its hidden springs, sudden twists, lunar tides and explosive rapids.

In fleeing boredom, Phil resembles a man running from his shadow at sun-up, thinking at noon that he has outdistanced it, only to see it lengthen before him as the day wanes. At one point, between skull imploding hangovers and casual pickups, he manages to find at least a sense of purpose in compulsively following the regimen necessary to rid himself of an infestation of lice that became his wards after an amorous encounter.

Wakefield's explorations of ennui are classic, always original, and by turns sardonic, lyrical, touching, clinical. At times the cumulative effect of alienation is so immediate that the reader feels physically oppressed, as if the empty hours described in the book had taken the form of a slow, sloppy beast sitting on his chest, a nightmare in the word's original sense. But an indelibly witty nightmare.

What starts as the difficulty of those grown up in the 1950s to cope with today's pop culture (like jowly middle aged men in their throbbing doubleknits, or else a sense that one's manners are anachronistic and courtly), then moves quite properly toward what is really amiss, as defined by George Meredith's observation that "in tragic life we are betrayed by what is false within."

So on New Year's Eve, when Marilyn has a date with a married man, Phil warns that this could mean trouble.

And Marilyn, the more pragmatic of the two, shrugs and says sadly but truly: "Trouble is better than nothing."

An Essayist Fails To Achieve Focus

THE BOOKS IN FRED HAMPTON'S APARTMENT by Richard Stern; Dutton, 301 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

The reputation of Richard Stern as novelist and essayist is formidable, but we found this latest collection of his commentary upon the social, political and cultural scene too often flimsy and trivial. In other words: a disappointment. The best part of the book consists of pieces on literary figures and trends, with his subjects ranging from Joyce and Pound to Bellow, Malamud and Updike. Here, Stern is at home and an expert. But the remainder of "The Books in. . ." seems unfocused, uncertain and unimportant.

BROWSING BOOKMAN

Charles Berlitz, the underwater explorer and adventurer, has done a new revised edition of "Dive: The Complete Book of Skindiving," originally authored by Rick and Barbara Carrier.

The previous editions were issued in 1955 and 1963.

Now Funk & Wagnalls has brought out the newest version, pricing its 285 pages with a generous splash of photographs at a modest $6.95. To the Carriers' material Berlitz has added a considerable amount of new information from his fast store of expertise. The book provides a brief history of skindiving, a description of the underwater world that awaits the diver, a discussion of equipment, special chapters on spearfishing and photography, another on sea legends and lore, an analysis of the physiological problems of diving and a bibliography.

"The sea waits. . .the possibilities. . .are infinite," is the challenging conclusion.

ALAN HALL, son of a botanist, himself a farmer and forager, has produced "The Wild Food Trail Guide" as a $3.45 Holt, Rinehart and Winston paperback that describes in detail the most common edible plants of North America, with drawings by Katie Matthysse, a range map, a cross-index by season, and data on their habitat and uses. "For the trail or the backyard," claims the cover. ". . . makes plant identification sure, safe and easy." One way, it would seem, to beat the high food prices, or at least lessen its impact. The backpacker, camper, sportsman, et al, should find it invaluable and enjoyable.

FROM THE Comstock Editions house in Sausalito: an original, "Backpacking in the Wilderness Rockies" by Thomas Winnett, and two reprints, Enos A. Mills' classic "The Grizzly" (1919) and Padraic Colum's "Legends of Hawaii" (1937).(The books are $1.50 each. And the Richard Goulds of Comstock continue to prove their premise that there is no limit to material on the West deserving of publication.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

British film artist-designer turned author Ben Healey first introduced the character Harcourt d'Espinal, art connoisseur, bon vivant and wheeler-dealer, in "The Vespucci Papers." He brings him back here for another encore.

The scene is Venice, where the portly d'Espinal becomes involved in a shady transaction between some devious parties, centering around a forgery of Michelangelo's Sleeping Cupid. There's a lot of scheming and finally some gunplay involving Mafiosa types.

Healey's best character is a small street urchin, whose ingenuity and daring put her in danger. She's well done, but the rest of the cast, even d'Espinal, is less than memorable.

Many reviewers have praised Healey as a literary stylist of wit and polish. But we find his writing here peculiarly dry and juiceless, and his novel, therefore, rather tedious.

Lisbon — Old And Modern Portugal

By FRED JOYCE

Travelers visiting Greece, Italy, Southern France, Spain or Morocco will find an extra dividend in their itinerary if a few days stopover can be accommodated in Lisbon, Portugal.

Lisbon is a fascinating city of contrast. The historic focus of ancient seapower and world exploration gives history buffs an opportunity to relate, while the modern role of Lisbon in international commerce and travel makes it a highly sophisticated and exciting city to visit for devotees of the contemporary scene.

WE BOOKED INTO the Ritz Hotel to see if its reputation as the finest of all Ritz establishments was merited. There was just no contest from the time we entered the front door held open for us by a young boy in the old Philip Morris flat top hat costume with white gloves and white spats to boot.

This is a post World War II hotel built on one of the high hills overlooking the Lison valley and river front. However, its spacious, high ceilinged marble columned lobbies and restaurants hearken to the grand era of hotel building. When you enter your guest room, you are reminded of many a 100-year-old hostelry because of the enormous size of the accommodations and the elegant period furniture utilized throughout.

Here is the enormous marble-walled bathroom with gigantic tub and twin wash basins. It is really a bathroom suite with a separate compartment for the shower and another for the toilet and bidet. The wardrobes, walk-in closets, luggage storage room and built-in drawers are unmatchable.

OUR ROOM WAS topped off with a 20-foot by six-foot outdoor terrace overlooking a large park. Because of the time impact of our non-stop jet trip from Chicago, we drew the damask drapes and took a Portuguese-style siesta.

Our first impression of the city was on a Sunday night but even so there was no doubt about the dynamism of Lisbon. Cars rushed down wide, sweeping boulevards through parks at breakneck speed rivaling Paris and Rome. The downtown theater and entertainment district swelled with crowds of pedestrians. Busses and old-fashioned street cars about the size of those in San Francisco ply their way through both the new and old sections of the city.

Down by the waterfront in the old section of the city known as the Alfama we found narrow streets where even the smallest cars seldom go and tiny shops of artisans and little cafes in the streets off the main Pracado Commercial which opens on the waterfront.

WE RODE AN ancient elevator up a tall steel tower to take us to the section called Rossio which is the more modern shopping area of Lisbon. At the top of the iron elevator ride is the charming restaurant La Quinta. Although its decor is Mexican, it serves all of the favorite Portuguese country dishes (fish or veal or lamb) as well as several authentic Mexican and Spanish dishes.

High on a steep hill near the River Tajo perches the Castle of Saint George, the oldest structure in Lisbon. Its oldest ramparts were built in pre-Roman times and this refuge from attack was the cradle of the city. Its Moorish walls stand guard over the earliest houses of Lisbon which flow down the hillside. Despite some minor restoration, it still looks like the fortress that it was with flying buttresses, moats and a delightful tiled esplanade for entrapped royalty to enjoy their evening walks and a view of the river.

THE ENTIRE neighborhood of ancient houses clinging to the side of the steep hill is untouched from the 16th Century and well worth wandering through for at least a morning or an afternoon.

An unexpected plus was found in an exhibit inside the castle in the form of a scale model of the entire city of Lisbon as it appeared just prior to the tidal wave and fire which virtually engulfed all of the lowlands of the city in 1755.

The Lisbonians are a hardy lot and although they have been spared by all of the modern European wars they have seen hardships in their economy and from their political status which still is a virtual dictatorship. They are very friendly, industrious people imbued with a strict moral code — and the omnipresent military organization keeps it that way.

A POPULAR TOURIST occupation in Lisbon is feeding the pigeons on the black and white mosaic pavement of Rossio Square. The charming 18th Century square, located near the fashionable Avenida de Liberdade, is surrounded by gustling sidewalk cafes. (British European Airways photo)

MUCH OF THE history of Portugal has been written by its seamen who ranged the world in commerce, discovery and war. There are still echoes of this great day of sail in the harbor in Lisbon where the double ended sailing cargo barges beat back and forth as they have for centuries. A real grasp of the tremendous accomplishments of Portuguese sailors is quite easy and impressive at the Museum de Marinha.

This is one of the most remarkable naval museums in the world. It is partially housed in the ancient monastery of Santa Maria de Belem. The monastery and its magnificent cloistered courtyard is located at the very beach from which Vasco de Gama set sail in 1497 for his voyage of discovery of the sea route to India.

The museaum houses hundreds of marvelous scale models from the earliest sailing ships arranged chronologically to the latest naval warships.

All manner of things nautical from earliest uniforms, full size royal barges and modern naval armaments are presented in a well-ordered voyage through the marine world in which Portuguese sailors lived.

WE WERE WISELY advised that the ideal place for lunch after visiting the museum was the nearby restaurant O Peixe. The contrastingly modern nautical building jutting out into the harbor has the atmosphere of a luxurious yacht club. There is a magnificent seafood buffet and huge striking photographic murals of boats and oceanside scenes throughout Portugal.

A short motor trip to the beach resort of Estoril reveals an entirely different Lisbon; one of play and luxury seldom seen anywhere else in this rather quiet land. Estoril rivals the Lido in Venice but certainly not the old famous French and Italian Mediterranean sun and fun places. But in one regard, it excels all of them with its government owned and operated casino.

Besides its comparatively modest gaming rooms this huge building boasts a theater, several cocktail lounges and restaurants and an immense night club featuring the latest continental acts and a line of showgirls who show as much as the Portuguese are allowed. The landscaping, gardens, lighted fountains and automobile approaches to the casino are impressive indeed. But even more remarkable is the manner in which blackjack dealers seem to draw as many as five straight 21s in less than ten minutes time.

THE FOOD WAS as outstanding as in the best restaurants downtown and the entire experience well worth the half hour drive to Estoril.

A microcosm of modern and ancient Portuguese life is presented in the Museum of Contemporary Arts and Crafts also located at the harbor's edge. Each province of Portugal is represented in a different section of the building and its history, economy, agriculture, social and cultural characteristics are easily understood. The Portuguese feeling for the land and hard work is evident in the tools of agriculture and crafts pursued in the various areas of the country.

Probably the finest food and the most outstanding service we had anywhere in Portugal was right in the main dining room of the Ritz Hotel in Lisbon.

Amidst its dark green walls and crystal chandeliers and sconces was served the most delicious of fish and lamb dishes along with American and European favorites. The service by this highly dedicated staff rivals that afforded royalty. Even an unusual failure of the hotel's electrical system did not cause a flap among the waiters. They simply lit additional candles on the tables and went on resolutely with their dinner service for more than five minutes before the lights were restored to the dining room.

THE SECOND best restaurant we experienced in Lisbon (certainly not a derisive comment in the same town with the Ritz operation) was the Escorial not far from the theater district. Their specialties include steamed clams, broiled prawns with bacon, grilled lobster in a special sauce and small squids in their own ink. The small, intimate restaurant has one other distinction and that is a counter service in the front room which allows the busy Lisbonian to partake of some of the best cuisine in town.

Don't miss their crepe specialties for dessert!

Lisbon is not Portugal just as Rome is not Italy, but the difference between the city life and the provincial is not as vast in Portugal. By careful observance of the many cultural and historic things to be learned in Lisbon, it is possible to come to an appreciation of what the rest of the country is really like without ever leaving town.

A half-day visit to one of the nearby fishing villages of Sesimbra or Nazare is all one needs to round out an accurate impression of Portugal.

The Land That Longfellow Made Famous

The story of Evangeline, immortalized in the poem by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, caught the fancy of the world in Longfellow's day and continues to hold it in Louisiana where the memory of Evangeline is very much alive.

The real-life Evangeline, Emmeline Labiche, settled in St. Martinville where the people of Acadiana have built a shrine to her long search for her love, Gabriel, and the tragic exile of the Acadians from Nova Scotia by the English. Longfellow-Evangeline State Park in St. Martinville, nine miles from New Iberia on Louisiana Highway 31, opens the way into Acadiana.

Bayou Teche, flowing by the park, brought the Acadian pioneers to the area in the 1760s. Old customs, like tacking death notices to posts in town, are still observed by their descendants, many of whom speak French.

The park has 20 tent sites and 20 trailer spaces with water and electrical hookups and is shaded by beautiful moss-draped live oaks. The Acadian House Museum in the park is an old home built in 1765 and is an excellent example of an Acadian plantation house. It contains many artifacts of the region's cultural heritage.

Europe Is No Longer The Bargain Counter For U.S. Travelers

By RICHARD LONGWORTH

Two years ago a stein of lager and the oompahpah of a brass band at Munich's Buergerbraukeller Beer Hall cost an American tourist 60 cents in U.S. money.

With the price up to $1.16 today, some of the gemutlicheit just isn't there anymore.

But that's how it is in Europe. The purchasing power of U.S. money these days has been clobbered by devaluation of the dollar and widespread inflation. Prices have increased 100 per cent or more over five years ago.

"UNHAPPILY, WE are getting about 50 per cent fewer American tourists this year than usual," said Francis Dagevillen, assistant general manager of the Scribe Hotel in Paris. "We consider the dollar devaluation as the cause."

"American tourism has increasingly become group tourism," said Claudio Meffert, commercial director of the Melia Madrid Hotel, "and the failing dollar has brought cancelled bookings and pleas that we absorb part of the losses."

In Rome, the price of a double room in the Columbus Hotel near the Vatican has gone up to $22.08 from $11.84.

Michael La Mendola, American-born owner of a boutique at the top of the Spanish Steps, lamented that "our sales to Americans have dropped 50 per cent and those who are buying are buying less and complaining more, while German tourists don't question the price of anything."

A DINER WILL pay $8.30 for pasta, veal, salad, cheese, fruit and a pint of wine at the Piazza del Popolo, one of Rome's top restaurants. A similar meal cost $5.84 three years ago.

In Paris, a double with bath at the Scribe, near the Opera, costs $47.50 today, compared to $24 in 1968. At the Grand Hotel, Manager Mario dell Antonia said U.S. patronage is down 15 per cent this year despite a 20 per cent discount offered to all Americans, June 15 through Sept. 3.

The French National Tourist Office says 10 per cent fewer Americans are visiting France this year.

In London, a single with bath at the moderately priced Strand Palace Hotel is $19.75, almost twice the $10 it cost in 1968. "the Americans ued to come in the peak summer season," said Sales Director David November. "Now many come in winter, spring and fall, when our rates are less."

SHARP AS have been price increases in hotel rates and restaurant meals, the erosion of what one gets for the dollar in Europe this summer does not stop there. Whatever one does costs more, from riding London's cabs and buses to buying an ice cream cone in Copenhagen's Tivoli.

As one UPI reporter discovered in June on his return to London for a visit, a bus ride that in 1970 cost the equivalent of 15 cents now costs 25 cents. Hamburgers that went for about 35 cents were up to 60-75 cents.

A famed British raincoat that was $65 in 1970 cost $92.50 in 1973. A John Locke hat purchased in 1970 for $16 cost $31 this time.

At one of London's most ancient pubs, Ye Olde Cheshire Cheese, just off Fleet Street, a three-course meal and a half bottle of wine cost $8.75 today compared to $3.85 in 1970.

THE SAME reporter had trouble with his American travelers' checks in some places. Restaurants were not eager to accept them, although they never refused.

A number of stores also asked, "Don't you have cash?" when checks were offered. What one got for the checks in British pounds changed almost from day to day. During June $100 travelers' checks were exchanged at various times for a maximum of 38.20 pounds to a low of 37.50 pounds — a range of $1.35.

In Germany and Belgium, some prices have more than doubled. The Grand Hotel Nuernberg in Bonn charges $51.11 today for a double that cost only $21.50 in 1968. "We have fewer American tourists staying with us," said Assistant Manager Klaus Tsaffenberger.

MANAGER Jean Burca of the Metropole Hotel in downtown Brussels said a double room has risen from $19 in 1968 to $41.70 today. About 40 per cent of the Metropole's guests were Americans five years ago, he said, "but it's down to 25 per cent now."

In Vienna, it costs $32.35 for a single at the venerable Sacher's Hotel compared to $14.61 in 1968. Some Americans just ask where they might find less expensive accommodations and move on.

Geneva's hotel du Rhone charges $40 for a single, almost three times the $14 rate in 1968. The manager of the jewelry shop of Vacherin and Constantin said, "Americans were our main customers and we have seen sales drop by more than one half in just two years. They simply cannot afford to pay the prices."

IN AMSTERDAM, the bite is smaller. Still, a single without bath at the Centraal Hotel has gone up to $13.05 from $8.44 in five years.

A single at the Hotel Palatace in Stockholm costs $18.60 today and the managing director of the Swedish Tourist Traffic Association says Americans are cutting visits short to save money.

Now from the engineers of Mercedes-Benz comes a brilliant advance. A car which, in an incredibly short time, has earned the almost extravagant praise of the men who know, drive and live sports cars. Men like Phil Hill, the only American ever to win the World Championship of Driving.

The 450SL is powered by a fuel-injected, overhead-cam V-8 engine. All four wheels are independently suspended. All four wheels have fade-resistant disc brakes. All features you'd expect in a high-performance sporting machine. But consider the following: In the 450SL, air conditioning, power-assisted steering and 3-speed automatic transmission are standard. Hardly the usual features you're given in a sports car.

The landscaping, gardens, lighted fountains and automobile approaches to the casino are impressive indeed. But even more remarkable is the manner in which blackjack dealers seem to draw as many as five straight 21s in less than ten minutes time.

THE FOOD WAS as outstanding as in the best restaurants downtown and the entire experience well worth the half hour drive to Estoril.

A microcosm of modern and ancient Portuguese life is presented in the Museum of Contemporary Arts and Crafts also located at the harbor's edge. Each province of Portugal is represented in a different section of the building and its history, economy, agriculture, social and cultural characteristics are easily understood. The Portuguese feeling for the land and hard work is evident in the tools of agriculture and crafts pursued in the various areas of the country.

Probably the finest food and the most outstanding service we had anywhere in Portugal was right in the main dining room of the Ritz Hotel in Lisbon.

Amidst its dark green walls and crystal chandeliers and sconces was served the most delicious of fish and lamb dishes along with American and European favorites. The service by this highly dedicated staff rivals that afforded royalty. Even an unusual failure of the hotel's electrical system did not cause a flap among the waiters. They simply lit additional candles on the tables and went on resolutely with their dinner service for more than five minutes before the lights were restored to the dining room.

THE SECOND best restaurant we experienced in Lisbon (certainly not a derisive comment in the same town with the Ritz operation) was the Escorial not far from the theater district. Their specialties include steamed clams, broiled prawns with bacon, grilled lobster in a special sauce and small squids in their own ink. The small, intimate restaurant has one other distinction and that is a counter service in the front room which allows the busy Lisbonian to partake of some of the best cuisine in town.

Don't miss their crepe specialties for dessert!

Lisbon is not Portugal just as Rome is not Italy, but the difference between the city life and the provincial is not as vast in Portugal. By careful observance of the many cultural and historic things to be learned in Lisbon, it is possible to come to an appreciation of what the rest of the country is really like without ever leaving town.

A half-day visit to one of the nearby fishing villages of Sesimbra or Nazare is all one needs to round out an accurate impression of Portugal.

The Land That Longfellow Made Famous

The story of Evangeline, immortalized in the poem by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, caught the fancy of the world in Longfellow's day and continues to hold it in Louisiana where the memory of Evangeline is very much alive.

The real-life Evangeline, Emmeline Labiche, settled in St. Martinville where the people of Acadiana have built a shrine to her long search for her love, Gabriel, and the tragic exile of the Acadians from Nova Scotia by the English. Longfellow-Evangeline State Park in St. Martinville, nine miles from New Iberia on Louisiana Highway 31, opens the way into Acadiana.

Bayou Teche, flowing by the park, brought the Acadian pioneers to the area in the 1760s. Old customs, like tacking death notices to posts in town, are still observed by their descendants, many of whom speak French.

The park has 20 tent sites and 20 trailer spaces with water and electrical hookups and is shaded by beautiful moss-draped live oaks. The Acadian House Museum in the park is an old home built in 1765 and is an excellent example of an Acadian plantation house. It contains many artifacts of the region's cultural heritage.

By RICHARD LONGWORTH

Two years ago a stein of lager and the oompahpah of a brass band at Munich's Buergerbraukeller Beer Hall cost an American tourist 60 cents in U.S. money.

With the price up to $1.16 today, some of the gemutlicheit just isn't there anymore.

But that's how it is in Europe. The purchasing power of U.S. money these days has been clobbered by devaluation of the dollar and widespread inflation. Prices have increased 100 per cent or more over five years ago.

"UNHAPPILY, WE are getting about 50 per cent fewer American tourists this year than usual," said Francis Dagevillen, assistant general manager of the Scribe Hotel in Paris. "We consider the dollar devaluation as the cause."

"American tourism has increasingly become group tourism," said Claudio Meffert, commercial director of the Melia Madrid Hotel, "and the failing dollar has brought cancelled bookings and pleas that we absorb part of the losses."

In Rome, the price of a double room in the Columbus Hotel near the Vatican has gone up to $22.08 from $11.84.

Michael La Mendola, American-born owner of a boutique at the top of the Spanish Steps, lamented that "our sales to Americans have dropped 50 per cent and those who are buying are buying less and complaining more, while German tourists don't question the price of anything."

A DINER WILL pay $8.30 for pasta, veal, salad, cheese, fruit and a pint of wine at the Piazza del Popolo, one of Rome's top restaurants. A similar meal cost $5.84 three years ago.

In Paris, a double with bath at the Scribe, near the Opera, costs $47.50 today, compared to $24 in 1968. At the Grand Hotel, Manager Mario dell Antonia said U.S. patronage is down 15 per cent this year despite a 20 per cent discount offered to all Americans, June 15 through Sept. 3.

The French National Tourist Office says 10 per cent fewer Americans are visiting France this year.

In London, a single with bath at the moderately priced Strand Palace Hotel is $19.75, almost twice the $10 it cost in 1968. "the Americans ued to come in the peak summer season," said Sales Director David November. "Now many come in winter, spring and fall, when our rates are less."

SHARP AS have been price increases in hotel rates and restaurant meals, the erosion of what one gets for the dollar in Europe this summer does not stop there. Whatever one does costs more, from riding London's cabs and buses to buying an ice cream cone in Copenhagen's Tivoli.

As one UPI reporter discovered in June on his return to London for a visit, a bus ride that in 1970 cost the equivalent of 15 cents now costs 25 cents. Hamburgers that went for about 35 cents were up to 60-75 cents.

A famed British raincoat that was $65 in 1970 cost $92.50 in 1973. A John Locke hat purchased in 1970 for $16 cost $31 this time.

At one of London's most ancient pubs, Ye Olde Cheshire Cheese, just off Fleet Street, a three-course meal and a half bottle of wine cost $8.75 today compared to $3.85 in 1970.

THE SAME reporter had trouble with his American travelers' checks in some places. Restaurants were not eager to accept them, although they never refused.

A number of stores also asked, "Don't you have cash?" when checks were offered. What one got for the checks in British pounds changed almost from day to day. During June $100 travelers' checks were exchanged at various times for a maximum of 38.20 pounds to a low of 37.50 pounds — a range of $1.35.

In Germany and Belgium, some prices have more than doubled. The Grand Hotel Nuernberg in Bonn charges $51.11 today for a double that cost only $21.50 in 1968. "We have fewer American tourists staying with us," said Assistant Manager Klaus Tsaffenberger.

MANAGER Jean Burca of the Metropole Hotel in downtown Brussels said a double room has risen from $19 in 1968 to $41.70 today. About 40 per cent of the Metropole's guests were Americans five years ago, he said, "but it's down to 25 per cent now."

In Vienna, it costs $32.35 for a single at the venerable Sacher's Hotel compared to $14.61 in 1968. Some Americans just ask where they might find less expensive accommodations and move on.

Geneva's hotel du Rhone charges $40 for a single, almost three times the $14 rate in 1968. The manager of the jewelry shop of Vacherin and Constantin said, "Americans were our main customers and we have seen sales drop by more than one half in just two years. They simply cannot afford to pay the prices."

IN AMSTERDAM, the bite is smaller. Still, a single without bath at the Centraal Hotel has gone up to $13.05 from $8.44 in five years.

A single at the Hotel Palatace in Stockholm costs $18.60 today and the managing director of the Swedish Tourist Traffic Association says Americans are cutting visits short to save money.

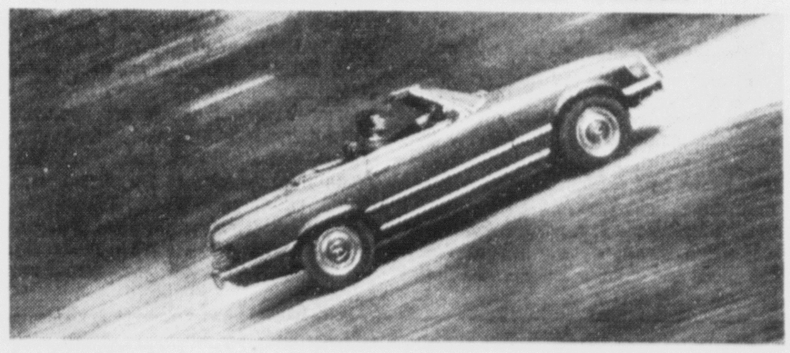
Road & Track called the 450SL "one of the ten best cars in the world."



Phil Hill called it "the best sports car." Mercedes-Benz agrees.

Now from the engineers of Mercedes-Benz comes a brilliant advance. A car which, in an incredibly short time, has earned the almost extravagant praise of the men who know, drive and live sports cars. Men like Phil Hill, the only American ever to win the World Championship of Driving.

The 450SL is powered by a fuel-injected, overhead-cam V-8 engine. All four wheels are independently suspended. All four wheels have fade-resistant disc brakes. All features you'd expect in a high-performance sporting machine. But consider the following: In the 450SL, air conditioning, power-assisted steering and 3-speed automatic transmission are standard. Hardly the usual features you're given in a sports car.

The 450SL is the product of truly enlightened engineering. Mercedes-Benz engineering. Test drive it and you'll experience – maybe for the first time in your life – what a sports machine should be. Call us. It's surprisingly easy to arrange.

Meet The Exotics Of The Grasses

GARDEN PAGE

It used to be a lawn was the only place in the garden to grow grass.

Contemporary roll-your-own buffs know better. So do innovative gardeners, who are aware they can make excellent use of decorative grasses in borders, around garden pools, in containers, and as accents for landscape plantings.

If the grass-like ornamentals are unfamiliar to you, now is a good time to visit a nursery and meet the plants in person. Small plants are available, usually, in flats, and larger specimens can be obtained in nursery containers.

LILY TURF with clumps of grass-like leaves is excellent for accent purposes in the garden, and provide summer-time flowers in shades of blue.

The plants are excellent for accenting many different types of landscape settings. Its decorative value is great — up close or from a distance.

Another decorative choice is Equisetum. Better known as Horsetail Reed Grass, it is a slender, rush-like herb which grows up to four feet in height. The tall, slender green stalks are jointed and darker markings add interest to the plant, which is ideal in and around garden pools. The plant has much focal interest in the landscape. It is intrusive, so keep the roots contained, if possible.

Planting in a sunken chimney flue is one way to check its spreading nature, suggests the California Assn. of Nurserymen.

Fountain Grass (Pennisetum) is striking, with arching narrow leaves — and colorful one-foot spikes. These are purplish to rose in color and add ornamental quality to the graceful growth of this hardy performer.

Turf-lily is not a grass but it looks enough like one to qualify for this round-up of decorative delights. The individual leaves are rich green in color. It forms a low, grassy cover and spikes of blue flowers contribute even more distinction to an extraordinary landscape choice.

Some nurseries may have variegates forms of Turf-lily, sold as Liriope muscari.

ENGLISH IVY makes an attractive groundcover that does wonders for this shady patio, where not everything would grow and where high maintenance plantings would be impractical. The ivy needs very little attention.

WATER CULTURE

Tropical Plants Thrive Without Benefit Of Soil

By EARL ARONSON

The subject today is indoor water gardening, using exotic tropical plants. No soil or potting mixture is needed.

Plants include Chinese evergreen, Malaysian dracaena, Hawaiian ti, and many others.

"Water culture requires little know-how or effort, and plants do well with a minimum of care," says Russell C. Mott, specialist in the culture and propagation of tropical plants at Cornell University.

"PLANT MATERIALS suitable for water gargening are readily available from florist shops and garden centers, and they can be put together easily in any waterproof container," Mott explained.

The most satisfactory method is to use plants with well-developed roots. Small plants are better to work with than large ones. Any plant that roots easily from a cutting may be used.

Fertilizer-enriched water is used in ceramic bowls, glass dishes or even photograph display cubes. Avoid copper, brass, or lead containers because corrosion caused by the fertilizer solution releasees chemicals harmful to plants.

Gravel, coarse sand or pearl chips — such as those used in goldfish bowls or aquariums — will support plants growing in such a solution.

THIS IS WHAT to do:

Clean the container with soap and water to prevent fungal and bacterial growth; wash the gravel thoroughly.

Use a water soluble plant food at one-fourth the recommended strength.

Put a handful of clean gravel in the container, and add a tablespoon or two of granulated charcoal to keep the gravel sweet.

Wash all potting mixture particles from the plant roots before arranging them in the container; trim off injured or rotted root areas with a sharp knife or shears.

Arrange the plants on a gravel base and fill the container with enough gravel to support them. Plant them at the same depth they grew in the pot.

Pour in water-fertilizer mixture so half the depth of the gravel is under water, and maintain this level.

The bottom half of the gravel medium serves as a reservoir of nutrients and water for plant growth, Mott explains, while the upper half becomes a "propagation chamber," where interplay of oxygen and moisture causes new roots to form.

THE CARE: Check water level weekly. The solution should be replaced every four to six weeks to prevent growth of algae and fertilizer salt built-up.

Most of the recommended plants do well under average indoor light conditions. Tropical foliage plants become too large.

Overlooked Swiss Chard

Swiss Chard deserves to be much more widely grown in home vegetable gardens. It can be sown in every month of the year except winter, and it tolerates hot humid summers magnificently. A member of the beet family, it grows luscious, crinkled leaves with thick, succulent stems. They are delicious cooked as "greens" making an excellent substitute for spinach, which cannot tolerate hot weather. The seeds are easy to handle, and they germinate reliably.

For Quick Summer Color, Look To The Bedding Plants

Many are to be found already showing color in larger sizes of nursery containers. This means instant beauty — wherever you want it. The smaller transplants, from flats, will be ablaze with color in a matter of a few weeks.

They are to be found blooming in nurseries in brilliant shades of gold, yellow, orange, and even bi-colors of mahogany and orange or gold. The in-between sizes of Marigolds and the taller varieties will provide plenteous summer color, too.

The various sizes create many opportunities for use in a variety of landscape situations. This is true, too, of Zinnias which offer tempting colors in pink, red, cherry, and warmer hues. Dwarf Dahlias also offer a bright mixture of colors for the summer garden; the flowers are excellent for cutting for indoor arrangements.

SALVIA OFFERS intense red blooms for sunny sites; the unique blooms — and fiery red and gold colors — of Cockscomb add interest and beauty to their surroundings.

Periwinkle (Vinca) is a favorte bedding plant for summertime — the rugged individualists never seem to stop blooming. There are several varieties — in lavender pink and white, some of which are distinctively marked with a bright red eye.

There are willing candidates to provide blooms in blue, lavender, violet and purple: Ageratum, Alyssum and Lobelia, to name but three.

The big Petunia family offers shades of almost every color. Shopping undoubtedly will reveal a color that fills your exact desires, promises the California Assn. of Nurserymen.

MAYBE YOUR TREE IS LONELY

"That tree is loaded with blossoms every year, but I never get any fruit."

Many a non-professional fruit grower or backyard orchardist has voiced this complaint, and as an answer to the problem Paul Stark Jr. of Stark Bro's Nurseries has this advice:

"Just remember that in the case of many fruit trees, it takes at least two to tango. All fruit trees need pollination to convert blossom to fruit. Many varieties are self-pollinating. But some varieties of peach and apricot, most varieties of apple, sweet cherry, and pear, and all varieties of American and Japanese plum need another tree — a different variety of the same fruit — for cross pollination. If you have a fruit tree that blooms beautifully but never bears, the chances are that it's just lonely."

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Set out annuals now for late summer and fall bloom. Marigolds, Zinnias, Asters, Periwinkle and Dwarf Dahlias are a free-flowering fivesome to use to provide garden color.
- Vegetables that are harvested early, before they mature and get tough on the plant, make the tastiest meals.
- Chrysanthemums, by now, should have been cut back for the final time. Provide plenty of moisture and feed every three or four weeks until the flower buds show color.
- Invited to a friend's home for a barbecue? Surprise your hostess by presenting her with living greenery. A Piggyback Plant, to serve as a hanging basket, or a Bird's Nest Fern in a small wicker basket-like container, will show your appreciation and will delight her.
- A mid-summer feeding for the lawn is in order. If crabgrass is taking over, or a traditional weed problem exists in your lawn, have your nurseryman recommend control procedures for you to follow.
- As summer progresses, good watering practices become increasingly important to the survival of your lawn and garden.

Those Problem Areas In Garden Call For A Special Treatment

By MILLICENT TAYLOR

This may be a good time to tackle that slope too steep to mow, or that shady area under a big tree where grass will not grow.

Special treatment of such problem areas will help check erosion, keep down weeds and make the grounds more attractive.

A low bank with a gradual slope is easily planted with ground-covers such as Vinca minor (myrtle) or pachysandra. Both are tolerant of dense shade but will grow in half shade. Moss pink or ground phlox, grass pinks, and baby wintercreeper are also suitable.

These will grow in half or full sun. All are evergreen.

PREPARE THE ground, enriching the soil Myrtle and pachysandra plants should be set in from six to 12 inches apart. Baby wintercreeper about four feet apart. Phlox and grass pinks 24 to 30 inches apart.

All these will spread, if well cared for until established.

A slope like this, if in full sun, can also be planted to pfister juniper or cotoneaster, the spready variety. The latter will also tolerate part shade.

Some have been planted to mugho pine, too, although we remember one such slope where the mughos got too tall and had to be replaced.

SLOPES ALONG railroad tracks of highways are often planted with creeping roses to hold the soil — Max Graf, Wichuriana, or Virginiana. The first two served me well on a steep bank in my former home grounds.

A handsome flowering plant for a slope is Penngift Crownvetch. It will grow in sun or shade, in any kind of soil, from Maine to California.

Its clusters of pea-like flowers, pink, white, or lavender, bloom from June to frost. The plants grow from 12 to 15 inches high, and are actually good for the soil. Like the Max Grafs and Wichurianas it is being used now extensively along highways.

For a rock garden set round or craggy stones in a variety of shapes and sizes into the ground at irregular, natural-looking intervals — not in rows — with only about one-third exposed and slanting back to catch moisture.

As you build it, pack rich wet soil into the crannies for the rock plants. Many groundcovers will grow well in the spaces. Attractive are creeping baby's-breath, dwarf speedwells, dwarf sedums, stonecress, tufted sandwort, and rock-garden plants like golden alyssum, dwarf evergreens, heather, small spring bulbs, and some alpines.

A DRY WALL can be made of either flat or rounded stones. A wall of flat stones is easier, and needs only a pitch of one to two inches for each foot in height.

A wall of round stones should have a pitch of at least three to five inches for each foot. The stones should fit snugly together, slanting back as with a rock garden, to send the moisture into the bank. Tamp good soil, wet, into the crannies as you go along.

High, steep banks can be developed with two or more dry stone walls, slanting back, with level areas about three feet wide in between them. This level area can be planted with flowers or made into a pebble or flagged path.

VINES AND DWARF shrubs such as barberry, coralberry, and snowberry can be planted. Weeping forsythia at the top of the wall will hang down over. Pachysandra and myrtle can be used to cover the ground under the shrubs and keep down weeds.

Heavy shade under trees is most attractive when planted with groundcovers.

Myrtle or pachysandra will grow in shade, and the smaller spring-flowering bulbs will come up among the plants. English ivy can be used in this way, too.

Exposed roots of large trees, that might offer a hazard to the lawn mower, are often planted to groundcovers.

ANOTHER PROBLEM spot where grass will not grow well is the moist area in deep shade. Here is an opportunity to have a bed of hardy ferns. If you don't know ferns — and most of us don't — some of the nursery catalogs offer named collections.

Prepare the ground with plenty of peat moss or leaf mold. The handsome Ostrich Fern will grow four feet, the Christmas and Lady Ferns to two and three feet. You can have dainty wood ferns and the fan-shaped Maidenhair — graceful and charming.

They aren't evergreen, but in early spring some will send up decorative fiddleheads to announce that soon their lacy and plumelike leaves will emerge. Forget-me-not and lily-of-the-valley are also good groundcovers for such spots.

TREATING ALL these problem spaces is done by setting in plants from the nursery. You can, of course, raise some of them from seed, but it takes a long time.

The first season it is important to mulch the planting, and also water generously during dry spells. After that, with the plants well established, they will need little care.

Some Plants That Give Off 'Cool Vibes'

It's almost phenomenal the way certain plants can create an illusion in the summer garden.

Because the plants look cool, they feel cool; their presence can be refreshing on days when the mercury soars upward.

When creating a refuge from the heat, however, don't buck the odds and try to convert the hottest, driest area of the garden. Instead, choose a spot set back or partitioned-off from the full blast of sun and increase its capacity for comfort by planting some cool-looking shrubs.

AN EXCELLENT shrub — actually a semi-vine — for creating a cool effect is Fatshedera, a cross between the big leaf Aralia and Ivy. Plant it against a wall and train it in an interesting pattern. The luxuriant, ivy-like leaves will provide a refreshing backdrop to your retreat.

The glossy-leafed Aralia will compliment its offspring, Fatshedera, in the cool-look garden. Its bold, deeply lobed leaves are crisp green and cool. It is medium-tall and spreads its evergreen beauty in an enjoyable manner.

Acanthus (Bear's Breech) is a suitable companion to the aforementioned plants, and ideal where low-growing shrubs are needed in semi-shade.

The dark green, textured, leaves are deeply serrated. Tall, off-rose flower spikes provide further focal interest in mid-summer.

MANY FERNS are ideal in semi-shade, and without question, have a cooling effect on those who enjoy the natural beauty of a special refuge. Your nurseryman can show you various Ferns to consider.

Tropical Philodendron and Abyssinian Banana, are illusions of coolness to the patio corner; Baby's Tears provides a cool carpet of greenery — it is a favorite ground cover in shaded locations. To top off this special micro-environment, the California Assn. of Nurserymen suggests using plants in hanging baskets.

Grape Ivy, Meyer's Fern, Plectranthus, Fuchsias and foliage-rich Coleus are but a few to consider. They'll cascade their beauty from overhead — for all to enjoy.

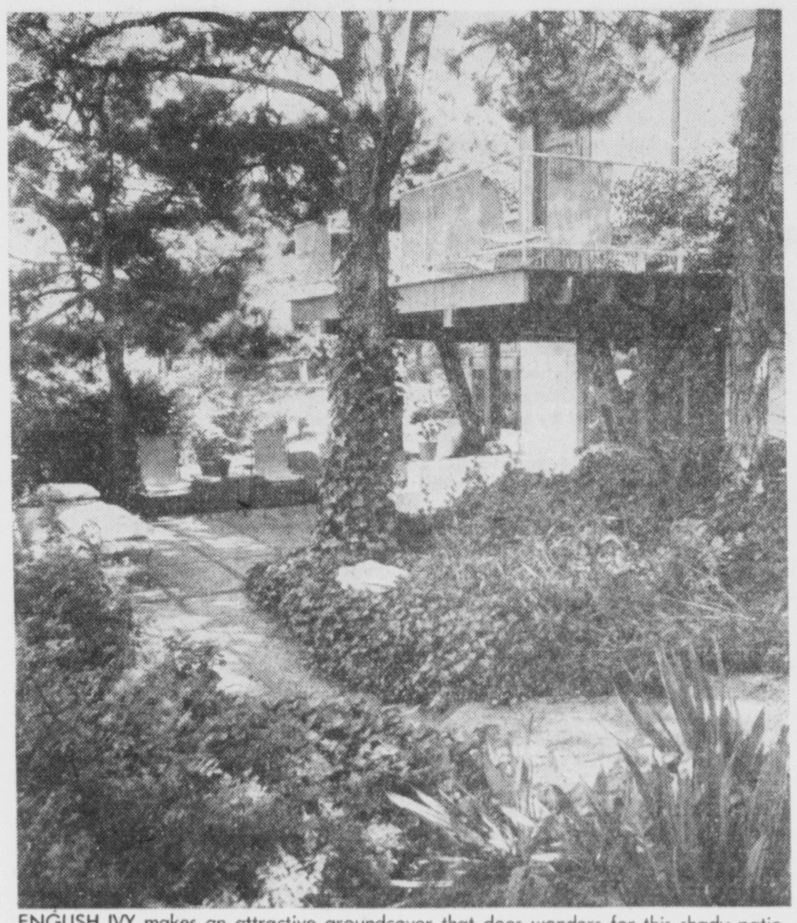
Swiss Chard deserves to be much more widely grown in home vegetable gardens. It can be sown in every month of the year except winter, and it tolerates hot humid summers magnificently. A member of the beet family, it grows luscious, crinkled leaves with thick, succulent stems. They are delicious cooked as "greens" making an excellent substitute for spinach, which cannot tolerate hot weather. The seeds are easy to handle, and they germinate reliably.



ENGLISH IVY makes an attractive groundcover that does wonders for this shady patio, where not everything would grow and where high maintenance plantings would be impractical. The Ivy needs very little attention.

Many are to be found already showing color in larger sizes of nursery containers. This means instant beauty — wherever you want it. The smaller transplants, from flats, will be ablaze with color in a matter of a few weeks.

They are to be found blooming in nurseries in brilliant shades of gold, yellow, orange, and even bi-colors of mahogany and orange or gold. The in-between sizes of Marigolds and the taller varieties will provide plenteous summer color, too.

The various sizes create many opportunities for use in a variety of landscape situations. This is true, too, of Zinnias which offer tempting colors in pink, red, cherry, and warmer hues. Dwarf Dahlias also offer a bright mixture of colors for the summer garden; the flowers are excellent for cutting for indoor arrangements.

SALVIA OFFERS intense red blooms for sunny sites; the unique blooms — and fiery red and gold colors — of Cockscomb add interest and beauty to their surroundings.

Periwinkle (Vinca) is a favorte bedding plant for summertime — the rugged individualists never seem to stop blooming. There are several varieties — in lavender pink and white, some of which are distinctively marked with a bright red eye.

There are willing candidates to provide blooms in blue, lavender, violet and purple: Ageratum, Alyssum and Lobelia, to name but three.

The big Petunia family offers shades of almost every color. Shopping undoubtedly will reveal a color that fills your exact desires, promises the California Assn. of Nurserymen.

MAYBE YOUR TREE IS LONELY

"That tree is loaded with blossoms every year, but I never get any fruit."

Many a non-professional fruit grower or backyard orchardist has voiced this complaint, and as an answer to the problem Paul Stark Jr. of Stark Bro's Nurseries has this advice:

"Just remember that in the case of many fruit trees, it takes at least two to tango. All fruit trees need pollination to convert blossom to fruit. Many varieties are self-pollinating. But some varieties of peach and apricot, most varieties of apple, sweet cherry, and pear, and all varieties of American and Japanese plum need another tree — a different variety of the same fruit — for cross pollination. If you have a fruit tree that blooms beautifully but never bears, the chances are that it's just lonely."

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Set out annuals now for late summer and fall bloom. Marigolds, Zinnias, Asters, Periwinkle and Dwarf Dahlias are a free-flowering fivesome to use to provide garden color.
- Vegetables that are harvested early, before they mature and get tough on the plant, make the tastiest meals.
- Chrysanthemums, by now, should have been cut back for the final time. Provide plenty of moisture and feed every three or four weeks until the flower buds show color.
- Invited to a friend's home for a barbecue? Surprise your hostess by presenting her with living greenery. A Piggyback Plant, to serve as a hanging basket, or a Bird's Nest Fern in a small wicker basket-like container, will show your appreciation and will delight her.
- A mid-summer feeding for the lawn is in order. If crabgrass is taking over, or a traditional weed problem exists in your lawn, have your nurseryman recommend control procedures for you to follow.
- As summer progresses, good watering practices become increasingly important to the survival of your lawn and garden.

Those Problem Areas In Garden Call For A Special Treatment

By MILLICENT TAYLOR

This may be a good time to tackle that slope too steep to mow, or that shady area under a big tree where grass will not grow.

Special treatment of such problem areas will help check erosion, keep down weeds and make the grounds more attractive.

A low bank with a gradual slope is easily planted with ground-covers such as Vinca minor (myrtle) or pachysandra. Both are tolerant of dense shade but will grow in half shade. Moss pink or ground phlox, grass pinks, and baby wintercreeper are also suitable.

These will grow in half or full sun. All are evergreen.

PREPARE THE ground, enriching the soil Myrtle and pachysandra plants should be set in from six to 12 inches apart. Baby wintercreeper about four feet apart. Phlox and grass pinks 24 to 30 inches apart.

All these will spread, if well cared for until established.

A slope like this, if in full sun, can also be planted to pfister juniper or cotoneaster, the spready variety. The latter will also tolerate part shade.

Some have been planted to mugho pine, too, although we remember one such slope where the mughos got too tall and had to be replaced.

SLOPES ALONG railroad tracks of highways are often planted with creeping roses to hold the soil — Max Graf, Wichuriana, or Virginiana. The first two served me well on a steep bank in my former home grounds.

A handsome flowering plant for a slope is Penngift Crownvetch. It will grow in sun or shade, in any kind of soil, from Maine to California.

Its clusters of pea-like flowers, pink, white, or lavender, bloom from June to frost. The plants grow from 12 to 15 inches high, and are actually good for the soil. Like the Max Grafs and Wichurianas it is being used now extensively along highways.

For a rock garden set round or craggy stones in a variety of shapes and sizes into the ground at irregular, natural-looking intervals — not in rows — with only about one-third exposed and slanting back to catch moisture.

As you build it, pack rich wet soil into the crannies for the rock plants. Many groundcovers will grow well in the spaces. Attractive are creeping baby's-breath, dwarf speedwells, dwarf sedums, stonecress, tufted sandwort, and rock-garden plants like golden alyssum, dwarf evergreens, heather, small spring bulbs, and some alpines.

A DRY WALL can be made of either flat or rounded stones. A wall of flat stones is easier, and needs only a pitch of one to two inches for each foot in height.

A wall of round stones should have a pitch of at least three to five inches for each foot. The stones should fit snugly together, slanting back as with a rock garden, to send the moisture into the bank. Tamp good soil, wet, into the crannies as you go along.

High, steep banks can be developed with two or more dry stone walls, slanting back, with level areas about three feet wide in between them. This level area can be planted with flowers or made into a pebble or flagged path.

VINES AND DWARF shrubs such as barberry, coralberry, and snowberry can be planted. Weeping forsythia at the top of the wall will hang down over. Pachysandra and myrtle can be used to cover the ground under the shrubs and keep down weeds.

Heavy shade under trees is most attractive when planted with groundcovers. Myrtle or pachysandra will grow in shade, and the smaller spring-flowering bulbs will come up among the plants. English ivy can be used in this way, too.

Exposed roots of large trees, that might offer a hazard to the lawn mower, are often planted to groundcovers.

ANOTHER PROBLEM spot where grass will not grow well is the moist area in deep shade. Here is an opportunity to have a bed of hardy ferns. If you don't know ferns — and most of us don't — some of the nursery catalogs offer named collections.

Prepare the ground with plenty of peat moss or leaf mold. The handsome Ostrich Fern will grow four feet, the Christmas and Lady Ferns to two and three feet. You can have dainty wood ferns and the fan-shaped Maidenhair — graceful and charming.

They aren't evergreen, but in early spring some will send up decorative fiddleheads to announce that soon their lacy and plumelike leaves will emerge. Forget-me-not and lily-of-the-valley are also good groundcovers for such spots.

TREATING ALL these problem spaces is done by setting in plants from the nursery. You can, of course, raise some of them from seed, but it takes a long time.

The first season it is important to mulch the planting, and also water generously during dry spells. After that, with the plants well established, they will need little care.

Some Plants That Give Off 'Cool Vibes'

It's almost phenomenal the way certain plants can create an illusion in the summer garden.

Because the plants look cool, they feel cool; their presence can be refreshing on days when the mercury soars upward.

When creating a refuge from the heat, however, don't buck the odds and try to convert the hottest, driest area of the garden. Instead, choose a spot set back or partitioned-off from the full blast of sun and increase its capacity for comfort by planting some cool-looking shrubs.

AN EXCELLENT shrub — actually a semi-vine — for creating a cool effect is Fatshedera, a cross between the big leaf Aralia and Ivy. Plant it against a wall and train it in an interesting pattern. The luxuriant, ivy-like leaves will provide a refreshing backdrop to your retreat.

The glossy-leafed Aralia will compliment its offspring, Fatshedera, in the cool-look garden. Its bold, deeply lobed leaves are crisp green and cool. It is medium-tall and spreads its evergreen beauty in an enjoyable manner.

Acanthus (Bear's Breech) is a suitable companion to the aforementioned plants, and ideal where low-growing shrubs are needed in semi-shade.

The dark green, textured, leaves are deeply serrated. Tall, off-rose flower spikes provide further focal interest in mid-summer.

MANY FERNS are ideal in semi-shade, and without question, have a cooling effect on those who enjoy the natural beauty of a special refuge. Your nurseryman can show you various Ferns to consider.

Tropical Philodendron and Abyssinian Banana, are illusions of coolness to the patio corner; Baby's Tears provides a cool carpet of greenery — it is a favorite ground cover in shaded locations. To top off this special micro-environment, the California Assn. of Nurserymen suggests using plants in hanging baskets.

Grape Ivy, Meyer's Fern, Plectranthus, Fuchsias and foliage-rich Coleus are but a few to consider. They'll cascade their beauty from overhead — for all to enjoy.

A Portable Router Offers Handyman The Utmost In Creative Satisfaction

By ANDY LANG

A high-speed machine, moving from 20,000 to 27,000 revolutions per minute, it cuts into and through wood and other materials to a desired thickness and depth. But that simple explanation of its usefulness gives no hint of its special fascination — the ability to turn out intricate joints, make decorative cuts and provide the basis for exacting inlays, as well as to cut grooves and dadoes.

ALL THESE operations once were within the range only of the expert cabinetmaker.

The electric router and its assortment of bits and cutters put them within reach of the do-it-yourselfer. The router, which vaguely resembles a bell with two knobs on it, is a tool that can be masetered without too much trouble. Because, in guiding the router, you seem to be personally involved in making the varied recesses in the wood, there is a sense of achievement unequaled by any other power machine.

The base of the router and the vertical motor unit are threaded, an arrangement which permits the depth of a cut to be controlled to within one-sixty fourth of an inch. The more the housing is turned into the base, the more the bit projects below the base. A clamp screw quickly locks the motor in place.

THE SWITCH that turns the motor on and off is usually recessed into the housing so that it cannot be moved accidentally. A gauge attached to the side of the base moves against the side of the work to keep the bit at a uniform distance from the edge of the stock. This gauge is shaped so that it can be used for straight or curved work and rides on adjustable rods.

The chuck of the router intended for home use has a capacity of a quarter-of-an-inch. Since much of the work done with a router calls for the use of a template or pattern guide, the base has been cut out so that there can be an accurate alignment of the template guide with the motor spindle.

How fast the router is fed into the stock depends on the type of cut being made and the hardness of the material being used. Feeding too fast will slow the motor and cause an overload. Feeding too slowly will scorch the wood and dull the cutters.

PRACTICING ON scrap wood will soon enable the operator to get the feel of the machine and know instantly when the feed is too fast or too slow. This practice should be done on more than one kind of wood and with different cutters.

By using the proper attachment or bit, you can perform a large variety of tasks with the router. There is no type of joint that cannot be made with the router. The mortise and tenon, the cross lap, the end lap, the tongue and groover, the rabbet — all these and many more are possible.

That aristocrat of wood joints, the dovetail, usually requires the use of a dovetail attachment.

As with all power tools, the plug should be removed from the outlet when changing cutters or making any adjustment.

HERE'S YOUR ANSWER

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I bought a cabinet second-hand and attempted to take off the old varnish finish, since I wanted to refinish it. I put on a good quality varnish remover and, after it softened the finish, scraped and scraped and scraped. A lot of old varnish came off, but there's still plenty of it on. I can't even see any of the bare wood. It seems to me there must have been half a dozen coats of varnish there originally and apparently I got off only one or two of them. I'd like to know whether repeating the whole operation will help any or would I be wasting my time and money?

A. — Yes, repeat the entire process. But this time don't do any scraping until you have determined that all or most of the varnish will come off. First, after applying the varnish remover generously, wait at least 30 minutes before you touch it. Then scrape a bit in just one area of the wood. If you see that all of the varnish is not going to yield to your efforts, apply another coat of the remover right on top of the first one. Wait another 30 minutes, then scrape. The chances are most or all of the old finish will disappear.

But if it doesn't, you'll just have to repeat the project a third time. If you get off most of the varnish, you may find that the rest of it will give way with a vigorous sanding, using a paper with a heavy grit.

Q. — I have to attach some 2 by 4s to a concrete wall. Can I use concrete nails and is there any special way of hammering them so they won't bend?

A. — Concrete nails can be used on most concrete walls. They are driven into the 2 by 4s and then into the wall. You won't be able to tell their effectiveness by testing them by driving a couple into the wall without the wood, because they will bend quickly. But the fact that most of a nail is in the wood before it hits the concrete usually will prvent it from bending. Sometimes, however, you will strike a spot or even an entire wall which will resist all your efforts. You can rent a tool for driving concrete nails or attach the studs with a special adhesive.

KEEP IT CASUAL — AND COMFORTABLE

CASUAL FURNITURE used to be regarded strictly as outdoor furniture, and largely as summer furniture. But not anymore. Now it is used indoors, in dens, playrooms, family rooms, etc., as well as outdoors, on the patio, around the pool or in the garden. The two pieces shown here are alike in their framework. The difference is that one is upholstered with padding, and the other covered with a plastic webbing. The padded chair is generally preferred for a sheltered area, while the webbed seat and back are better suited to unprotected locations. You can build either or both chairs with the help of Steve Ellingson's Pattern 291. Send $1 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., and specify the pattern by number. All you have to do is trace the pattern parts onto wood, saw them out and assemble. Wood, pad and webbing are all stock items carried by most dealers. And the wheels make it easy to follow the sun out-of-doors, or to move the chairs from room to room as needed indoors.

An Old-Fashioned Pleasure— Swinging In Your Backyard

Swing seats that hang from porch beams or a sturdy tree limb can be made from two four-and-a-half-inch foot lengths of two-by-four-inch western wood, two 30-inch pieces of one-inch dowel, marine canvas, chain and four eye bolts.

The canvas, 31 by 66 inches, has three-inch side hems for strength and loops are sewn at each end for the dowel to pass through.

The dowels are inserted through holes drilled near each end of the two-by-fours, then eye bolts go through the ends of the dowels to keep the two-by-fours snug against the canvas.

Lengths of one-and-a-half-inch-link chains are fastened to the eye bolts with split link connectors. The back chains are shorter than the front to give a slant to the seat.

Adjustments of height off the ground and preferred slant are easy to make by taking up or letting out lengths of chain.

"Swinging" has taken on a very different connotation these modern days. But the old-fashioned, relaxed kind of swinging in the backyard seems to be coming back as one of those almost forgotten pleasures, rediscovered by a nostalgic society.

Try it, and you'll enjoy it. So will the children, if they get a chance to use the swing.

INSIDE YOUR HOME

Put Function Ahead Of Fashion When You Choose New Furnishings

By CAROLYN MURRAY

Every once in a while it's good to evaluate some of the patterns we fall into when it comes to furnishing a home.

In the evaluation we should try to find out whether we are subtle victims of fads and gimmicks in home fashions.

How do you decide whether a home furnishings idea is a fad or a timeless approach to design?

First, you have to look hard at your own family's life style. Next, you create a rough outline of what it takes to support that life style. And by support I mean spiritual and physical support, as well as financial.

HERE'S AN EXAMPLE of what I mean:

No matter how often designers and retailers say that wall-to-wall carpeting is old hat, I still prefer it for my own household. I like to walk barefoot, and on cold mornings I don't want to hopscotch around on icy, bare floors, or take giant steps from carpeted area to carpeted area.

I also hate dusty floors and hate dusting. Again, the wall-to-wall carpet solves some of those chores for me, since I merely vacuum from wall to wall and room to room.

Bedroom furnishings easily fall into this area of home furnishings fads. Just think of all the glamorous headboards there are in the stores: Not one really performs a service. We plaster them up against a wall and allow them to do our decorating for us.

NEXT TIME YOU make a bed, think about what roles you'd really like the bed structure to perform.

Want to read in bed? If so, you need a headboard designed to tilt to a position that will support your back.

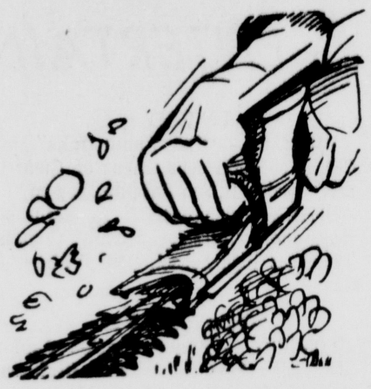
If your days are full of activities, you may want a giant calendar handy. This way from the moment you open your eyes you can get things together. Evidently, Simmons, the maker of all kinds of sleep comforts, thought just such an idea would be fun and practical. They created a calendar-bulletin-board headboard framed in a bright green lacquer, and we show it today. The calendar is a perpetual one and has magnetic ladybugs which you position on each date or use to hold reminders.

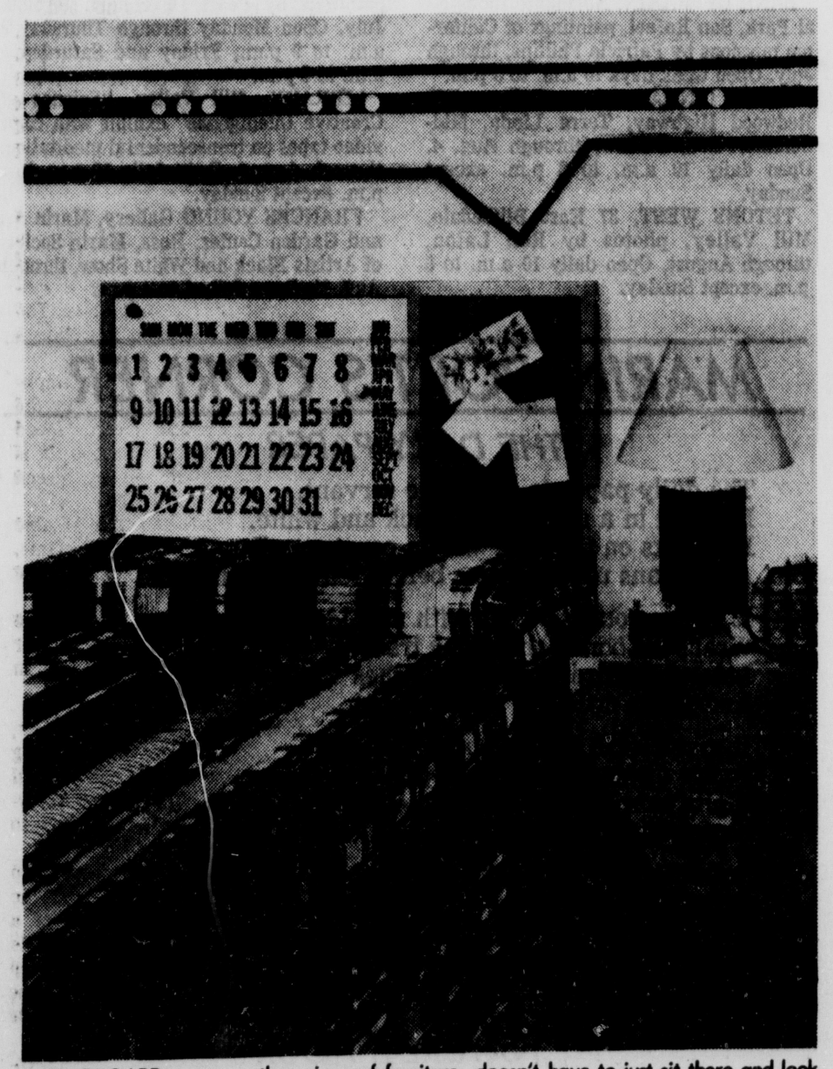
TO GIVE THE upper wall a decorative treatment, designer Jim de Martin added



instant interest by using colored stick-on tapes and applied some cutouts on top of the tapes. The bedside table is in a matching lacquer color and has a surface sized for bedside needs, plus storage below.

Headboards, living room seating and dining room arrangements frequently fall into the fad category.

Try to resist the temptation of following a fashion trend and, instead, think through the family needs. If five individual chairs would be more comfortable and useful in the living room, why settle for a sofa and two chairs? You pay your money, and you get exactly what you need.



A HEADBOARD, or any other piece of furniture, doesn't have to just sit there and look decorative. It can also fulfill a very practical function. Here's a young idea from Simmons. It's a bulletin board combined with a perpetual calendar planned to keep the youngster, or oldster, in tune with the times.

First, you have to look hard at your own family's life style. Next, you create a rough outline of what it takes to support that life style. And by support I mean spiritual and physical support, as well as financial.

HERE'S AN EXAMPLE of what I mean:

No matter how often designers and retailers say that wall-to-wall carpeting is old hat, I still prefer it for my own household. I like to walk barefoot, and on cold mornings I don't want to hopscotch around on icy, bare floors, or take giant steps from carpeted area to carpeted area.

I also hate dusty floors and hate dusting. Again, the wall-to-wall carpet solves some of those chores for me, since I merely vacuum from wall to wall and room to room.

Bedroom furnishings easily fall into this area of home furnishings fads. Just think of all the glamorous headboards there are in the stores: Not one really performs a service. We plaster them up against a wall and allow them to do our decorating for us.

NEXT TIME YOU make a bed, think about what roles you'd really like the bed structure to perform.

Want to read in bed? If so, you need a headboard designed to tilt to a position that will support your back.

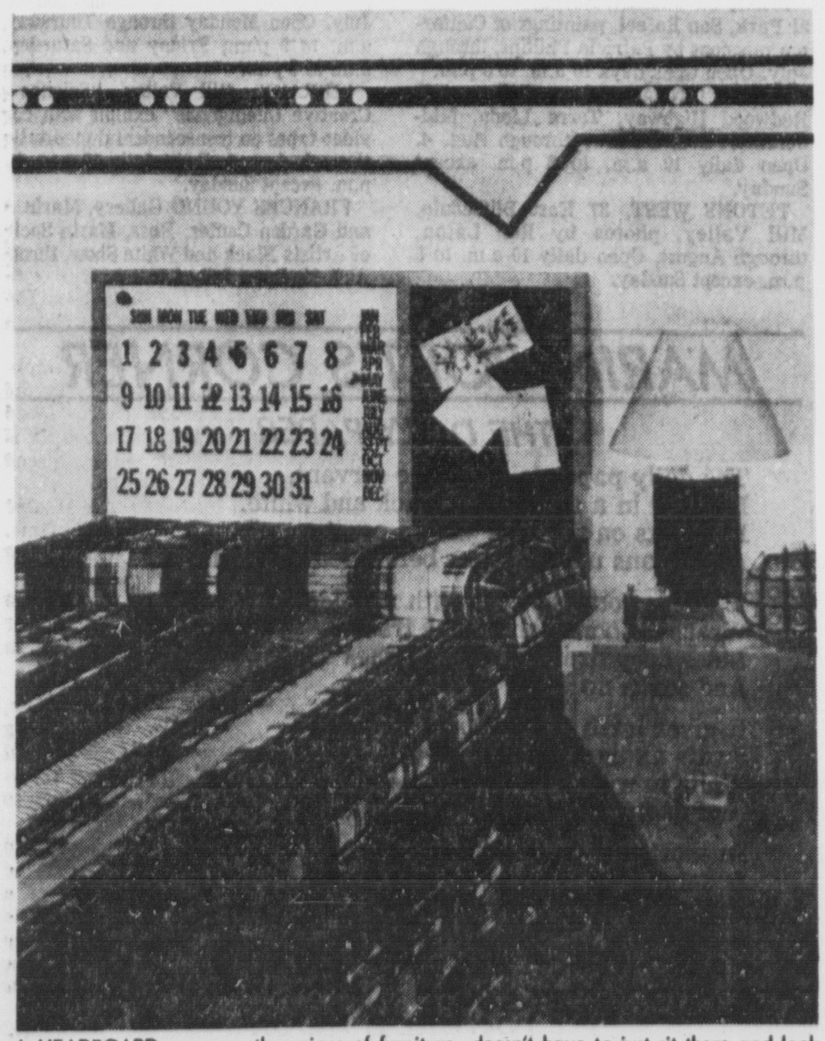
If your days are full of activities, you may want a giant calendar handy. This way from the moment you open your eyes you can get things together. Evidently, Simmons, the maker of all kinds of sleep comforts, thought just such an idea would be fun and practical. They created a calendar-bulletin-board headboard framed in a bright green lacquer, and we show it today. The calendar is a perpetual one and has magnetic ladybugs which you position on each date or use to hold reminders.

TO GIVE THE upper wall a decorative treatment, designer Jim de Martin added

instant interest by using colored stick-on tapes and applied some cutouts on top of the tapes. The bedside table is in a matching lacquer color and has a surface sized for bedside needs, plus storage below.

Headboards, living room seating and dining room arrangements frequently fall into the fad category.

Try to resist the temptation of following a fashion trend and, instead, think through the family needs. If five individual chairs would be more comfortable and useful in the living room, why settle for a sofa and two chairs? You pay your money, and you get exactly what you need.



A HEADBOARD, or any other piece of furniture, doesn't have to just sit there and look decorative. It can also fulfill a very practical function. Here's a young idea from Simmons. It's a bulletin board combined with a perpetual calendar planned to keep the youngster, or oldster, in tune with the times.

A Bandleader From Baltimore Brings Back Music To Dance By

By WILLIAM LAFFLER

Baltimore hitherto has been associated with H. L. Menchekn, Spiro T. Agnew, the football Colts and the baseball Orioles. Now make way for Zim Zemarel.

Zemarel is a big band leader. His band plays at all the Colts' home games and on opening day at the Orioles' ball park. It also serenades the fans every year at the Preakness.

HIS FIRST recording "Killing Me Softly With His Song" (Harmony KH 32248), is not going to make dance band buffs forget about Tommy Dorsey or Glenn Miller but his music does have a distinctive and pleasant sound. And his rhythms are fine for dancing.

Zemarel doubles as a vocalist on "I Wish You Love" and "God Is Abundant." His voice has velvety textures which should soothe the ears of cheek-to-cheek dancers.

Other tuns are "Sing," "Something," "If," "Me and Mrs. Jones," "Saturday Night," "We've Only Just Begun" and "Aubrey," in addition to the title number.

Zemarel's recording debut should be a successful one and call for many encores.

IT IS THE type of music that sets the mood for hours of relaxing listening to the tunes of other bandleaders.

"Killing Me Softly With His Song" and "Sing" also are featured on "You Are the Sunshine of My Life" by Ray Conniff and the Singers (Columbia KC 32376).

A highlight of the concert is "Dueling Voices," a vocalizing of the "Dueling Banjos" instrumental popularized in the movie, "Deliverance." The voices are neatly suited to the slow opening but they are unable to handle the fast notes as they were written and don't attempt to.

Among the other songs are "The Night the Lights Went Out in Georgia," "Tie a Yellow Ribbon Round the Ole Oak Tree" and "The Right Thing to Do."

Franck Pourcel's music has always been fascinating because of its flexibility. "The World Is a Circle" (Paramount PAS - 6047), Pourcel's latest album, is one of his finest and worth repeated playing.

HIS SELECTIONS range from John Lennon's "Imagine" to a musical updating of Bach ("Blue Bach"). The album title comes from the Burt Bacharach scoring of "Lost Horizon" and it sets the tone for the concert.

Other tuns are "Ben," "Mammy Blue," "The Time of My Song," "Popcorn," Neil Diamond's "Song Sung Blue" and "Love Theme From The Godfather."

You can round out an evening of carefree listening with "Learn to Love" by Werner Muller and His Orchestra (London SP44193).

There is a brief suggestion of W. C. Handy in the opening "Mouldy Old Dough." Muller leans heavily on movie-Broadway tunes from "Lost Horizon," "Man of La Mancha," "The Godfather" and "The Thief Who Came to Dinner," giving each a fresh approach.

Rich And Rewarding 'Parsifal'

By WILBUR LANDREY

Until now Richard Wagner's last opera, "Parsifal," has been recorded only at Bayreuth, where Wagner intended it should be performed, but a new production by Sir Georg Solti breaks the tradition — and happily.

Solti directs the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra and a stellar cast in a "Parsifal" recorded in a studio and not at the Bayreuth Festival Theater. It is different but musically rich and rewarding (London OSA 1510).

WAGNER DECREED that "Parsifal", based on his version of the search for the Holy Grail, should be performed for the faithful only at the Bayreuth Festspielhaus, where it had its premiere on July 26, 1882. The Metropolitan was the first to break that ban in 1903 but the extant recordings still come from performances there.

So the Solti version breaks with tradition.

"Parsifal" is supposed to have been Wagner's "Christian" opera, but it remains more Wagnerian than Christian even in its themes of sin, redemption and death.

In the London-Solti version, the German basso, Gottlob Frick, comes out of retirement at the age of 65 to sing the outstanding performance as the elderly knight, Gurmemanz, who recounts much of the story of the Knights of the Grail.

Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau gives a good performance as Amfortas, the wounded King keeper of the Grail, and Rene Kollo that of Parsifal, who recovers the sacred spear of the Grail which dealt the wound of Amfortas and heals it at last.

Christa Ludwig sings in moving fashion the role of Kundry, a typically Wagnerian heroine who seduces and dies with her redemption. The other male roles of Titurel and Klingsfor are well sung by Hans Hotter and Zoltan Kelemen.

FRANK LISZT'S piano paraphrases of the romantic operas were popular and famous in his time. If not exactly highbrow music, they have and are going to survive in the repertory.

Claudio Arrau has a fine new record of Liszt's transcriptions from operas by Verdi (Philips 6500 368).

Paul Simon's Rhymin' Makes For Super Album

By BRUCE MEYER

The transofrmation of Paul Simon has been a long, slow process.

But before our very eyes, he has developed from an adept manipulator of clever phrases into a truly gifted songwriter, and a perceptive observer of humanity as a whole and America in particular.

Over the past 16 years — beginning with a hit single called "Hey Schoolgirl," when Simon and Garfunkel called themselves Tom and Jerry — Paul Simon's music has been evolving.

HE MADE A gradual, difficult transition away from the grating waspishness, the college-boy cleverness, of his early work. And he has grown musically, combining a natural gift for melody with a variety of forms and rhythms, new and old.

The last Simon and Garfunkel album, "Bridge Over Troubled Water," was a major turning point. Not only was it the end of Simon's long, close association with Art Garfunkel, but it was also the first indication of his rapidly expanding musical base.

With his first solo album, Simon stretched his new wings a bit, and ended up with a sprain. But for a trial run it wasn't bad, and it introduced the Jamaican reggae beat to his music for the first time.

PAUL SIMON IS not one to make the same mistakes twice. His new album, "There Goes Rhymin' Simon" (Columbia KC-32280), is a very nearly perfect relization of his development as a songwriter.

From the gently rocking "Kodachrome" to the spiritual power of "Loves Me Like A Rock," the album is both a serious musical portrait of Simon's America and a commercially viable product.

Paul Simon occupies the opposite pole in the American pop music spectrum from Alice Cooper. Alice plays on the darker realms of the American psychology — the violence, the preoccupation with sexual fantasty and chrome-placed gimmickry. There's a good deal less fanfare to Simon's approach, of course, and he manages not to be hopelessly cynical, despite his recognition that all is not as it should be.

THEY DO HAVE one thing in common, however: a feel for what makes this country tick.

It's this intuitive power that makes "Rhymin' Simon" work so well, whether it is in an intensely personal song like "Something So Right," or the melancholy wide-screen power of "American Tune."

Simon continues his exploration of Caribbean rhythms, especially in an odd little vignette called "Was A Sunny Day" about a sailor named Speedo and a high school queen named Lorelei, if you can dig it.

I GUESS MY favorite tune on the album is "Loves Me Like A Rock," which rightfully belongs in a little rural church in Mississippi, or maybe a storefront meeting-house in Chicago. Simon owes a lot to his backing group, the Dixie Hummingbirds, for the success of that one.

As for "Kodachrome," the single from the album, it's likely to become one of the monster hit tunes of 1973, if for no other reason than that it has one of those melodies that simply will not turn loose of your head.

If you haven't gotten the picture in nice bright colors yet, I'll say it another way: "There Goes Rhymin' Simon" is a brilliant album. Here's hoping Paul Simon has a million of them.

THE DAILY PAPER

The daily paper is a humble servant,
Dressed in a uniform of black and white.
It knocks on the door with a courteous thump
And cleans up the house before leaving at night.

It sweeps out cobwebs with new ideas,
Wraps up bones and other trash,
Lines deep drawers and polishes windows
And soaks up spills after a crash.

It gives forth gossip about the elite
Swats an unruly pet or two,
Waits to welcome early callers
And quotes the stocks without ado.

In short, the daily morning minion
Is submissive, domestic and serviceable;
It divides itself among family members
And best of all, is recyclable!

MARIN POET'S CORNER

THE DAILY PAPER

The daily paper is a humble servant,
Dressed in a uniform of black and white.
It knocks on the door with a courteous thump
And cleans up the house before leaving at night.

It sweeps out cobwebs with new ideas,
Wraps up bones and other trash,
Lines deep drawers and polishes windows
And soaks up spills after a crash.

It gives forth gossip about the elite
Swats an unruly pet or two,
Waits to welcome early callers
And quotes the stocks without ado.

In short, the daily morning minion
Is submissive, domestic and serviceable;
It divides itself among family members
And best of all, is recyclable!

For Ev Scrimshaw, The News Is Where He keeps The Rye

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — A major network recently took out a newspaper advertisement here to report that the anchormen on the five TV stations it owns now do their newscasts right from the newsroom instead of a studio.

"When you take newsmen off the set and move the cameras into the Newsroom, where the real excitement is, that's news," the ad said.

It may be news in New York, but it's old hat for my pal Everett Scrimshaw, who is the owner, manager, producer, director, reporter, anchorman and staff trombonist for WWWW-TV in Bumfudgeon, Fla.

"AH'VE BEEN broadcastin' from the newsroom ever since ah took over the station," he said. "Ah have to. It's where we keep the cameras, the news tickers, mah typewriter, the pay phone and the coffee pot.

"Ah also keep a little rye handy, but don't put that in the paper," added Everett, who acquired WWWW two years ago when the former owner went to Washington to talk to the FCC and never came back.

Everett's station is so small he doesn't need interoffice memos because there's only one office to send them to.

AND THAT OFFICE is where he does the "I See You News" program each night from 5 to 6 p.m. The tiny newsroom is a beehive of activity the moment he arrives to prepare the show.

The reason it is so busy is that Everett usually arrives 30 minutes before the show begins. The rest of the time he's out juicing.

The unsung hero of the "I See You News" is its sole newswriter and assignment editor, Sinbad Brittle. He's a thin, sallow-faced man who left a major newspaper — the Bumfudgeon Eagle — to work for WWWW.

LIKE MANY ex-newspapermen who make the switch, he thinks the anchorman couldn't find a story unless it was World War III. He thinks all anchormen have only pretty faces, golden voices and no smarts.

This isn't the case, of course; many anchormen are fine reporters.

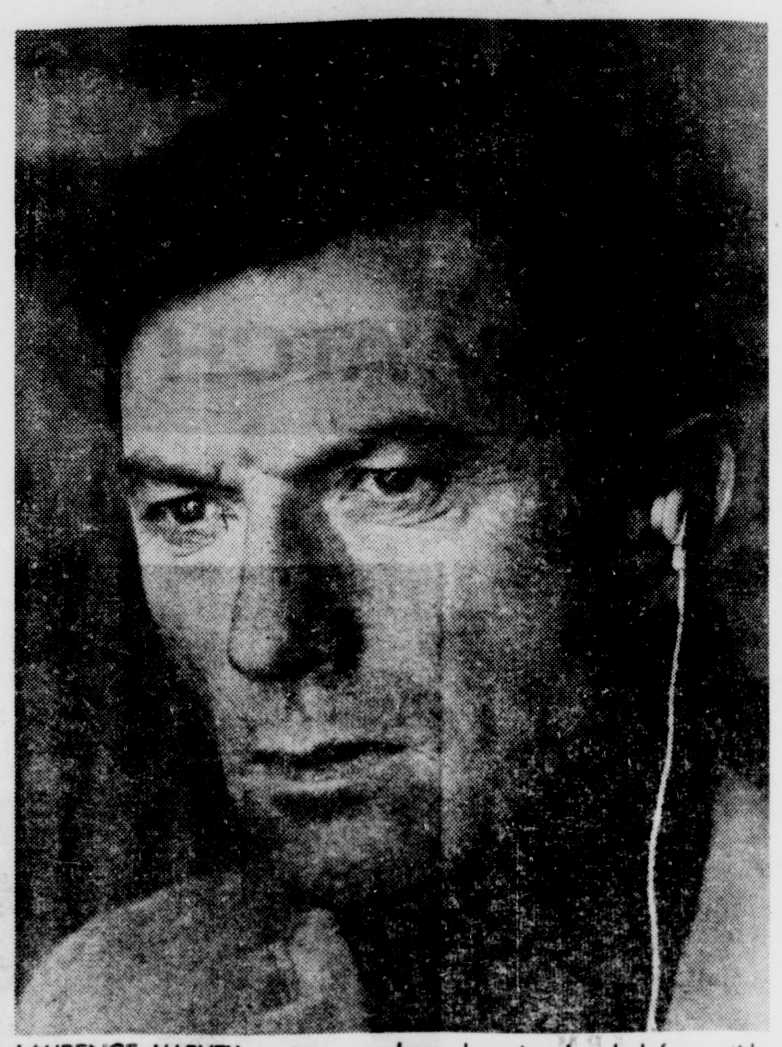
The "I See You News" team once had a sportcaster who came to WWWW from a New York station. But he never had any sports news. He just stood there giggling for five minutes. Someone finally took him away.

THEY ALSO HAD a weatherman, but after telling six jokes and predicting clear skies one day, he stepped outside and was immediately pummeled to death by hail.

That's why Everett Scrimshaw does the entire show each night, right there in the newsroom while the pay phone rings, Sinbad writes, news tickers tick, the coffee pot bubbles and the jug of rye awaits.

And when it's all over and "Tales of Wells Fargo" is on, he sits back in his chair and sighs.

"It's a lot of pressure, but the excitement of a newsroom — well, you just can't beat it," he says.



LAURENCE HARVEY portrays a chess champion headed for a title confrontation in "The Most Dangerous Match" episode to be repeated on "Columbo" Sunday at 8:30 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

Start Of A Career

Bert Parks, co-host of the 53rd annual Miss America Pageant on NBC-TV Sept. 8, started his broadcasting career at age 16 in his hometown, Atlanta, Ga., when he won an amateur singing contest and a spot as a $7-a-week announcer on radio.

'I Never Had It So Good,' Says Demond

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Demond Wilson lives in the shadow of Redd Foxx in their weekly television series, "Sanford and Son," but away from work Demond is very much his own, swinging man.

Wilson is a talkative, outgoing bachelor with a string of racial jokes. He pokes gentle fun at the black-white dilemma. But as a black he also feels deeply about civil rights.

"I grew up in Harlem where there are a lot of Lamonts."

He has written some episodes for the NBC series but hasn't sold any to the producers. Wilson says he is waiting for one he thinks worthy of an Emmy Award before he submits them.

WILSON LIVES in an apartment in the San Frnando Valley, about three minutes from the NBC studios where he reports to work at 8 a.m. six times a week.

Unlike many shows, "Sanford and Son" doesn't use cue cards, so it is necessary for Demon and Redd to memorize 60 pages of dialogue weekly.

Wilson has decorated his two bedroom apartment with fastidious care. He bought a combination of French provincial, modern and contemporary furniture in clean, classic lines.

He keeps a second bedroom for visiting friends and relatives.

Both his parents and sister continue to live in New York City, but he also has aunts and counsins in his native Valdosta, Ga.

WHEN WILSON moved to Southern California two years ago he brought nothing with him except his clothes. His wardrobe is a great source of pride.

"I'm known as Peter Prep," he says, in reference to his Ivy League image. "I never wear sandals or go out of the house in blue jeans. You can't dress like that when you drive a big Cadillac like I do."

When he can't get to the beach he jogs in place in his apartment.

A former college (Hunter College) and high school basketball star, Wilson is unable to play tennis or golf because of a shoulder separation.

WILSON'S ROOTS are still in Harlem although he has no plans to return there except to visit family and friends. And his bachelor status may change any day.

He has been dating the same girl for several months and has dinner with her every night.

Happily, he reports, she is the finest cook in the Western Hemisphere, spoiling him with curry dishes, fetuccini and, he adds with a chuckle, spareribs. There are evenings when Demond dons an apron and does the cooking himself.

DEMOND WILSON
A Swinging bachelor

On weekends Demond and his girl friend whom he wants to keep secret until they announce their engagement attend as many movies as possible. Occasionally they visit Redd Foxx and his wife.

WILSON HAS no pets and doesn't want any. He's planning, however, to buy a tankful of tropical fish, not so much for their company as the tranquilizing effect of their constant water ballet.

A veteran of Vietnam (1966-67) Demond is content with life, concluding. "I never had it so good."

Nancy Walker—A Natural Comedienne

Making people laugh is no easy task, but with Nancy Walker, it came quite naturally — much to her surprise.

Miss Walker, familiar to television audiences as Rock Hudson and Susan Saint James's maid Mildred, on NBC-TV's "McMillan & Wife," unexpectedly learned of her ability to be funny when she auditioned for her first Broadway role 32 years ago.

"I wasn't trying to be funny," she recalls. "I was being serious, and they kept laughing at me. It really upset me."

GERALDO RIVERA, award-winning journalist, visits Washington, D.C. for a segment of the magazine-formatted entertainment special, "Geraldo Rivera: Goodnight, America. How Are You?" to be shown Monday at 11:30 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11. Sen. Ted Kennedy also appears in a segment.

MR. AND MRS. Lawrence Bulmore, in their 70s, and Linda Lappin, 26, are members of two of the three generations represented in the "NBC Reports" program, "But Is This Progress?" to be colorcast Tuesday at 10 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4. It is an examination of the far-reaching technological changes that have occurred in the world this century, with the Bulmores discussing what has happened in their lifetime, from the Wright brothers' flight to walks on the moon. Linda discusses the present and its special problems.

Truman Capote will write an original drama for NBC, "Uncle Sam's Hard Luck Hotel," a 90-minute affair dealing with a "halfway house" for convicts. This past season Capote has monitored a couple of documentaries about prison conditions.

Additions to the CBS staff for reporting National Football League games in the fall are former NFL stars Timmy Brown, Tommy Mason, Peter Retzlaff, Bart Starr and Wayne Walker.

ABC and host-master of ceremonies Monty Hall has reached a long-term production agreement for daytime, nighttime and late-night television programs. Hall's "Let's Make a Deal," now in its 10th daytime year, is included in the deal.

Screen Gems will create a 90-minute video movie based on the life of the late Pttsburgh baseball star, Roberto Clemente, idol of Puerto Rico who lost his life in an airplane crash Jan. 1 while on a mercy mission to earthquake-damaged Nicaragua. NBC will carry the show.

Barbra Strisand, who hasn't been on television for five years, will have a CBS one-hour special in 1973-74. The singer's last video stint was in 1968.

ABC will telecast on Dec. 17 the annual post-season college liberty Bowl football game from Mephis, Tenn. It also has set this game for 1974 and has an option on it for the following three years. On Dec. 29, ABC will telecast the Astro-Bluebonnet bowl game from Houston, Texas. The 1974 and 1975 editions of this contest also go to ABC.

Peter Graves will host the first offering of the MGM Family Network, a two-hour movie special of "The Yearling" which won eight Academy Awards nominations.

THE BBC'S ESCALATOR

The British Broadcasting Corp. (BBC) says it expects to be running 15 million pounds ($36,750,000) in the red by 1975.

"Inflation hits us just as hard as anybody else, if not harder," Charles Curran, the BBC's director-general, said at a luncheon. He said revenue was increasing from boosts in set license fees which provide the BBC's income and from the fact that more color sets, for which the fee is higher, are being sold.

"But it is as though we were continuously running up an escalator which is moving down," Curran said.

CHUCK BERRY, the veteran of rock 'n' roll, makes a guest appearance on "The Helen Reddy Show" this Thursday at 8 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4. It's the summer replacement series for Flip Wilson.

The Dutch Version Of Johnny Carson

AMSTERDAM (UPI) — The sight-seeing boat was pulling away from its pier on the canal when Dutch passengers spotted a man in a blue sweater at a window of the terrace restaurant.

Immediately a forest of arms shot up, fists clenched, a gesture that caused a foreign tourist in the restaurant to fumble his fork in the belief he was witnessing some kind of political solidarity demonstration.

But the salute was a tribute from television viewers to Willem Duys.

DUYS RETURNED the signal that is code all over the Netherlands and Belgium for "Voor Mijn Viust Weg", literally "From My Fist" but better translated into English as "Off the Cuff", the name of the highest-rated television show in the Low Countries.

Bill Duys (pronounced Daish) doesn't look like show business. Duys once visited the inspiration for his show, the American television star Johnny Carson, in New York and Carson said: "You on TV with that face? Don't kid me."

Duys, 45, wears a rumpled suit ("I have the reputation of being the worst dressed man in Holland)' and a rough-hewn countenance, thinning brown hair, a strong nose and a surprising, warm smile. He is powerfully built, as befits a former all-around athlete who was good enough to reach the semi-finals of the national tennis championships.

BILL DUYS operates in a country with two television channels and 10 million sets (plus a couple of million eavesdroppers in Belgium) and claims 70 per cent of the viewing audience.

His income tops 400,000 guilders ($138,000) a year from television, a record production company and various offshoots of "Off the Cuff". Duys does it all with his 90-minute talk-and-guest-star show that is so completely ad lib he puts it all together in only two hours of preparation.

Unlike Carson, Duys says he has "no armies of gag writers, researchers, secretaries, press agents."

"I CAN'T TELL a joke or deliver a comedy line," he says. "I don't have star quality."

"What about all those fans' clenched fists, then?

"I'm sincere," he says. "Maybe that's it. Duke Ellington once gave me advice that I try to live by — whatever you are or whatever you do, you must always perform and behave fittingly."

Duys thinks that, as astonished as he is to find himself a celebrity, there was a certain inevitability about it all. His father, one of the founders of the Dutch Bach Society, and his mother, a fine pianist, reared six musical sons who used to fight for practice time at the piano. His father was also an amateur actor.

"WHAT I WANTED to do was a type of Carson show. That is, I would have guests, but I would try to make everything more spontaneous," Duys said.

"We went on the air Nov. 1, 1963. My producer refused to tell me who my guests were going to be. I never went near the studio at all that day.

"The first guest came on and said she was a parachute jumper. I asked her for a demonstration. 'How?' she said. I said, 'Jump off that table'. She did and that set the tone of 'Off the Cuff'.

"After a while no second guest came from the wings. My producer had decided to test what I would do in an emergency. I said 'I think I'll play the piano,' and I did. Then I said I was going to thank my mother. I got her on the phone. She scolded me in front of the nation. She said: 'You shouldn't drink before the show. Your tie is awful. Your suit is creased. Why didn't you go to the barber!'

"WE RAN FOR two and a half hours that night. Forty minutes before we finished the critic of a newspaper telephoned and praised the show to pieces."

Duys' show evolved into a skillful melange of international show business personalities, government figures, pretty faces, sport champions, everyday folk and animals.

Stars Ryan and Tatum O'Neal:
What's a Little Family War When There's a Movie to Make?

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR CURT GOWDY, television sportscaster

If you had your way, what changes would you make in football?—Laurene Mills, Hobart, Ind.

● Football should be football, not some English soccer kicker running out in a tuxedo and kicking three points. I would have football's extra-point kick abolished. Instead, have the ball put on the three-yard line with the option of running or passing for the point-after-touchdown. And I'd have kickoffs moved back to the 30-yard line, so we can see the ball run back. Guys like Jan Stenerud are kicking it into the end zone every time. The same goes for punt returns. Linemen on the punting team shouldn't be able to leave the line of scrimmage until the ball is kicked.

FOR HOPE LANGE

Dick Van Dyke always seems so good-natured and friendly. How is he to work with?—B. K., San Gabriel, Calif.

● Dick is one of the loveliest, most unegotistical, most talented men I know. If I have a gripe, it is that Dick is too patient. If something is not right, he holds back on saying anything. He struggles on and on, trying to make it work out. Then, just before we shoot, there are a lot of changes, which add extra pressure before a show.

FOR SEN. CHARLES H. PERCY (R-Ill.)

With the price of gold going up and up, what is the Government doing with its holdings?—A. Penn, St. Joseph, Mo.

● The U.S. holds 276 million ounces of gold. So on paper, we're the biggest gainer from the wild speculation. But do you imagine that the price would stay at $120 an ounce if the U.S. sold any of its gold? We should break the backs of the gold speculators by selling some of our gold stocks.

FOR ALISTAIR COOKE, journalist and TV host

FOR MRS. PAT NIXON

Why do you always wear long-sleeved dresses or suits?—Mrs. W. E. Nothwehr, Albert Lea, Minn.

● I prefer the look of elegance of a long sleeve. For my official duties, I find that suits are the most practical and comfortable style of clothes to wear. But I do have daytime and evening wear with short sleeves and I like to relax in pants outfits. I also wear slacks at Camp David and at home in San Clemente.

FOR VALERIE HARPER,
Rhoda Morganstern of the "Mary Tyler Moore Show"

You play a Jewish lady on the "Mary Tyler Moore Show." Are you Jewish?—N. J., Hackensack, N.J.

● No, my mother's maiden name was McConnell. Her ancestors are Canadian, Irish, Scotch and Welsh. And on the Harper side, they are French, English and, according to my sister, American Indian. But I think her addition of American Indian came after she saw Jeff Chandler (who was Jewish) play Cochise.

FOR MICHAEL CAINE, star of "Sleuth"

In the cops and robbers movies you've been in you've run around and been generally athletic. Are you good at athletics?—F. L. Worth, Laramie, Wyo.

● I never do any sports. I completely and utterly lack any sense whatsoever of competition — professionally, socially, privately. So there's no point in my competing in anything. I'll tell you what I do like—pin tables (pinball machines, you call them here in America). I'm very good at that — up to Olympic standards, if they ever put pinball in the Olympics.

FOR SYBIL LEEK

● It's something like a birthmark, appearing on the shoulder or the lumbar region of the back. It's usually raised, and quite small, but is often recognizable as a distinct object, such as the foot of a bird, or two fish. Families of witches often have the same witch mark in each generation, in the same place on the body.

FOR JANET LEIGH

I read the other day that your two children from your marriage to Tony Curtis were living with him and his wife instead of with you. Why?—Penelope Tolker, St. Louis, Mo.

● We have two daughters, Kelly, 16, and Jamey, 14½. Kelly has never really lived with her dad, and she wanted to stay with him for a while. So she is now with Tony and his wife. For how long, I don't know. She may come back and stay with my husband and me, or she may want to be on her own. But Jamey is living with me.

FOR HERMAN RAUCHER, author

In your book, "Summer of '42," were Hermie's experiences related to your own? If not, how did you get the idea for the book?—Tom Lawrence, New Albany, Ind.

● "Summer of '42" was totally autobiographical, written primarily in memory of my good friend, Oscy, who was killed in Korea on my 24th birthday. The screenplay was written first, in two weeks, as pure catharsis. With the film finished, Warner Bros. suggested that I write a book to help promote the film. The book's release preceded that of the film and it became a best seller. Now, with the success of both book and film, I have a new guilt to juggle—for all of it was the indirect result of the death of a very brave and beautiful and nuttily marvelous friend.

Instead, have the ball put on the three-yard line with the option of running or passing for the point-after-touchdown. And I'd have kickoffs moved back to the 30-yard line, so we can see the ball run back. Guys like Jan Stenerud are kicking it into the end zone every time. The same goes for punt returns. Linemen on the punting team shouldn't be able to leave the line of scrimmage until the ball is kicked.

FOR HOPE LANGE

Dick Van Dyke always seems so good-natured and friendly. How is he to work with?—B. K., San Gabriel, Calif.

● Dick is one of the loveliest, most unegotistical, most talented men I know. If I have a gripe, it is that Dick is too patient. If something is not right, he holds back on saying anything. He struggles on and on, trying to make it work out. Then, just before we shoot, there are a lot of changes, which add extra pressure before a show.

FOR SEN. CHARLES H. PERCY (R-Ill.)

With the price of gold going up and up, what is the Government doing with its holdings?—A. Penn, St. Joseph, Mo.

● The U.S. holds 276 million ounces of gold. So on paper, we're the biggest gainer from the wild speculation. But do you imagine that the price would stay at $120 an ounce if the U.S. sold any of its gold? We should break the backs of the gold speculators by selling some of our gold stocks.

FOR ALISTAIR COOKE, journalist and TV host

FOR MRS. PAT NIXON

● I prefer the look of elegance of a long sleeve. For my official duties, I find that suits are the most practical and comfortable style of clothes to wear. But I do have daytime and evening wear with short sleeves and I like to relax in pants outfits. I also wear slacks at Camp David and at home in San Clemente.

FOR VALERIE HARPER,
Rhoda Morganstern of the "Mary Tyler Moore Show"

You play a Jewish lady on the "Mary Tyler Moore Show." Are you Jewish?—N. J., Hackensack, N.J.

● No, my mother's maiden name was McConnell. Her ancestors are Canadian, Irish, Scotch and Welsh. And on the Harper side, they are French, English and, according to my sister, American Indian. But I think her addition of American Indian came after she saw Jeff Chandler (who was Jewish) play Cochise.

FOR MICHAEL CAINE, star of "Sleuth"

In the cops and robbers movies you've been in you've run around and been generally athletic. Are you good at athletics?—F. L. Worth, Laramie, Wyo.

● I never do any sports. I completely and utterly lack any sense whatsoever of competition — professionally, socially, privately. So there's no point in my competing in anything. I'll tell you what I do like—pin tables (pinball machines, you call them here in America). I'm very good at that — up to Olympic standards, if they ever put pinball in the Olympics.

FOR SYBIL LEEK

● It's something like a birthmark, appearing on the shoulder or the lumbar region of the back. It's usually raised, and quite small, but is often recognizable as a distinct object, such as the foot of a bird, or two fish. Families of witches often have the same witch mark in each generation, in the same place on the body.

FOR JANET LEIGH

I read the other day that your two children from your marriage to Tony Curtis were living with him and his wife instead of with you. Why?—Penelope Tolker, St. Louis, Mo.

● We have two daughters, Kelly, 16, and Jamey, 14½. Kelly has never really lived with her dad, and she wanted to stay with him for a while. So she is now with Tony and his wife. For how long, I don't know. She may come back and stay with my husband and me, or she may want to be on her own. But Jamey is living with me.

FOR HERMAN RAUCHER, author

In your book, "Summer of '42," were Hermie's experiences related to your own? If not, how did you get the idea for the book?—Tom Lawrence, New Albany, Ind.

● "Summer of '42" was totally autobiographical, written primarily in memory of my good friend, Oscy, who was killed in Korea on my 24th birthday. The screenplay was written first, in two weeks, as pure catharsis. With the film finished, Warner Bros. suggested that I write a book to help promote the film. The book's release preceded that of the film and it became a best seller. Now, with the success of both book and film, I have a new guilt to juggle—for all of it was the indirect result of the death of a very brave and beautiful and nuttily marvelous friend.

Bob Roberts is the entertainment director at one condominium. "People come to Florida to live, not to die," he says.

Mrs. Elanda Smith is the largest realtor in Hallandale. She feels today's young families "prefer clustered living."

The Buy-Your-Own Apartment Boom: Facts and People Behind "the Dream"

The condominium phenomenon is sweeping the country, of course, but on that glittering South Florida strip called the Gold Coast, it is staggering, astonishing, amazing—all the adjectives an adman can assemble. And even these fall short of the gasps that greet the endless rows of huge stone towers as tourists drive south on Highway A1A between Palm Beach and Hollywood, Fla.

There are high-rises, waterfront mid-rises, golf-course complexes with garden apartments, villas and town houses—all being sold almost as quickly as they are built. The buyers are retirees, semi-retirees and "snowbirds," a Florida word for people who have decided to ditch snowbound hometowns for a place in the sun.

One president of a booming condominium complex, Larry Wilkov, agrees wholeheartedly that Florida is the world capital of condominium construction, and well he might. His complex, Hemispheres in Hallandale, has 1,300 apartments and more than 4,000 residents.

"This is a city in itself," he says. "We have middle-aged working people, retirees and just people who find our apartments less costly than maintaining a home. Oceanfront land is too costly for one-family homes. Condominiums put oceanfront living within the means of the average person."

But how average is average? The prices start at $12,000 for a one-bedroom apartment that certainly will not face the ocean. Such apartments are sold, for the most part, to senior citizens of moderate means. (Studio apartments simply don't exist.) For oceanfront living, buyers have to set their sights at $60,000 or above—and they can pay as much as $150,000 for a three-bedroom apartment in one of the newer luxury buildings. The average price is probably $29,000 to $39,000 for an apartment facing the Intracoastal Waterway.

Semi-retirees and snowbirds are touted on the economic advantage of buying a second home for vacation use, with a view to eventual permanent residence. Security is also sold as an advantage of "clustered" condominium living.

But everything isn't always peaches and cream. Not right away, at least. A South Florida psychiatrist, Dr. Gilbert H. Berken, says: "These retirees are separating from their total social background, from their positions of power in business and from a lifetime of accumulated interests. They are basically a pioneering people making a total break with the past for a better way of life.

"The first six months to a year is the critical period in adapting to the tremendous change. Most accept it, but many are not flexible and many fail. No matter how beautiful or how costly the condominium, they cannot enjoy it.

"Condominiums are great equalizers. For instance, an ex-truck driver and an ex-lawyer become neighbors joined in cooperative ownership of a property. Titles become unimportant. But condominium living does have a certain degree of regimentation that some individualists can't tolerate."

A new social life is also part of the package when retirees buy into the condominium concept. For these new buildings quickly establish a form of self-government, form their own social clubs and entertainment committees. Each building caters to the emotional needs for companionship and provides such things as art, craft and language classes; cookouts and cocktail parties; golf, fishing and shuffleboard tournaments; movies, lectures and nonstop card-playing.

In the giant complexes, professional entertainment directors schedule activities all day, seven days a week, all of which led one resident to observe: "We're living in an adult camp."

But Think Twice Before You "Come on Down"!

Florida, arch-rival of Southern California and for years the symbol of Chamber of Commerce boosterism, is finally having second thoughts. The "Come on down!" commercials have abated. Occasionally, the mood is also one of "Go on back!"

Why? Consider these facts:

- Florida's population has nearly tripled in 25 years. One-third of that population lives in the strip from Palm Beach to Fort Lauderdale to Miami. And people are continuing to pour into Florida—at the staggering rate of 3,000 to 4,000 a day!
- Urban ills are becoming a nightmare. During one week last spring, Dade County experienced a typhoid outbreak at a migrant-labor camp, a contaminated-water scare at Miami Beach, and a huge fish kill in Biscayne Bay. Power failures on successive days blacked out most of Miami.
- Construction has taken place at a mind-boggling rate. Building permits in Broward County (Hollywood and Fort Lauderdale) rose from $600 million in 1970 to about a billion dollars in 1972. Last year in Dade County, new-building permits were obtained for 41,000 apartment units and 11,000 single-family dwellings.

swimming meets. The Robertses are not content with helping only those who come to them. "This area is full of widows who are recluses. They are afraid of their new existence, but we seek them out. We involve them in activities," Roberts says. "We even have a special club for unattached women. If anyone feels neglected or alone, it has to be his own fault."

It was Roberts who introduced big-time show business into the "condominium circuit." "For a $2.50 ticket we bring names into our own theater," he says. "All people have to do is walk out of their apartments into our oceanfront auditorium. No traffic or parking worries." Some of the stars he helped bring in are Jack Carter, Dick Shawn, Marty Allen, Jan Murray, Allan Jones, Henny Youngman and Cab Calloway.

the senior-citizen group so that proper referral can be made," says psychiatrist Dr. Berken. Dr. Berken conducts senior-citizen rap sessions that he uses as an inexpensive method of therapy. Dr. Berken believes that the life-style of people in a condominium is determined by their skill in selecting their own building—choosing an environment conducive to their enjoyment. "They have entered into a micro-community with its own government and social activities," he says. "A lot has to do with the quality of leadership that determines the function of the condominium."

The condominium boom started about eight years ago, in 1965. Toward the end of 1972, there were about 85,000 occupied units between Broward and Palm Beach counties, with hundreds more in various stages of planning and construction. According to the Florida Condominium Commission, there are more than 175,000 units in the state, most of them in Dade County (Miami) and Broward County (Fort Lauderdale).

Despite higher construction costs, apartments, villas and town houses are being snapped up at incredible dollar volume — particularly in the country club-golf course concepts. Fort Lauderdale's Inverrary, home of the Jackie Gleason Golf Classic, had a dollar sales volume of $15.2 million in 1972. Palm Aire Country and Golf Club in Pompano Beach had $12 million in sales. These two finished the year at the head of the pack.

Hallandale's largest realtor is Elanda Smith, and she is a specialist in condominium resales. People used to buy apartments as an investment, she says. "But now people want to be able to travel, to close their apartment doors and not worry. Also, there are the young singles or young families who can put ten percent down and then make monthly payments that don't exceed what they ordinarily would pay anyway for rent. Young families prefer clustered living. They prefer belonging to a cultural and social group, rather than just being a house number on a street."

While young families can buy condominiums with ten percent down, many older buyers prefer to pay all cash. Mrs. Smith says it's common for a buyer in the 70-year bracket to secure a 25-year mortgage, mostly on lower and medium-priced units. "But the big-money buyers often come in with all cash."

Is Summer Relaxation Making You Look Older?

For months you looked forward to the relaxation of summer. Swimming and picnicking with the children. Weekend trips with your husband. Lying in the sun to unwind totally, body and soul. The kind of peace and relative quiet that would help you slow down a little from life's hectic pace and enjoy yourself with your family. And of course, you hoped that summer relaxation would show itself in your appearance, making you look less harried and thus a little younger.

Instead, you find that summer is taking its toll. The sun, the wind-blown sand, the sudden changes of temperature as you go from searing sun to air-conditioned restaurants and stores, all are causing complexion dryness. The dryness, which accents lines and wrinkles, can make you look decidedly older. Just exactly the opposite result of what you hoped from summer's relaxation.

Many young-looking women in countries around the world have discovered that they cannot get through the summer beautifully without their beauty secret. This summer, share their secret, a unique beauty blend containing tropical moisturizing oils and natural moisture. This world-famous fluid is known in the United States as Oil of Olay moisturizing lotion. The remarkable blend penetrates the surface layer of the skin quickly. There it works with nature to ease away the dryness that can make you look older, and helps maintain the vital oil-moisture balance, an essential element needed for skin to look as young as possible. Oil of Olay softens and smooths summer-ravaged skin, helping to replace the natural moistness robbed by summer weather. The remarkable beauty blend sets up a protective barrier to keep nature's own moisture from being stolen by harsh summer weather.

During most of the year, a morning and night application of Oil of Olay is enough to keep your skin younger-looking. But during the summer months, you may find your skin needs more frequent pampering. Whenever your complexion feels dry or taut or slightly rough to the touch, lavish on extra Oil of Olay, no matter what the time of day or night.

Never forget to apply the unique beauty blend before you go to bed each night, to do its lovely work quietly for hours while you sleep. And again in the morning, whether or not you wear makeup. As a makeup base, Oil of Olay leaves no sticky after-feel, so your cosmetics go on smoothly, without streaking or discoloring. And even if you prefer to go barefaced in the summer, skin-loving Oil of Olay leaves your skin with a moist glow as it pampers your complexion for hours. You will find this world-renowned beauty blend at your drugstore.

Summer Beauty Hints

After sun-bathing, take a tepid tub to remove your sun-protective lotion. Then generously smooth on Oil of Olay, paying particular attention to those areas most easily dried out by the sun—the skin around your eyes and mouth.

* * *

Even if you have been an Oil of Olay® user throughout the year, remember that more of your skin is exposed to the weather during these summer months. Soothe on the beauty blend wherever low-cut dresses, shorter sleeves and sports clothes have left your delicate skin naked to the ravages of summer dryness.

Ryan O'Neal and His Child-Star Daughter Tatum:

"We've Had Our War... But Now It's Over"

Steve Schapiro/Transworld Features

Ryan O'Neal (with Tatum): "I don't need to be in 'Cosmopolitan.' Even the 'Life' interview turned out badly. They called me a brash young man. And when I did a piece for 'Esquire,' they killed me all over again. I don't really know why I sit here with you."

When I arrived at his two-story beach house, Ryan O'Neal was playing Frisbee with a friend. He was in a good mood. The night before I had seen his latest film, "Paper Moon," in which he gave the best performance of his career—yet was sometimes upstaged by his nine-year-old daughter Tatum.

FAMILY WEEKLY: Did you suggest that your daughter be in the film with you?

RYAN: No. Peter [director Peter Bogdanovich] suggested it. I wasn't at all sure she should do it. First of all, I was worried that she wouldn't do a good job. It was the first thing she's ever done. She'd only been on one film set—when I did "Peyton Place" years ago. I'd intentionally kept her away from sets until then. Also, if she hadn't done a good job it would have been a reflection on me since she's my daughter.

FW: What effect did it have on your relationship with her?

RYAN: We had a terrific war on our hands, and I'm glad it's over. Like she couldn't remember her lines—when she didn't want to remember them. And she had no discipline whatsoever. When we did night shooting, she wanted to go to sleep instead. I'd tell her she couldn't sleep, she'd have to do that during the day. And she'd say, "Well, I can't sleep during the day because it's light outside!" And I'd say, "Here, drink some coffee. That'll keep you awake."

FW: What was her biggest problem?

RYAN: Some last-minute changes that had to be made in the script. There's a scene where she stands at the desk and picks up a box of candy. A couple of things were changed in it. Initially she was supposed to ask for Dentyne chewing gum, but because we couldn't get any it was changed to Juicy Fruit. And the girl's hair wasn't blond, it was

FAMILY WEEKLY: Did you suggest that your daughter be in the film with you?

RYAN: No. Peter [director Peter Bogdanovich] suggested it. I wasn't at all sure she should do it. First of all, I was worried that she wouldn't do a good job. It was the first thing she's ever done. She'd only been on one film set—when I did "Peyton Place" years ago. I'd intentionally kept her away from sets until then. Also, if she hadn't done a good job it would have been a reflection on me since she's my daughter.

FW: What effect did it have on your relationship with her?

RYAN: We had a terrific war on our hands, and I'm glad it's over. Like she couldn't remember her lines—when she didn't want to remember them. And she had no discipline whatsoever. When we did night shooting, she wanted to go to sleep instead. I'd tell her she couldn't sleep, she'd have to do that during the day. And she'd say, "Well, I can't sleep during the day because it's light outside!" And I'd say, "Here, drink some coffee. That'll keep you awake."

FW: What was her biggest problem?

RYAN: Some last-minute changes that had to be made in the script. There's a scene where she stands at the desk and picks up a box of candy. A couple of things were changed in it. Initially she was supposed to ask for Dentyne chewing gum, but because we couldn't get any it was changed to Juicy Fruit. And the girl's hair wasn't blond, it was

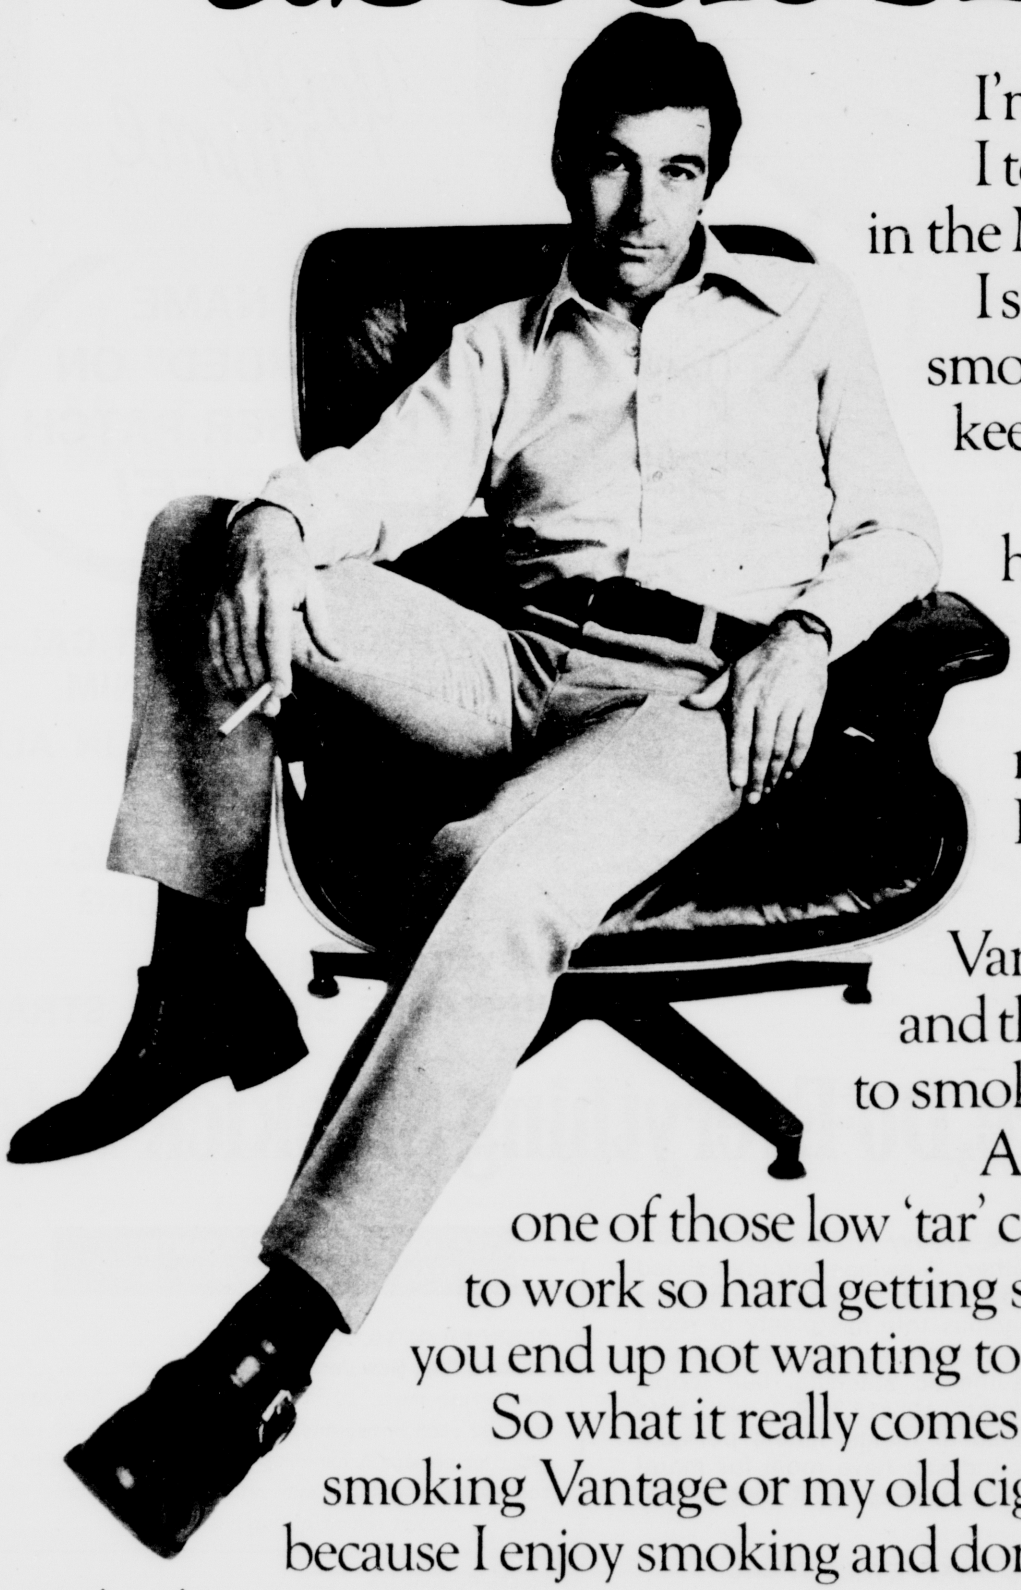
What I'm doing about smoking.



I'm smoking Vantage.

I took up smoking more than 15 years ago in the Marine Corps.

I started smoking then because I wanted to. I smoke now because I want to. And I intend to keep on smoking as long as I want to.

But that doesn't make me bury my head in the sand and ignore the stuff in the papers about smoking.

My attitude is, OK, if high 'tar' and nicotine cigarettes are a concern to me, I'd better do something about it.

So I did. I started to smoke Vantage.

Vantage gives me the flavor of my old brand, and that takes some doing, because what I used to smoke was way up there in 'tar' and nicotine.

And Vantage is not one of those low 'tar' cigarettes you have to work so hard getting some taste out of, you end up not wanting to smoke it.

So what it really comes down to for me is smoking Vantage or my old cigarettes, because I enjoy smoking and don't want to give it up.

Ryan O'Neal

red, and she had to comment on it. For this particular scene we had to do 44 takes. There was another scene that ran for seven pages and had to be done in one take because we were riding in a car. We had to do that one over and over again.

FW: How do you feel about some critics saying Tatum stole the picture?

RYAN: She's an O'Neal. If the picture is stolen by an O'Neal, that's good.

FW: Has the film changed Tatum in any way?

RYAN: Yes, it's made her more poised.

FW: But do you find her harder to handle?

RYAN: On the contrary. I find her easier to handle because, as I said, we've been through our war together.

FW: You've been married twice, to two actresses. Do you think it is possible for an actress and an actor to be married?

RYAN: Of course. I was.

FW: But it didn't last, did it?

RYAN: How long is a marriage supposed to last? Mine lasted four years. I think that's pretty good. Besides, it wasn't the career pressures that broke it up. If anything, careers will enhance a marriage.

FW: Was there any problem because your wives' careers moved up faster than yours did when you were married?

FW: The advantages of having done "Love Story" are obvious. Were there any disadvantages?

FW: No complaints?

RYAN: Well, I didn't get paid very much: $25,000. And that was after I got $125,000 for the previous picture. Actually, I don't think anybody realized that my character in "Love Story" was just an extension of Rodney Harrington in "Peyton Place."

FW: After you did "Love Story," Bob Hope introduced you to the Academy Award audience as "Hollywood's Leading Boy Actor." Did you mind?

RYAN: I hated it. I like Hope, but I resented it because I worked hard on the Academy Award show.

FW: Most leading men today have a kind of rugged look. Do you think your handsomeness is a detriment?

RYAN: I don't like the way I look. And I've lost a lot of critics because of my looks. Pauline Kael won't like me no matter what I do. When she reviewed "The Thief Who Came to Dinner," she singled me out especially for criticism. She said I looked too easy, too relaxed for someone of my age, that I had too much confidence in myself.

FW: Do you?

RYAN: Well [grinning] . . . she may be right.

FW: Why do you dislike interviews?

RYAN: They don't turn me on because they don't turn out well. When "Peyton Place" was still on the air, the studio lined up innumerable interviews. I did them all. Even the fan magazines. I allowed the writers and photographers into my home. And some of the stuff that came out was terrible! I felt the only way to avoid it was to stop giving interviews. I don't need to be in "Cosmopolitan." Even the "Life" interview turned out badly. They called me a brash young man. And when I did a piece for "Esquire," they killed me all over again. I don't really know why I sit here with you.

FW: Why do you?

RYAN: To get Steve [publicist Steve Jaffe] off my back.

RYAN: No, I am brash and aggressive. Sometimes hostile.

FW: How good a fighter are you?

RYAN: Not bad. Except I once boxed Burt Reynolds. He hit me so hard that one of my ears almost fell off. Then I fought with Joe Frazier once, and he hit me so hard both of my ears almost fell off. Someday I'd like to do a fight story in a picture. In fact, we're working on one.

FW: Talking about Burt, would you pose in the nude like he did?

RYAN: No, I wouldn't. They asked me. Actually they asked Clint Eastwood first, then me, then Burt. But it wouldn't have worked for me. It did for Burt. His expression was just right. Like it was all a joke. It did a lot for him.

AMAZING NEW ISOMETRIC BEAUTY BAND

LIFTS YEARS OFF YOUR FACE!

These photographs are completely unretouched.

Harper's Bazaar

Lauded by Harper's Bazaar, "Preserving you . . . a new device that helps you attain a longer lasting youthful look . . ."

How would you like to give yourself an instant face lift . . . see sagging skin, lines around your mouth, bags under the eyes and telltale crows feet smooth out as if some miracle of youth had suddenly touched your face? Sound too good to be true? Not at all! Because Mark Traynor, the man behind a thousand beautiful faces, has created a real beauty coup — an isometric beauty band you can wear all day . . . or just a few minutes before bedtime . . . that literally lifts your face . . . restores that smooth youthful look and at the same time helps hold muscles and tissues so that your face looks younger and firmer.

Wear the look of youth as you build back beauty into your features

The Isometric Beauty Band, developed by one of today's most famous TV Makeup artists, works two ways: as a beauty lift, and as a facial exerciser. When you wear it during the day it firms up facial muscles, takes up the slack in the contours of your face, widens your eyes, and gives your face a zesty, vibrant look.

A Simple Band of Beauty that Works Isometrically

It's really all so simple! You merely slip it on, fit it to your head size, then wear it as a stylish headband. Or you can wear it under a wig! From the moment you put it on, it begins to work its magic. Wearing the band draws the facial muscles upward smoothing out the contours of the face. Utterly amazing results will be yours from the moment you put it on.

MARK TRAYNOR THE NAME BEHIND THE FACE

If you've ever envied that glowing look of beauty on the faces of models who grace such magazines as Harper's Bazaar, Seventeen, Town and Country and many, many more, then you're already familiar with the work of Mark Traynor, the man behind a thousand and one beautiful faces.

Beauty expert and make-up man to Hollywood Stars, models, TV personalities, Mark himself has appeared many times on the Tonight Show, Merv Griffin, David Frost discussing his beauty secrets and how he has brought almost instant youth and beauty to thousands with his incredible techniques such as his Temporary Face Lift and now his Beauty Band. Now Mark Traynor wants you to enjoy the fruits of his talents, and see for yourself how his miraculous Beauty Band can give you the look of the Stars.

No wonder such beauty bibles as Harper's Bazaar and others have seen fit to talk about Mark Traynor and his accomplishments with little less than awe. The results of his devices are absolutely incredible. And now you, too, can take advantage of his knowledge and experience in working with some of the most beautiful women in the world. If your mirror tells you that the shadows of age are clouding your looks, it's time to make this dramatic step back toward youthful beauty . . . order your Mark Traynor Isometric Beauty Band, now, only $9.95.

Used in conjunction with the enclosed exercise booklet.

Just look at this great selection of recorded entertainment — available in your choice of records or tapes! Just mail the handy application form together with your check or money order for $1.97 to order your 11 stereo tapes or records (be sure to indicate whether you want cartridges, cassettes, reel tapes or records). In exchange . . .

You agree to buy just eight more selections (at regular Club prices) in the coming two years . . . and you may cancel your membership at any time after doing so.

Your own charge account will be opened upon enrollment . . . and the selections you order as a member will be mailed and billed at the regular Club prices: cartridges and cassettes, $6.98; reel tapes, $7.98; records, $4.98 or $5.98 . . . plus processing and postage. (Occasional special selections may be somewhat higher.)

You may accept or reject selections as follows: every four weeks you will receive a new copy of the Club's music magazine which describes the regular selection for each musical interest . . . plus hundreds of alternate selections from every field of music. (Since you'll receive 13 informative magazines a year, you'll always be up-to-date on the most current hits.)

. . . if you do not want any selection offered, just mail the response card provided by the date specified (you'll have at least ten days in which to make your decision)

. . . if you want only the regular selection for your musical interest, you need do nothing — it will be shipped to you automatically (naturally, you may return the regular selection at our expense and for full credit if you did not have at least ten days in which to decide)

. . . if you want any of the other selections offered, just order them on the response card and mail it by the date specified

. . . and about four times a year, we will also offer some special selections (usually at a discount off regular Club prices), which you may reject by mailing the special dated form provided . . . or accept by simply doing nothing.

You'll be eligible for the Club's bonus plan upon completing your enrollment agreement — a plan which enables you to save at least 33% on all your future purchases. This is the most convenient way possible to build a record or tape library at the greatest savings possible — so act now!

Yes, You Can Live Alone Without Being Lonely (I Know, Because I'm Doing Just That)

By Harriet La Barre

"It is... harder to be lonely when you're curled up cozily in a soft chair drinking tea out of a Wedgwood cup ($2.50 secondhand) ...than if you're standing in the kitchen gloomily sipping out of a chipped mug...."

"Tell me," the radio interviewer in Miami asks, "is there a best way to get rid of loneliness?" And in Boston, a TV interviewer says, "What about when you come home, and there you are, looking at four walls?" And in Chicago: "You mean you're never screamingly lonely?"

They all ask. They ask because I am a widow who's been living alone ever since my husband died of a heart attack seven years ago, and because I wrote a book about how to live alone successfully, happily.

Lots of people assume that loneliness has to go with living alone, the way bread goes with butter. And true enough, I know many divorcees, widows, separated people and other live-aloners who are miserable: This divorced friend stuffs herself at the refrigerator; that separated friend escapes into depressing little sexual adventures. Plenty of live-aloners brood out of windows on sunny Sundays, feeling helplessly alone. Dozens. And so, for a while, did I.

But somewhere around the spring of 1967, that struck me as pretty ridiculous—a waste, what with all the possibilities of enjoyable living. Was all that loneliness really necessary? I wanted to become part of the river again, instead of watching from the banks. And I did. So now, "No," I say to the interviewer, "I'm not lonely because...." Because what?

Because, for one thing, I stopped waiting around to be asked to dinner occasionally by married friends who viewed me as a third wheel, an outsider. Instead, I deliberately formed my own enjoyable group of friends: single friends, men and women, to share a meal with, go to movies with, walk with, share interests with. Let the married couples be the outsiders!

I knew a few single people, but only casually. Meeting people wasn't difficult. I met plenty at the magazine where I then worked; and I discovered that if you take a course in something that interests you—whether poetry, Chinese cooking with a wok, or politics—you can't help but meet people who are on your particular wavelength. But making friends was harder. I found I had to take the initiative—most people would rather die than admit they don't have bushels of friends. I didn't want to admit it either. But I did take the first step: I entertained people.

The very word, entertaining, was a chiller—until I realized that giving new acquaintances a cup of tea was "entertaining" them; and that if you added a tunafish sandwich and it was on Saturday noon, you'd given them lunch—which is nice to do before a movie, and not that expensive. I finally worked up to inviting a crowd of ten to my 3½-room apartment. They were all people I honestly liked—why ask anybody else? The hardest thing was to stop worrying that people might decline—but I discovered that they're delighted to come. I also found they're happy with spaghetti and inexpensive wine. Or chili, crusty bread and beer. It's the companionship, not the food, that people come for. And they, in turn, invite me back.

Holidays were a problem. Will I spend Christmas alone? was a blood-freezer. So I established a rule: If nobody invites me anywhere by December 5, I invite eight or ten single people for a Christmas Day buffet.

Empty weekends have been another menace. But the secret of happy weekends, I learned, was simple: Plan activities ahead. That's vital. So for a dollar I bought a calendar with the whole month on each page, and I began making dates and plans with friends for weekends ahead.

Since I'm the type who can turn into a jellyfish if I don't have the backbone of a structured day, I also schedule daily activities: so many hours for work, so many for a personal study program. I even schedule hours for lazy, luxurious grooming. With a structured day like that, it's almost impossible to be lonely.

Harriet La Barre is the author of "A Life of Your Own" (McKay, $6.95). She is familiar to FAMILY WEEKLY readers as the author of the column "The Diet Watch."

But I also prize aloneness: the privacy to reflect, to listen to music, to grow, to become. To have the simple joy of reading a book. I think it's a mistake to believe that aloneness must necessarily be loneliness and that you should do something to "take you out of yourself." Why not, instead, occasionally go deeper into yourself? Sophisticated aloneness is what I'm talking about; it's even good to have a project like learning a language or to appreciate different kinds of architecture. In my case, my interest this season is Greek mythology. Time and privacy are vital to me because of it, and there are certain evenings that I defend fiercely as a tiger against telephone conversations, dates or other interruptions.

I also insist that it's harder to be lonely living in a home or apartment that has charm and comfort, a place that's a delight to come home to. Having such an apartment doesn't have to ruin your budget, either; you can create plenty of charm with paint, inexpensive fabric and contact wallpaper. One of my best anti-loneliness investments was deciding that only the most attractive living was good enough for me: this kind of luscious pink cushion, even if I had to make it myself; that thick bedroom rug, even if it took a billion (it seemed) green stamps to get it. It is also harder to be lonely when you're curled up cozily in a soft chair drinking tea out of a Wedgwood cup ($2.50 secondhand) and reading an absorbing book from the library, than if you're standing in the kitchen gloomily sipping out of a chipped mug and with only yesterday's newspaper at hand. Eating well, I find, in comfort and warmth, also does a lot to dissolve loneliness.

We all need love, and those warm friendships provide much of it. Meantime, having an interesting, aesthetically satisfying full life makes you more likely to attract the romance... and, when you do, to decide with better balance whether that particular love is worthwhile or not. So: "No," I say to the interviewer, "No, I am not lonely, because...."

No woman ever says no to Winchester.

Take a puff. Blow in her ear. And she'll follow you anywhere. Because one whiff of Winchester's sexy aroma tells her everything she ever wanted to know about you. But was afraid to ask. It tells her you're a man, but a man of taste. A taste for mildness. Lightness. She takes a puff. Winchester's filtered smoothness tells her it's not a cigarette. Not just another little cigar. It's a whole 'nother smoke. And she knows that you know: where there's smoke, there's fire.

Fleas: How to Kill Them Before They Get on Your Dog

Warm weather is flea time for Bowser. Inasmuch as fleas hop around a lot, depositing eggs in grass, Bowser's bed and your carpet, it isn't enough to deflea your pup. After you have taken care of him with either an Aerosol spray or a dip, go after the house and yard. It's the only way to break up the life cycle of Mr. Flea. Give Bowser's bed and/or doghouse a thorough housecleaning. After you have scrubbed and vacuumed, spray the whole area with a nontoxic insecticide. (Your veterinarian will give you the name of one that is safe around pets.) Be sure to get into the dark crevices—that's where the flea breeds. Your carpet may have to be cleaned professionally. Keep tabs on Bowser for a stray latecomer and spray frequently. Stand him on newspapers while you're applying the spray, comb out the dead fleas, and then burn the papers.

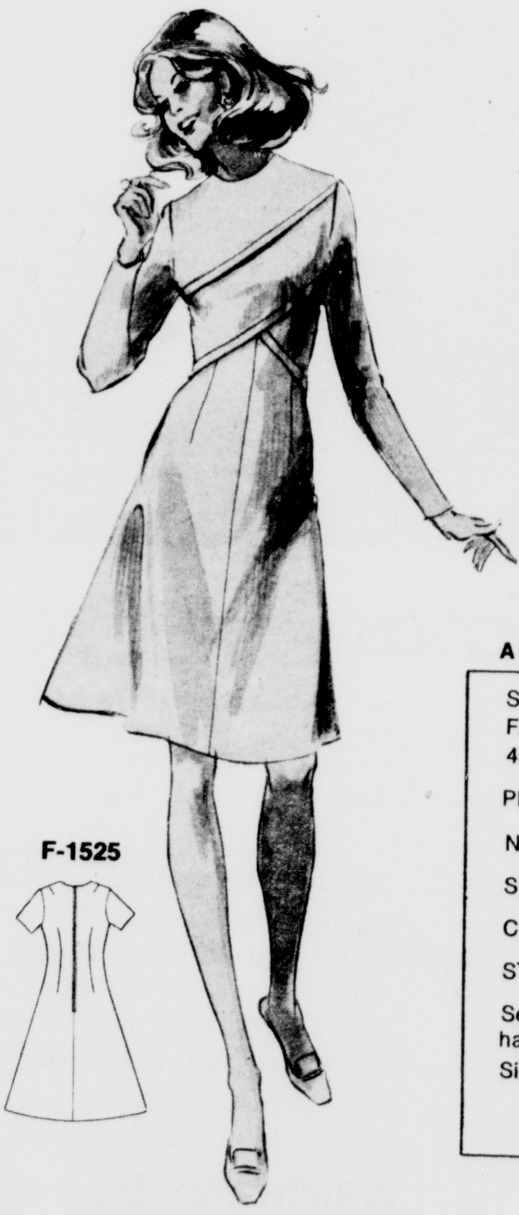
The "Now-Into-Fall" Dress



By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Here's a silhouette that could start your wardrobe for fall or, made in short sleeves, could do right now. It's an interesting dress with unusual front-bodice treatment accented with top-stitching. The pattern includes instructions for making a neck scarf, an additional fashion effect. Fabric suggestions: a cotton knit, polyester blend or lightweight woolen. Size 12 takes 3 yards of 44-inch fabric for long sleeves, 2⅝ yards for short sleeves, and ¾ of a yard for the scarf. Standard body measurements for size 12 are: Bust 34, Waist 25½, Hips 36.

A Light Rice Dish For Summer

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen prepares Florentine Rice Quiche. "I first tasted this recipe at a friend's home," she says. "She served it in thin wedges as an hors d'oeuvre. It was delicious! But I suspected that a larger wedge would make an excellent main dish for light meals. So I tried it on my family one hot evening—and it was a success!"

A tasty new way to serve spinach and rice is this recipe for Florentine Rice Quiche. Florentine always means "with spinach."

MARILYN'S MENU

Florentine Rice Quiche*
Crisp Bacon Strips
Baked Stuffed Tomatoes*
Tossed Green Salad
Hot Italian Crescent Rolls
Butter or Margarine
Cantaloupe Wedges with Sugar-Frosted Grapes*
Red-Wine Spritzers*
Iced Tea Milk

*Recipe given

FLORENTINE RICE QUICHE

4 eggs
2 cups cooked rice
⅔ cup finely grated Swiss cheese
1 pkg. (10 ozs.) chopped spinach
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ teaspoon salt
½ pt. (1 cup) cottage cheese
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
6 tablespoons heavy cream or evaporated milk
3 drops hot-pepper sauce
¼ teaspoon nutmeg

1. Preheat oven to 350° F. Grease a 9-inch pie pan.

2. In medium bowl beat 1 egg. Add rice and Swiss cheese; stir well. Spread rice mixture evenly in prepared pie pan, making a crust. Refrigerate until ready to fill and bake.

3. Cook spinach as directed on package. Pour into strainer and press out all liquid. Add butter to drained spinach, set aside.

4. In medium bowl beat remaining 3 eggs, stir in salt, cottage cheese, Parmesan cheese, heavy cream, hot-pepper sauce and nutmeg. When well blended, stir in spinach.

5. Pour filling into prepared rice crust. Bake for 30-35 minutes, or until firm.

6. To serve, cut into wedges.

Makes 6-8 servings

Make-ahead notes: 1. Prepare crust early in day and refrigerate until needed. 2. Prepare filling ahead and refrigerate until needed. 3. Assemble pie just before baking. We suggest this make-ahead method to help prevent a soggy crust.

BAKED STUFFED TOMATOES

¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup chopped onion
2 cups diced bread cubes
½ teaspoon basil leaves
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
4 medium tomatoes halved

1. Preheat oven to 350° F. In medium skillet heat butter until melted.

2. Sauté onion in butter about 5 minutes, until tender. Stir in bread cubes, basil, salt, pepper, mustard and parsley; mix well.

3. Top each tomato half with some of bread mixture.

4. Place tomato halves in shallow baking pan. Bake about 20 minutes, or until tomatoes are just fork-tender. Makes 8 halves

CANTALOUPE WEDGES WITH SUGAR-FROSTED GRAPES

1½ lbs. seedless green grapes
1 egg white, lightly beaten
¼ cup sugar
1 (2-3 lb.) cantaloupe
Mint sprigs

1. Cut grapes into small clusters with scissors.

2. Brush each cluster lightly with egg white then dip in sugar. Place on waxed paper and allow to dry about 30 minutes.

3. Cut cantaloupe in half, scoop out seeds. Cut into 6-8 wedges, remove skin.

4. Arrange a cantaloupe wedge and a cluster of grapes on each dessert plate. Garnish with mint sprigs. Makes 6-8 servings

RED-WINE SPRITZERS

Dry red wine
Club soda, chilled
Ice cubes

1. Fill tall glass with ice. Add wine and club soda to suit taste. A good starting rule is ⅓ wine, ⅔ soda. As desired servings

...Due to Inflammation and Infection. Also Get Prompt, Temporary Relief in Many Cases from Rectal Itching and Pain in Such Tissues.

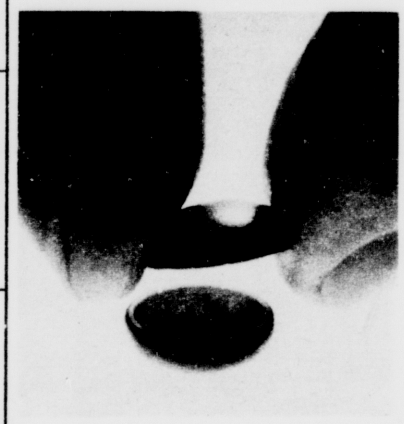
When inflammation, infection and swelling exist in hemorrhoidal tissues—it can be very painful for the sufferer. But there's an exclusive formulation which in many cases gives hours of relief from the burning itch and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues. It also helps shrink the swelling of such tissues. Sufferers are delighted at the way it acts so gently and is so soothing to sensitive tissues.

Tests by doctors on hundreds of patients reported similar successful results in many cases. And it was all done without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or stinging, smarting astringents of any kind.

You can obtain this same medication used in these tests at any drug counter. Its name is Preparation H. Preparation H® also lubricates to protect the inflamed, irritated surface area to help make bowel movements more comfortable. Be sure and try Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

The "two-together" laxative!

(It's made with smaller doses of two laxatives.)



Some single ingredient laxatives work on the "Sunday punch" theory. One big dose of a strong laxative that can knock your system for a loop.

Caroid & Bile Salts Tablets are made up of two separate laxatives that combine the surety of a strong laxative with the gentleness of a mild one.

Together they help ease you to regularity without sudden urgency upset.

And because the dosage is pre-measured, Caroid & Bile Salts Tablets are thorough and so predictable you can almost set your watch by them. Take two tablets at bedtime. Get a good night's sleep. And you can expect to be back on schedule in the morning.

Gentle Caroid & Bile Salts Tablets—the 'two-together' laxative—to help put your system back on schedule.

...Due to Inflammation and Infection. Also Get Prompt, Temporary Relief in Many Cases from Rectal Itching and Pain in Such Tissues.

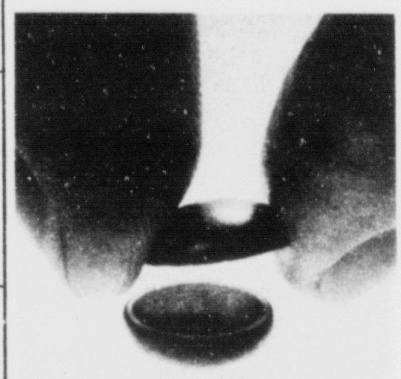
When inflammation, infection and swelling exist in hemorrhoidal tissues—it can be very painful for the sufferer. But there's an exclusive formulation which in many cases gives hours of relief from the burning itch and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues. It also helps shrink the swelling of such tissues. Sufferers are delighted at the way it acts so gently and is so soothing to sensitive tissues.

Tests by doctors on hundreds of patients reported similar successful results in many cases. And it was all done without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or stinging, smarting astringents of any kind.

You can obtain this same medication used in these tests at any drug counter. Its name is Preparation H. Preparation H® also lubricates to protect the inflamed, irritated surface area to help make bowel movements more comfortable. Be sure and try Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

The "two-together" laxative!

(It's made with smaller doses of two laxatives.)



Some single ingredient laxatives work on the "Sunday punch" theory. One big dose of a strong laxative that can knock your system for a loop.

Caroid & Bile Salts Tablets are made up of two separate laxatives that combine the surety of a strong laxative with the gentleness of a mild one.

Together they help ease you to regularity without sudden urgency upset.

And because the dosage is pre-measured, Caroid & Bile Salts Tablets are thorough and so predictable you can almost set your watch by them. Take two tablets at bedtime. Get a good night's sleep. And you can expect to be back on schedule in the morning.

Gentle Caroid & Bile Salts Tablets—the 'two-together' laxative—to help put your system back on schedule.

SID CAESAR
His hobby is war

QUOTE: Surprisingly, Sid Caesar's prime interest in life—aside from his work and his family—is war! "I read a lot and mostly books on war. It holds a tremendous fascination for me. I also have a terrific gun collection. What is there about war that fascinates me? You learn history from it. And about people. You begin to realize that while man has grown tremendously in his technology, he's never taken advantage of learning from the human side of it. The suffering. The misery. It interests me on various levels—like Stonewall Jackson using the same tactics first employed by Hannibal; technology and how it grew to the point where man has created the ultimate weapon; and most of all, how little man has learned about avoiding wars after having been involved in them throughout history." UNQUOTE.

Do young children have ESP? "All living organisms apparently have a capacity to sense certain kinds of signals sent out by other forms of life. These signals are most clearly felt in danger situations. In one plant experiment, a polygraph recorded a response from a common houseplant at the exact moment when some live shrimp were dropped into a pot of boiling water three rooms away. . . . The degree to which children possess this capacity is not really known, but it is probably a factor in the child's ability to know what the mother is thinking and feeling in many situations. Because language is a more efficient means of communication, this capacity becomes very much less used in later life, as do touch, sight, and sound methods. If you are angry or sad, children will almost certainly know it even if you try to hide it from them." From "Discipline Without Tyranny," by Loren Grey (Hawthorn Books, $4.95).

CINDY AND BILL SCHART
They wrote a letter

"I didn't mean to make this such a long letter," Cindy Schart wrote FAMILY WEEKLY, "but I did want you to know that it was your article that brought us our son, David Matthew Schart. I read in FAMILY WEEKLY [July 23, 1972] about a Vietnamese child adopted by a couple in the U.S. through Friends of the Children of Vietnam. My husband Bill, just returned from Vietnam and about to return to graduate school, and I, a teacher then working as a waitress, decided to write to Friends." Cindy and Bill—both 26—sought Divine Guidance in deciding to adopt. "You've got to believe what you're doing is right," Bill says. Cindy adds, "It takes patience and prayer—I prayed a lot." The Scharts are one of four families living at Chaco Canyon National Monument, where Bill is an archaeologist.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

SNACK THIEF

Alarms are put on safes and things,
And the alarm goes off and rings
When some outsider tries to enter
And force his way into the center.
Insiders, too, need an alarm
To keep their insides out of harm.
I mean a buzzer, bell, or siren
Or some device that you could wire in
To make a warning shriek and roar
On your refrigerator door.

The new secretary in our office doesn't follow the news too closely. She thought Wounded Knee was a movie starring Joe Namath. —Herm Albright

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

Kids see life differently. Send original contributions to "Child," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10022. $10 if used—none returned.

When I told our five-year-old son that he would soon be getting a new brother or sister, he literally jumped up and down with joy. Then he sobered abruptly and said, "You'll have to go to the hospital to get the baby, won't you?" I told him I would be gone for two or three days. He looked thoughtful for a moment and then brightened suddenly. "Let's let Daddy go and get it," he said.

He flashed the message, "Get out of my way. I'm a battleship."

Came the reply from the set of lights, "Get out of the way yourself. I'm a lighthouse." —Claudia E. Ruster
